

Mahmut the Surkishofy

Mahmut the Surkishofy

First Volume

LETTERS

Writ by a

Turkilh Spy.

Who lived Five and Forty Years Undiscover'd, at

PARIS:

Giving an Impartial Account to the Divan at Constantinople, of the most Remarkable Transactions of Europe; And discovering several Intrigues and Secrets of the Christian Courts (especially of that of France) continued from the Year 1637, to the Year 1682.

Written Originally in Arabick, first Translated into Italian, afterwards into French, and now into English.

The Sixth Coition.

LONDON,

Printed for Inleph Bindmarth, at the Golden Ball in Cornbill, and Richard Sare, at Gray's-Inn-Gate in Holborn, 1694.

×60-462 V.1

bcot

TO THE READER.

Here offer you a Book written by a Turk, whose Matter is as instructive and delightful, as the Manner of finding it was strange and surprizing.

I do not doubt but you would know where 'twas written; and perhaps, whether the Author be living; and whether you must expect a Romance or a real History. Hear then in short, what will fully satisfie you.

The Curiofity of seeing Paris, made a Man of Letters leave Italy in the Year 1682; where being arrived, he found such Diversions, as caused his stay longer than he intended.

Scarce had he been Two Months in Paris, when, by changing his Lodging, he discovered, by meer chance, in a Corner of his Chamber, a great heap of Papers; which seem'd more spoil'd by Dust than time.

He was at first surprized to see nothing but barbarous Characters, and was upon the Point of leaving them without any farther search, if a Latin Sentence, which he perceived on the top of a Leaf, had not retained him:

Ubi amatur, non laboratur; & si Laboratur, labor amatur.

The Surprize of the Italian was yet greater, when after having confidered these Characters with more Attention, he found them to be Arabick: which Language was not altogether unknown to him, which made him look narrowlier into them, where he found, That they treated of Affairs of State: That they contained Relations of War and Peace; and discoursed, not only of the Affairs of France, but of those of all Christendom, till the Year 1682.

The curious Italian was in no small Impatience, to know how, and where these Memorials had been writ, and by what adventure they came to lie so neglected in a Corner of his Chamber. But, before he further informed himself, he thought it expedient to transport these Manuscripts into another House, as a place of greater Security.

He afterwards questioned his Landlord with great Precaution, concerning the Papers; and he inform'd him even to the least Circumstances.

He told him, That a Stranger, who faid he was a Native of Moldavia, habited like an Ecele-fiastick, greatly Studious, of small Stature, of a very course Countenance, but of surprizing Goodness of Life, had lived long at his House. That he came came to lodge there in the Year 1664, and had staid Eighteen Years with him; that being gone abroad one day, he returned no more, and they had no certain News of him since. He was about Seventy Years old, had left Manuscripts, that no Body understood, and some Moneys, which was an Argument, that his Departure was not premeditated.

He added, That he had always a Lamp Day and Night burning in his Chamber; had but few Moveables, only some Books, a small Tome of St. Austin, Tacitus, and the Alcoran, with the Picture of Massaniello, whom he praised very much, calling him the Mofes of Naples. He faid further, That this Strangers greatest Friend, and whom he faw often, was a Man which most People took for a Saint, some for a 7em, and other suspected to be a Turk. According to the Landlord's Report, he came to Paris in the Year 1637. being then but Twenty eight Years of Age. At first he had lodg'd with a Flemming; he went oft to Court; Moneys never failed him; he had Friends, and passed for very Learned. As for his End, this Manthinks he died miserably; it being suspected that he had been thrown into the River.

i-

1-

f,

u-

eth

he

he

le-fa

d-

he

The Italian being sufficiently instructed by what he had heard, applyed himself to the Study of the Arabian Language; and as he had already some Knowledge in it, he quickly learnt enough to translate these Manuscripts, which he undertook a while after; and he examined with care the Truth of what the Moldavian had writ; confronting the Events he met, with the Histories of those Times; and to succeed the better, searched the most approved Memorials, having had Access into the Cabinets of Princes and their Ministers.

A 4

These Letters contain the most considerable Intrigues of the Court of France, and the most remarkable Transactions of Christendom, which have been sent to several Officers of the Ottoman Court.

By these may be known the Perspicacity of this Agent of the Turks; and by him the Prudence of those that command in that Nation, who chose (the better to penetrate into the Affairs of Christians) a Man, who could not be suspected by his Exterior; who was deform'd, but prudent and advised; and, for the better concealing him, destined his ordinary Abode in one of the greatest and most peopled Cities of Europe.

During his being at Paris, which was Forty Five Years, he has been Eye-witness of many great Changes; has seen the Death of Two great Ministers of State; has seen that Kingdom involved in War, without and within. He was scarce settled in Paris, but he was Witness to the Birth of a King, who surpasses those that preceded him; in a time, when the Queen's Barrenness, caused the King, her Husband, to despair of ever having a Son that should succeed him.

During the Course of so many Years, he hath seen Cities Revolt, and return again to the Obedience of their Sovereign; Princes of the Blood, make War against their King; and Queen Mary de Medecu, Wise, Mother, and Mother in law to some of the greatest Kings in Europe, die in Exile in Colone.

He speaks frankly of the Princes of Christendom, and explains his Sentiments with Liberty. He saith, The Emperor commands Princes, the King of Spain Men, and the King of France sees Men, and even Kings obey his Orders. He adds, That the First commands and prays, the Second sees oft times more effected than he commanded, and that the Third commands many brave Soldiers, and is well nigh obeyed by Crown'd Heads. There appears no Hate or Animosity in him, in what he writes against the Pope. In discoursing of the Emperor and King of Spain, he says, That both of them having Provinces of such vast Extent, they are not much concerned at the Losses they sustain.

He believed that England was more powerful than the Empire, and Spain at Sea. He apprehended more the Counsels of the Republicle of Venice, than their Arms. He magnifies what passed in the Wars of Candy, which the Venetians supported with so much Bravery against the Forces of the Ottoman Empire. The Genoeses with him are perfect Chymists. He speaks of the last Plague, and last War that this Commonwealth hath been afflicted with; he touches something of the late Conspiracy against this State by Raggi and Torne 3 and to shew, that he understood their History, he says somewhat of Vachero and Balbi-

Thou wilt see, Reader, by the Progress of the Work, what this secret Envoy of the Ottoman Port, thought of the other Princes of Italy, and those of the North: And I have drawn his Picture, because thou maist understand better what I give thee of him.

This Arabian (for he declares himself in his Writings, to have been of that Nation) having been As taken and made a Slave by the Christians, was brought into Sicily, where he applyed himtelf to Learning. He studied Logick in his Captivity, and applyed himself much to History; he overcame them by suffering with Patience the Blows of his Master, who often beat him for endeavouring to acquire those Lights, which this Brute had not. And finally, after much Labour, great Assiduity, and long Watchings, he came, as he writes himself, to understand Greek and Latin Authors; he had Commerce afterwards with the best Masters; and during his sojourning in the French Court, he joined Experience to the Knowledge he had acquired.

He explains himself nearly, and speaks of Things with great Frankness. His Style shews a great liberty of Spirit, and never Passion; and if it appear that he accommodates himself to the Fashion of the Court, one may see that it is not out of design to please, but that he wisely conforms himself sometimes to the Genius's of Nations.

Thou wilt find in his Letters Wit and Learning. If sometimes he appears tart, 'tis to shew his Vivacity, not disoblige; and he appears all over fully instructed in Ancient and Modern History. He is very reserved when he blames, and seems perswaded when he praises. When he speaks to the great Men of the Port, his Style is very grave; and he changes when he writes to meaner Persons. He never tells News that he is not assured of, nor thinks of divining Things that seem obscure to him.

He gives rare Lessons when he writes of the Revolutions of Catalonia, the Kingdoms of Naples, Portugal and England, which happened in our Days; with strange Circumstances, terrible Murders, and the Death of a Potent King, Martyr'd tyr'd by his own Subjects upon a Scaffold before his own Door.

He weighs much the Duke of Guise's hardy Refolution of going to Naples, to succour the Revolted there; and he reasons not as a Barbarian, but like an able Statesman, and wise Philosopher, on the Rise and Ruin of States. He always discourses with Liberty, and what he says, is filled with solid and agreeable Thoughts. He speaks sometimes of the Cruelty and Tyranny of the Turks, of the Violence of the Ministers of the Port, and upon the precipitated Death which many of the Sultans, Bash 2's and Viziers are forced to suffer. But this Language is only to his Friends and Considents.

However, though these Letters be neither Gree I nor Latin, nor written by a Christian, they contain nothing of Barbarous; and though the Ignorant bein great Numbers amongst the Turks, there are yet Men of great Understanding, that write the Annals of the Ottoman Empire, though they are not easily come by; for, their Books not being printed, they scarce ever reach us. We may notwithstanding believe, That amongst this Nation, that we term Barbarous, there are great and wise Captains, good Men, and learned Authors; as we have amongst us Generals without Conduct, stypocritical Votaries, and ignorant Fellows that pretend to be Masters.

To justifie what I affirm of the Turks, let us but consider their Victories, which have gained them so many Kingdoms, their Power at Sea, their Exactness to punish Crimes, and to reward Merit. As for Printing, they would never endure it amongst them. A Grand Vizier's Judgment of it was remarkable markabie, which shews rather their Prudence than any effect of their Ignorance. A samous Printer of Holland, by Religion a Jew, came to Constantinople, bringing Presses with him, with Characters of all Sorts of Idioms, particularly Arabick, Turk, Greek, and Persian Letters, with design to introduce the use of Printing into that great City. As soon as the Vizier was informed of it, he caused the Jew to be Hanged, and broke all his Engines, and Millions of Characters which he had brought; declaring, it would be a great Cruelty, that One Man should, to enrich himself, take the Bread out of the Mouths of Eleven Thousand Scribes, who gained their Livings at Constantinople by their Pens.

Peruse, Gentle Reader, what I offer, without fear of riring thy felf, or being deceived. Ciristian Authors think of nothing ordinarily, but of writing Panegyricks in hopes of Reward, we have reason to believe not to find all the Truth in their Works. Interest and Passion do often make good Princes pass for Tyrants, and unjust and cruel Princes, are sometimes transferred to Posterity for Models of Justice and Clemency. This occasions Histories which issue from so corrupt a Source, to ferve like a pitch'd Field for Modern Writers, where the one and the other combat for the destruction of Truth; the one falsly reporting what they have heard; and the other, by as badly representing the things they seem to witness. Most Princes will have their Altars, and then 'tis no wonder if there are Priests found to sacrifice to Falfhood, and Idolaters to deface the Statue of Truth.

There is no General that will not always seem Conqueror, and Princes never confess their Losses, which occasions a Confusion, and the Actions of Men do thereby become doubtful.

How

How many times have we seen both the Victors and Vanquished make Bonsires for their Successes? And, in our Days, we have known the French rejoyce, and the Spaniards and Germans sing their Te Deum for the same thing.

As we are, perhaps, now less just than in Ages past, it is distinct to write things as they are, particularly during the Lives of Princes; whose History cannot be writ without Fear, nor the Truth said without Danger. For these Reasons, we ought not to question the Credit of our Arabian, who reports with Liberty what came to his Knowledge: Besides, he being an Universal Enemy to Christianity, and a concealed one, neither disabliged or gained by any, and religiously true to his Prince, whom he adores as a Divinity; it cannot be imagined, that he says any thing for Fear or Favour.

As these Relations have been read with Attention and diligently examined, we may be assured of an exact History, abounding in considerable Events; and this History being separated into Letters as the Author writ them, the Reader may read them without repining. If he will not acknowledge the Translator's Pains, let him at least receive the Labours of a dead Man with Civility, one that never dreamt his Memorials would be printed, and that served his Master faithfully.

These Sentiments made him exactly follow that Sentence of St. Austin, found in the Front of his works:

Where Love is, there is no Labour, and if there be Labour, the Labour is loved.

The Translator hath thought fit to retrench some Ceremonies, and proud Titles of the Eastern People. What is represented here, is in a familiar Style, such as the Ancient Latins used in their Writings to their Consuls, Distators and Emperors themselves. And, if the Translation be not Elegant as the Arabick, do not accuse the Author, seeing it is not possible to reach the Force and Beauty of the Original.

Have moreover some Respect for the Memory of this Mahametan; for, living unknown, he was safe from the Insults of the Great Ones, so that he might write Truth without Danger, which ordinarily is disguised by Fear or Avarice, having still reported the Transactions of Christians, with no less Truth than Eloquence

If what I have said cannot satisfie the Curious, expect the rest of these Letters, which will be found sull of great Astions, Profitable Instructions, and good Morals. Thank God however, who raises Men that employ themselves in vanquishing Ignorance and Idleness. And in rendring Justice to Mahmut, a passionate Slave for the Interest of his Master and the Truth; have some Goodness for the Translator; who being born free, acknowledges no Master but God, his King and his Reason

A

TABLE

OF THE

LETTERS and MATTERS contained in this Volume.

BOOK I.

LETTER I.

Ahmut an Arabian, and the Grand Signior's
Vilest Slave to Hasnadarbass, Chief Treasurer to his Highness, at Constantinople. p. 1.

Of the Arrival of Mahmut at Paris. A Description of the Place. His Disguisement and Manner of living amongst the Christians.

II. To the same Hasnadarbassy.

of the Isles of St. Margaret and Honorar, taken by the Spaniards; and of the Archbishop of Bordeaux.

III. To Darnish Mehemet Bassa. 6
Touching the Te Deum, and the Rejoycings of the French, for the Villory of Leucate.

IV. To Isouf his Kinsman.

He exhorts him to love God, his Religion, and the Grand Signior.

V. To

V. To the Aga of the Janizaries.
Of the taking of Breda; of Marquiss Spinola. He exhorts him to read History.
VI. To Mehemet, an Eunuch Page of the Sultan Mother.
He recommends to him his Interests at the Port. Of a Prodigy which happened in Germany; and of an English Ship.
VII. To the Invincible Vizir Azew. 12 of the Queen of France's Barrenness. Of the Court, the Genius of the French, and Affairs of Africk,
VIII. To Muslu Reis Effendi, the Chief Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.
Of his manner of living, and of the Town of Paris.
XI. To the Mufti, Prince of the Religion of the Turks. 20
Touching Religion.
X. To the Kaimacham. 23
Of the Pictures of the King of France, Cardinal Richlieu, and Prince of Conde's Son. XI. To Bedredin, Superior of the Convent of the XI. To Bedredin, Superior of the Convent of the Dervices, of Cogny in Natolia. 26
Of the Conversation he had with a Jesuit, touching the Mahometan Religion.
XII. To Chiurgi Muhammet Bassa.
Of the Queen of France's being with Child.
XIII. To Carcoa, at Vienna.
He Sends him Three Pictures, and asks of him Necessaries.
XIV. To William Vospel, a Christian of Austria. 37 Touching the Death of his Wife, and on the Design
he had of retiring into a Convent of Carmelites.
XV. To Ibrahim, that renounced the Christian Religion
That one should not write Falsities touching Religion.
XVI.
AYI,

XVI. To Dicheu Huffein Bassa. 42
Of the everlasting Wars amongst Christians. Of Gustavus King of Swedeland, and Weymar's Victories.
XVII. To Ahmet Beig. 45
Of Italy; of the House of Savoy; and of the War which the Spaniards and French made in Piemont.
XVIII. To Mustapha Berber Aga. 48
Of the death of Marshal de Crequy; of Magick,
and of the Fort of Breme.
XIX. To Murat Bassa. 53
Of Madam de Savoy: the Cardinal de Valette.
Of Vercelle, and of the Duke of Rohan.
XX. To Dgnet Oglou. 57
Of his Captivity at Palermo, and his Employment.
XXI. To the Kaimacham. 63
Of Piemont; and of a Conspiracy discovered at Genoa.
XXII. To the same. 67
Of the Siege of Fontarabia. Of the Prince of Conde; and of the Loss of several Spanish Vessels.
XXIII. To Afis Bassa. 70
Of a Diet held at Stockholm, where 'twas determined to continue the War with Germany; and the French Defign on St. Omers.
XXIV. To the Kaimacham. 71
Of the French Armies; their Progress; and of Cardinal Richlieu.
XXV. To the same.
Of the Queen's drawing near her time; of Casimir taken Prisoner.
XXVI. To the fame. 75
Of the King of Poland's Travels into Hungary and Germany.
XXVII. To Kerker Hassan Bassa. 76
Of Amurath's Exploits on the Frontiers of Persia;
and of the Death of Two great Personages.
XXVIII.

THE THELL.
XXVIII. To the Kaimacham.
Of the Birth of the Dauphin,
XXIX. To the Capitan, or Captain Bassa. 82
Of a Sea-Fight between the French and Spaniards.
XXX. To the Captain Bassa. 85
Of the Galleys of Malta.
BOOK II.
LETTER I.
To the Captain Baffa. 87
Mahmut reproaches him with the Intelligence he held with the Emperor of Germany's Secretary.
Of the Galleys the Barbarians lost.
TIT To the fame
He discovers the Means of Surprizing Loretto.
IV. To the Kaimacham.
He discourses of the Ministers of Foreign Princes; and of the Affairs of Vallone and Loretto.
V To the same.
Touching the fetting at liberty the old Renegado Durlu.
VI. To the same.
Of the War of Piemont; Misfortunes of the Honse of Savoy; of the Duke of Saxony; of the ta- king of Brilac, by the Duke of Wimar.
king of Brisac, by the Duke of Wimar.
VII. To the same.
Of the Duke of Lorrain; Affairs of Germany, Swedeland, and Alsatia.
VIII. To Melec Amet.
Of the Disgrace of Strydia Bey; and of another Adventure.
1X. To the same.
Of a particular Accident that happened to a Son
that rejoiced at the News of his Father's Sickness.
X. To

9

s. 5

7

4

X. To Engurult Emin Cherg, a Man of the Law. 121
Of the King's Goodness to an ancient Father of a Family that would needs turn Souldier in his old Age, doc.
XI. To Cara Hali, a Physician. 125
Of the Mountains of Sicily and Naples, which cast forth perpetual Flames: Of the Nature of these Flames, and of their Effects.
XII. To the Venerable Mufri, &c. 129
On Religion; on some of his Scruples, and touching the Alcoran.
XIII. To the Kaimacham.
Of a Man that was fent as a Spy to the Court of Rome, by Cardinal Richlien; and of other Matters.
XIV. To Egry Boynou, the white Eunuch. 135
Touching the Life of Henry IV.
XV. To the Invincible Vizir Azem. 149
Mahmut's Conference with Cardinal Richlieu, touching the Affairs of Jerusalem.
XVI. To the same.
Of the Dauphin of France; and the Sultan's Voyage to Babylon.
XVII. To Bechir Bassa, Chief Treasurer to the Grand Signior. 156
Of a pleasant and dangerous Adventure which happened to Mahmut, and of the Jew Eliachim.
XVIII. To Carcoa of Vienna. 160 Mahmut fends word, that he has loft the Money he fent him, and how.
XIX. To Dgnet Oglou. 161
A Relation of the Life of Birkabeb; and of a Perfian Prince.
XX. To Egry Boynou, an Eunuch. 164
Remains of the Life of Henry the Great.

BOOK III.

LETTER I.

TO Muslu Reis Effendi, &c.	193
1 Of Assam Bassa of, Algiers; his Death,	and barbarous Sentiments in respect of his Slave	3.
II. To the Invincible Vizir Azem, at the Cam	o under Babylon.	195
Of the Memoirs which Mahmut gave to the
dinal Richlieu on the Lives of Illustrious Me	n.
III. To Lubano Abufei Saad, an Egyptian Knight	210
What Cardinal Richlieu did at a Ball.	,
IV. To Mehmet, an Eunuch Page.	211
Of the beginning of Mahmut's Sickness, and o	fthe
Cruelty of Amurath.
V. To Zelim of Rhodes, Captain of a Galley.	215
That a Man is parted exprestly from Legorn, t	o Aj-sassinate him at Constantinople.
VI. To the Invincible Vizir Azem, &c.	217
Of the Siege of Babylon.
VII. To the same.	220
of Brizac, Piemont, Italy, and Brandenbur
VIII. To Bedredin, Superior of the Dervises it	Na-
tolia.	224
IX. To Oucomiche, his Mother, at Scio.	225
Of his Sickness.
X. To Pesteli Haly his Brother.	227
Of his Sickness.	,
XI To Dgnet Oglou.	228
Of his Sickness, in a particular Style
XII. To the Kaimacham.	231
He discourses of the Dexterity of the Dwarf Of
and of the Embassador of Venice's Sollicit	ations
at Court, to induce the King to make War	with the Turks.
	XIII.

XIII. To Ifouf, his Kinsman. 235
He speaks of his Sickness; entreats him to give Alms
for his Recovery, and to pray to God for him.
XIV. To the Invincible Vizir Azem, &c. 236
A Relation of his Sickness, and of the Death of the Duke of Wimar.
XV. To the Kaimacham. 239
Of his Sickness and Cure. Of Germany and Italy;
and of a Sea-fight between the Dutch and French.
XVI. To Dgnet Oglou. 242
Of his perfect Cure; and of Friendship.
Of his perfect Cure; and of Friendship. XVII. To Adonai, a Jew, at Genoa. 244
He blames him for sending false News about the Genoeses to the Port.
XVIII. To the Kaimacham. 246
Of Turin; of the new invented Bullets; of the Affairs of Italy, and Spanish Fleet that was loft.
XIX. To Denet Oglou. 250
Of Mahmut's Amours, with a beautiful Greek.
XX. To the Invincible Vizir Azem. 257
Of a Chiaus from the Port, who came to Paris;
and touching the Affairs of Persia.
XXI. To Cara Hali, the Physician, &c. 260
He gives him an Account of his Recovery; of the violent Frosts at Paris, and Austerity of the Capuchins.
XXII. To the Kaimacham. 264
Of the Troubles in Spain, Catalonia and Portugal;
and a Description of the Revolt in Barcellona.
XXIII. To Dgnet Oglou. 268
Letter of Consolation, on the Fire at Constantinople.
XXIV. To the Captain Bassa of the Sea. 273
Of the Vessels of Africk, taken by the Christians;
and of the Knights of Malta.
XXV. To the Invincible Vizir Azem. 275
A Description of the Revolution of Portugal.
XXVI. To Enguril Emir Cheik, &c. 287
Of the Death of Amurach IV. Of the new Sultan
Ibrahim; and of the Affairs of the Seraglio.
BOOK

BOOK IV.

LETTER I.

EBIIER I.
O the Venerable Mufti, &c.	9
of Cardinal Richlieu, his Craft and Police	y.
II. To the Reis Effendi, &c.	9
Of a Conspiracy discovered at Paris against Car nal Richlieu.	di
Try market Walnut all and
III. To the Kaimacham.	97
of Julius Mazarin, and his Negotiation in S	ba-
IV. To Dgnet Oglou.	00
A particular Description of the Greatness of the Si	02-nish Monarchy.
we be the fundamental official design	03
of the Battle of Sedan; Of Count Soisson's Dean	b.
and Conspiracy against the Cardinal.	,
T- C. Lun his Country	9
. Mahmut complains of his Perfidicusness.	/
* T D 0-1	12
Against the Infidelity and Inconstancy of the beaut	tiful Greek.
manage for a vy'	6
He informs him of the Receipt of his Letter, wi
the Money and Balm of Mecha.
IX. To Berber Mustapha Aga, &c. 31	7
Of the Duke of Lorrain; the Lofs of his Country	/:
and of the King of France's Indignation.	,
X. To Bedredin, Superior of the Dervises, &c. 32	2
On his own Age, and of a Man that lived 12	0
Tears,	7
XI. To the Redoubtable Vizir Azem. 32	-
On the Life and Death of General Bannier; an	3 Imprisonment of Dom Duartus, Brother to the new King of Portugal.	6
are a relief of a reference

XII. To

THE LADE
XII. To the Kaimacham.	328
Of the Parliament of Paris; and	Affairs of Ca-
talonia.	.,
XIII. To the venerable Mufti, &c.	331
Of Cardinal Richlieu, and the Calu	imnies published
against him, touching bis Design	of making himfelf Patriarch of France.
XIV. To Oucoumiche his Mother, &	c. 333
Letter of Consolation, on the Deat	h of her second
Husband; that the Countess of So	isons has greater cause of Trouble for the Death o	f her Son.
XV. To the Grand Seignior's Chief T	reasurer. 238
of the Disgrace of the Archbi	hop of Bourdeaux.
XVI. To the Kaimacham.	339
On the Imprisonment of Count All	ie, apprehended
at Turin, by Richlieu's Order.
XVII. To the Reis Effendi.	342
of a Spaniard found dead in Paris,	who had in his Pocket a Catalogue of all the great	at Lords, whom
Cardinal Richlieu caused to be d	estroyed.
XVIII. To William Vospel.	343
of his Retirement from the World;	on Thieves, and the Invention of Keys.
XIX. To the Venerable Mufri.	347
Of Cardinal Richlieu, and what he	did in respect
of a General of Dervises, and of	the great News brought him.
XX. To the Kaimacham.	350
of the Books of Geber; and of C	nymiltry.
XXI. To Mehemet, an Ennuch Page.	358
What Cardinal Richlieu did again,	It the Queen of France, and of his Ambition.
XXII. To the Kaimacham.	360
of Dom Sebastian, King of Port	ugal, who died
in Africk; and of bim that t	ook on him that Name.
XXIII. To the Musti.	365
	Of

Of a Mule laden with Gold, which Cardinal Richlien fent to an unknown Person in a Wood. XXIV. To Berber Mustapha Aga. 366 Description of Duels; of a Bill of Desiance which the Duke de Medini Coeli, sent to Dom John of Braganza, the new King of Portugal.

XXV. To the Invincible Vizir Azem. Of a new Conspiracy discovered at Lisbon, against the new King of Portugal.

LET-

:h-

66 ich of

71 nst

1-

THE

Eight Volumes

OF

LETTERS

Writ by a

Turkilh Spy.

Who lived Five and Forty Years, Undiscover'd, at

PARIS:

Giving an Impartial Account to the Divan at Constantinople, of the most Remarkable Transactions of Europe; And discovering several Intrigues and Secrets of the Christian Courts (especially of that of France) from the Year 1637, to the Year 1682.

Written Originally in Arabick, Translated into Italian, from thence into English. And now Published with a Large Historical Preface and Index to Illustrate the Whole: By the Translator of the First Volume.

LONDON, Printed for D. Rhodes at the Corner of Bride-lane in Fleet-freet, J. Dind-marsh over against the Royal Exchange in Cornbill, and M. Dare at Grays-Inn-Gate in Holborn, 1694.

clumes rd Cada and James 1 and a second

A

a loans Places, with his frequent for

General Preface

To the WHOLE.

Efides the Prefacer already affix'd to each Single Volume of these Letters; which contain Particular Answers to the Objections and Cavils of some, with Solutions of the Scruples and Doubts made by others: As likewise Critical Explanations of Passages seeming obscure to all, in the English Translation of our Spy; it is thought necessary to prefix something more by way of General Preface, not so much regarding the Translation, as the seeming Original Abruptness and Obscurity of our Arabian Author Himself (a) 2

in some Places, with his frequent Change of Subjects, his Digressions and Startings from Matter of Fact, the then present Wars, Transactions, and Intrigues of Christian Courts, States, and Kingdoms, (for which he was chiefly sent to Paris) and his Immethodical falling upon Philosophical, Divine; and Moral Contemplations, and even to Ancient, Obsolete Histories, which some think were altogether Foreign to his Business.

That the Ingenuous Reader therefore may not henceforward be left in the Dark as to any Thing exhibited in the whole Series of these Letters; it will not be amiss to begin regularly at the First Volume, and say something of the Wars in which our Spy sound several Nations of Europe engaged, at his first coming to Paris; especially France, Spain, and the Empire.

After the Barbarous Regicide of Henry the Great; the Name and Malice of what they call'd the Holy League, feem'd to be quite extinguish'd, as if that deplorable Tragedy had fully fatisfatisfied the Cruel and Bitter Zeal of the Factious Catholicks. France feem'd to enjoy a ferene Quality, and Halcyon Days, from the Year 1610, to 1614. Fortune smiling on the Greener Years of Lines XIII. as loth to disturb and ruffle the Tender Passions of the Royal Child, with the Hansh Sound of War, foreseeing that he wou'd quickly have epough of that, even in his early Youth, before, he cou'd write Man, unless he had been a King.

During this Minority of his, the Guardianship of him, and the Regency of the Kingdom, were committed to the Queen Mother , Mary de Medicis; Daughter to the Great Dake of Tufcany, This Princefs had brought into France a Favourite of hers, a Florentine by Birth and Extraction, whom the exalted afterwards to great Dignities, procuring him to be made a Marshal of the Kingdom. and to be invested with so exorbitant a Power at the Court, that the Princes of the Blood, with the other Grandees of France, began to look with an ill Eye on him , being quite difgusted at :aft Source , Et(A) the Frince et Con le the too portentous Authority of a Stranger.

Therefore in the Year 1614. they openly shew'd their Discontent by taking up Arms, raising Seditions, Tumults, and Infurrections, which lafted till the Year 1616, at which time the King was married to Anne, the Daughter of Philip III. King of Spain, whilst an interchangeable Match was made between the Young Prince of Spain, Son to the faid Philip, and Elizabeth, Sifter to Lewis XIII. Thus these Two Potent Monarchs bound themselves to each other, as the World judg'd, in streighter Obligations of Peace and Friendthip, by the Sacred Bonds of Matrimony, and a reciprocal Union of their Blood. Which was also accompanied with the Bleffing of an Universal Domestick Tranquility, and Cessation from Civil Broils in France ; Henry de Bourbon, Prince of Conde, and the Rest of the Consederate Princes being reconcil'd, in all outward appearance, to the King, their Soveraign. But, on a sudden, new Jealousies arising, about the Beginning of September, 1616, the Prince of Conde was seiz'd and clapt up. And Declarations of War publish'd against the Princes, his Confederates. Yet this was all hush'd up again, and a Peace made the following Year, upon the Death of the Marshal & Ancres, the fore-mention'd Florentine, and Favourite of the Queen, who was kill'd in the Louvre, by the King's own Command; in that when they were going to arrest him, he offer'd to draw his Sword in his Desence.

Was

The Fall of this Italian feem'd now to pacifie all Malecontents. But the Queen taking it to Heart, retir'd from the Court. Which gave occasion to the King to assume the Publick Administration of the Government into his own Hands. And a while after, he releas'd the Prince of Conde from his Confinement.

Much about the fame Time, there broke forth Civil Wars among the Grisons, upon the account of Religion. For, the Catholicks and Protestants continually vex'd one another with mutual Injuries; and engag'd the Kings of (a) 4 France

France and Spain in their Quarrel: So that the Arms of these Two Kingdoms were employ'd against each other on a foreign Account, for many Years.

In the mean while, the Duke of Luines fucceeding the Marshal d'Ancres, in the Prime Ministry of France: The Princes and Nobles conceiv'd as great a Diflike and Hatred of his Power at the Court, as they had before done of the others. So that, in fhort, they took up Arms alfo, and gave the King no small Trouble, who was at the same Time molested by the Factious Attempts of the Queer-Mother's Party. But, by the Affiftance and Counfel of the Prince of Conde, who now prov'd faithful and ferviceable to him; he suppress'd all his Domestick Enemies, and restor'd Quietness in France; the Queen-Mother also and her Party being reconcil'd to him.

Things remain'd in this Posture, till the Duke of Rhoan, and his Brother, Monsieur Soubize, rais'd new Commotions in the Kingdom. The Rochellers at the same Time took up Arms in Defence of their Religion, and called in the English to their Assistance ; who fent a Navy of a Hundred and Twenty Ships, under the Command of the Duke of Buckingham; but all to no. Effect. For, though the English landed in the Isle of Rhee, after many sharp Conflicts; yet they were foon expell'd again, and a long Siege laid to Rockel, under the Conduct of Cardinal Richlien, and the Marshal de Schomberg, who reduc'd that Cisy to the King's Obedience, ras'd the Walls, and left it as open as a Village, that it might be a Terrour and Example to others; teaching them, rather to confider in the Clemency and Faith of their Soveraign, than to try, the Force of his Arms. This was done in the Year 1628. From which time the Rebels, as it were by strife, return'd to their Duty, feeking who. shou'd be most forward in testifying their Obedience to the King, and their Repentance for what was pall. Thes was Peace once more reftor'd to France. at Home; that the King might have the more leisure to prosecute the War. in Italy: Whither he led his Victorious Army, taking many Towns in his Way to Cafela (a) 5

Cafal, which he hasten'd to relieve, it being at that Time besieg'd by Spinola the Spanish General. In a Word, he came within sight of the very Walls, and so near to the Spaniards, that both Armies were ready to engage, when Mazarini (afterwards made Cardinal) ran between, and reduc'd them to Terms of Peace.

A while after this, a Peace was concluded between the Emperour, and the Duke of Mantua; the latter having the Possession of Manua, Montferrat, and other Places, tonsirm'd to him by an Imperial Decree. But, as if Fate had ordain'd. That the Arms of France thould not ruft, or be long kile; but that they shou'd be constantly kept in Exercise, by equal Vicissitudes of Foreign and Domestick Wars; no sooner was this Peace concluded, which gave fome respite to the French abroad, when new Stirs arose at Home; occafion'd first through some Misunderstandings between the Queen-Mother and Cardinal Richlieu. Which afterwards were improv'd into open Hatred and Enmity; the Queen-Morber having drawn into into her Party the Duke of Orleans, Brother to the King: a Man who had conceiv'd an Irreconcilable Aversion for that Potent Minister. Till at length Things coming to an Inevitable Rupture at the Court, the Queen-Mother sled privately into Flanders, and the Duke of Orleans into Lorrain; from whence he afterwards follow'd her into Flanders also.

The next Year he rush'd into Danphine wich a Confus'd Army, and the Duke of Montmorency came over to his fide. Who being Governour of that Province, brought great Forces with him, and gave new Courage to the Invaders. Infomuch as they enter'd Battel with the Marshal de Schomberg, General of the King's Army. The Fight was short and bloody, wherein the Rebels were routed, having lost many of their Principal Leaders on the Spot; whilst the Duke of Montmorency was taken Prisoner, and afterwards beheaded, by Sentence of the Parliament This concluded the Year 1832. But the Duke of Orleans did not return to his Duty till the Year 1634. From

From which Time the Kingdom of France was still by various Turns kept in an Active Posture, either of Desence or Offence; partly by Domestick Factions, and partly by Foreign Engagements of Allies or Enemies, even to the Time of the Turkish Spie's Arrival at Paris, which was in the Year 1637.

I pass over these Three last Years, before his coming to Paris, with the more Brevity, that there may be Room. to fay fomething of the other Wars in which Europe had all along been equally. engag'd, from the Murder of Henry the IV. or thereabouts, to the same Year 1637. and this shall be done as concifely as may be, That fo the Reader may have the clearer Idea and Understanding of what our Spy entertains him with, in the Course of his First Letters, to the Year 1643. when Lewis XIV, the present King of France began his Reign. Whose Life and Actions gave an immediate Turn to all Affairs, both in his own Dominions and the other Nations of Encope.

Tob Wit while while

In the Year 1610. The Town of Gulick in the Netherlands was furrender'd to Prince Maurice of Nassau, after many Princes had claim'd it, upon the Death of Duke John William, who left no Heirs of his Body. And Prince Maurice himself was oblig'd to the French, for their Aid in obtaining it. About the same Time, the Moors were expell'd out of Spain, to the Number of Nine Hundred Thousand. Of which our Spy takes Notice in some of his Letters.

In the Year 1611. Sigismund King of Poland took Smolenske, a very strong Town of the Moscovites, after Two Year's Siege. Whose Son Vladislaus, the Moscovites choic for their Duke or Czar. Of which repenting in a little Time, there broke forth a Bloody War in those Parts.

The same Year died Charles the King of Swedeland, being succeeded by his Son Gustavus; thô some endeavour'd to transfer the Crown to Sigismund King of Poland.

In the Year 1612. died Rodolph, Emperour of Germany, who was succeeded by Marchine, his Brother. A while after this, the Venerians made War upon Ferdinand, Arch-Duke of Austria, Son of the Arch-Duke Charles, who was Brother to the Emperour Maximilian II. This War lasted to the Year 1618. at which Time it was finished.

In the mean while the War between the Dukes of Manna and Savoy broke forth about the Principality of Monsferrat. It was occasion'd by the Death of Francis, Duke of Manna; who leaving no Male-Issue behind him, Cardinal Ferdinand his Brother, under the Protection of the King of Spain, took Possession of that Principality, which he defended by Arms against Charles Philibert, Duke of Savoy. This War also lasted to the Year 1618, at which Time it was ended by the powerful Intervention of the French King.

About this Time there broke out a most Cruel War in Germany, on this Occasion. Ferdinand, Aich Duke of Austria, and King of Bohemia, received also also from the Emperor Matthias, the Kingdom of Hungary on certain Conditions. Which Conditions seeming disadvantageous to the Protestants, they made an insurrection first at Prague in Bohemia, where they kill'd the Magistrates, and then they were soon followed by all Bohemia and the adjoining Provinces; who took up Arms against the King, under the Conduct of Ernest Mansfeli, and other Grandees.

y r

In the Year 1619. Matthias the Emperor died, whom Ferdinand the aforefaid King of Bobemia and Hungary succeeding, prosecuted the War very vigorously against the Rebels. In the mean while they chose for King of of Bohemia, Frederick, Elector Palatine of the Rhine, who had married the Lady Elizabeth, Daughter to James I. King of England. He with his new Queen were the fame Year folemnly Crown'd at Prague: and the Year following, their Forces being routed by the Emperor, they themselves were forc'd to fly into Holland, where they led a private Life ever afterwards. In the mean while, Bohemia, with the other revolting Provinces.

vinces, return'd to their Obedience. And this was thought to be a Leading Card to the Religion War, which about the fame Time was rais'd among the Grifons: Of which mention is made above. Nay, and the same is suppos'd to have Influence on the Commotions rais'd by the Huguenots, inhabiting the Foot of the Pyrenees, against whom Lewis XIII. made a successful Expedition in the Year 1620. reducing the greatest Part of that Province to their Duty and Allegiance: thô the following Year gave him some fresh Trouble, and the Loss of many Great Nobles: among whom were the Duke of Mayne, Governor of Guienne; and the Dake of Luines, First Minister of State.

About the same time died Pope Paul V. being fucceeded by Gregory XV. who fate in the Chair but Two Years and a few Months, when dying he lefe it to Urban VIII.

In the Year 1624. Breda was befieg'd by Spinola the Spanish General, and furrender'd in 1625. In the mean while, Count Mansfelt infested Germany with .

with frequent Excursions, being got at the Head of a bold Army of Free-booters; but at length he was defeated by Tilly, a brave and expert General on the Imperial side. Then he was forced to sly for Sanctuary into Transylvania; and from thence going to Venice, he died in the Year 1626.

gh gel

All these Things our Spy glances at in his Letters, but with some Abruptness and Obscurity: Which renders him scarcely Intelligible in those Places, to such as know not the History. 'Tis for this Reason we are at the Pains of giving a Compendious View of the Wars and Transactions in Europe, before his coming to Paris.

Therefore to proceed; Gustavus King of Suedeland, came out of his Territories in the Year 1630, and enter'd Pomerania with a Mighty Army. From whence and from all the adjacent Provinces, he drove the Imperialists. In the Year 1631, he enter'd the more interiour Parts of the Empire, taking Innumerable Towns, and filling all Places with Terror. And this he did under pretext pretext of vindicating the Evangelicks or Protestants. In vain did Tilly, the General of the Catholicks, oppose him. All that he could do, was to burn Magdeburgh to Ashes.

After which the Protestant Princes held a Diet or Assembly at Leipsick, where they enter'd into a Consederacy against the Emperor, joining their Forces with those of Gustavan. Against these Tilly march'd with General Papenheim, and laid close Siege to Leipsick; which they were forc'd to surrender upon Conditions.

After this, the King of Swedeland, the Duke of Saxony, with the other Confederate Princes, took to the Field: and there was a Terrible Fight between them and the Imperialifts at Leipsick, whose Consequence prov'd fatal to the latter. For Tilly having lost Ten Thousand of his Men, was forc'd to fly himself; Whilst Leipsick sell into the Hands of the Duke of Saxony. This Victory opened a clear Way for the King of Swedeland to over-run all Germany. So that having taken Wirtzberg, he soon reduc'd

ichs

he

m.

rn

re

ft

h

ydy

reduc'd all Franconia or Frankenland: after that Mentz, with other Provinces; spreading like a Fire, or a Deluge of Water. In the mean while, the Duke of Saxony invaded Bohemia; and took Prague, the Capital City of that Kingdom. In a Word, so General was the Consternation throughout the Empire, that some Princes to divert the Storm which they saw hanging over their Heads, had Recourse to the Protection of the King of France; who accordingly by his Mediation skreen'd them from Violence; especially the Archbishop of Triers or Treves.

In the Year 1632. the King of Smeden pursu'd the Course of his Victories; ravaging without stop or opposition, through Assaira, Bavaria, and other Parts, still taking Towns and strong Holds, silling all Places also with Ruin and Desolation. At length passing the Danube, he routed Tilly once more, with all his Army, who died soon after of a Wound he receiv'd in the Battel.

Walstein was streight substituted in his Place, who recover'd Prague in Bo-many Conflicts and Skirminhes he encounter'd the King of Swedeland at Lucture, a Town not far from Leipfick. This Battel prov'd fatal to Gustavus, for in it he lost his Life, and not long after him, General Papenheim on the German Side.

The same Year Sigismund King of Poland dying, his Son Uladiflam fuci ceeded in the Throne. The Swedes were not the least discouraged from profecuting the War, by the Death of their King; but whereas before they fought for Conquest and Liberty, now they feem'd to fight for Revenge. Chrifina, the Daughter of Guffavin Adolphia, was foon fet upon the Throne of Smeden. After this there was a Diet held at Francfort, confisting of Swedes and Saxons. Then there was another affembl'd at Hailbrun. And in the Year 1634. The States of Saxony met at Halberstadt, to consult about their own Safety. Much about the same Time happen'd the Sieges of Rarisbonne, and Norlingen. This Year was Noted with Tragical Characters, on the Account of the er

かん

4

B

of 4

23

n

f

y

1

1

the great Desolation made in the Provinces lying on the Rhine, by War, Perfilence, and Famine: Where People were reduc'd to those Streights, as to seed on Humane Flesh, and to do other Things, which will scarce now seem Credible.

The next Year 1635. seem'd to give a New Turn to the Affairs in Germany. For the Duke of Saxony, Brandenburgh, and Lunenburgh, having had a Treaty at Prague in Bobemia, came over to the Emperour's Party. Yet the Swedes still pursu'd the War.

The Two following years, were remarkable for the Election of Ferdinand III. who was chosen King of the Romans 1636, and succeeded his Father in the Empire 1637, as also for the Irruption made by Galassio, General of the German Forces in France: Which was attended with Various Events on both Sides: Till at length toward the End of 1637, Galassio return'd with his Army into the Empire again. The same Year before, there was a Notable Sea-Fight between the Spaniards and Hollanders.

ders. Prince Maurice overcame the Portugueze in Brasil, and took from them Immense Riches. The Prince of Orange besieg'd Breda, and took it: The same Year died Bolislam, the last Duke of Pomerania. Much about the same Time, the Pope earnestly exhorted the Princes of Europe to establish a General Peace.

Such was the Face of Things in Chriftendom, when this Turk first came to Paris: and it is evident that the Scenes were often chang'd in the Course of those former Years, which I have here recounted. And so they have been ever fince: Which was the True Reason of that Variety of Subjects, with which our Author abounds. In some Letters giving an Account of Battels, Sieges, and other Events of Campaigns; gloffing also and descapting on the Good Conduct or Overfights of Great Generals; on the Valour of Famous Captains, and, in General on the Fortune of War. In others he treats of Court-Intrigues, Junto's of Politicians, and Subtle Proposals of Statelmen.

2

.

C

os f

Again, when he writes to his Intimate Friends, he either entertains them with Melancholy Complaints of his Long Absence from Constantinople, and his Native Country; with the Inconveniences, Miseries, Hazards, and Hardships, that attend it; or else diverts them with some tristing Discourse, Comical Story, or something very unusual, surprizing, and strange.

In Time of War, he feems to be a curious Engrosser of the Earliest and Choicest News. In Time of Peace he watches the Motions of Cardinal Richlieu, Mazarini, Olivarez, and other Great Ministers of State. For this End he had his Agents about in every Corner of the Court of France, besides his Intelligencers at Vienna, Venice, or some other City of Europe.

But give him leave sometimes to lay aside the Cares and Busie Toils of Life. And wonder not, if he seem in some of his Letters, very Melancholy; in others, of a contrary Humour, chearful and frolicksom: For these Unevennesses of Temper happen to every Man.

You

You shall hear him sometimes wishing himself in the Pyramids of Egypt, confin'd and enclos'd within those Antique Piles; a Companion of Ghosts, and Devils, rather than lead the Life he did in Paris. When at another Season, you shall find him all over content, and Refignation it felf in the Abstract. mical Story, or come

Besides, the Difference of his Years ought to be consider'd; which at the Climatterical Periods, are observ'd to alter Men's Spirits as well as their Bodies. So that 'tis no Wonder, if in the Course of Five and Forty Years, which he past'd away at Paris, both his Genius and Conversation may seem to Vary at some Critical Seafons; through the Natural Force of Time, and the Change of the Elements, of which his Body was compounded: As he himself in his Letters' makes the same Apology.

Add to all this, his daily Improvements by Observation, Experience, Reading, Meditating, Converse, and Habitual Engagements in the World? For which Reason alone, it would be unequal to expect the fame Method of USY

Writing

0 b

W 2

i

ti

tl

C El

b

ti

2

67

I

h

O

8

n

O

a

nJ

le

eid

u

ers

ne

1-

3.

fe

d

ne

al

ne

72

e-

e,

d.

II-

of

ng

Writing from him, either as to Sense or Style, Matter or Form, when he was but Thirty or Forty Years Old; as when he was Threescore, or Threescore and Ten. Most of the Famous Writers in the World, have not only changed the Opinions which they harbour'd in their Greener Years; but before they came to the Age of our Spy, some of them have Publickly Recanted them, both with their Tongue and Pen. Neither is it a Shame to any Man, so long as the Old Axiom is true; Humanum est errare; at Errores felicitin retrastare, verè Divinum.

Neither cou'd our Spy, considering his Education in the Mahametan Religion, take a properer Method, in my Opinion, to disengage himself from the Legends of the Nursery, and the Fables of the Schools, (as a Great Man calls our Infant Idea's of Things) than to follow the Counsel of his beloved Des Cartes, the French Philosopher, whom he so much admir'd; and who advises every one that wou'd perfect his Reason, and arrive at the Knowledge of Undisquifed Truth, Toshake off the Preposies.

fions and Prejudices of his Infancy and Youth; to wipe, brush, or sweep his Soul clean of the very Dust and Relicks left behind on our Faculties, by those First Foreign Invasions and Encroachments on our Minds. Having thus cleans'd and polish'd the Soul, it becomes a Pure Tabula Rafa, fit for the beft or worst Impressions. And here's the First Start of the Free-Will: For, before this, a Man is a perfect Slave, driven up and down by every Spirit that blows ftrongest on him. Whereas, now he begins to feel fome Strength and Consistence in himself: Being able to fay with Interiour and Solid Reason; Cogito, ergo fum. Fixing therefore on this Foundation, he builds a Fortress, or Strong Hold, from whence he defies all the Attempts of open Enemies, or fly Secret Interlopers; neither permitting himself to be debauch'd by the Profanenels of Libertines and Atheifts, nor by the Ridiculous Enthusiasms of Fanaticks and Zealors. This is the Courfe which our Twk feems to have taken with himfelf. when he once arriv'd at those Years, wherein Men usually begin to examin the Grounds of Religion, and bring the Docu-

d

is

KS

fe

h-

US

e-

he

e's

or,

7e, rit

as,

nd

n;

on

or

all fly ing

ne-

the

and

our

elf,

ars, min

the

OCN-

Documents and Traditions of their Fathers to the Test of Sense and Reason. 'Tis no wonder therefore, if in some Letters to his Familiar and Intimate Friends, he discourses of such Matters with more Freedom, than when he writes to the Musici, the Musici's Vicar, the Preachers of the Seraglio, or any of the Grandees. Yet even to these he makes bold sometimes to propose Queries, and start scruples; which plainly discover, that he was not fully satisfied in many Principles and Practices of the Mahometans.

On the other Hand, when he writes to the Jew, his Correspondent at Vienna, he endeavours to reclaim him from a too fond and Implicit Confidence in the Hebrew Rabbi's, whom he calls Religious Triflers, ridiculing their Fables and vain Infirmions; and perswading his Friend not to be over Pious, but to attend the Affairs of his Employment with Alacrity, and to be zealous in the Grand Signior's. Service. He likewise frequently explodes the Vanity and Superstition of some fort of Christians, with some Tartness indeed, but free from all Ill-Nature and Bitterness, every where speak-(b) 2 ing ing honourably of Christ Jesus our Biessed Saviour; only condemning the Vices and Errors of his Followers. Which last is no more, than what would become a Christian Divine; whose Duty it is, to reprove and correct whatsoever he sees amis in those that profess the Christian Faith.

In General, he appears a Man void of Superstition and Bigottry. And if he seems Partial, or Byas'd any Ways, it is in the Point of Abstinence from Flesh, and the Dostrine of Transmigration. Whereby we may conclude he was a Pythagorean, which is no new or uncommon Thing among the Turks; there being a particular Sest of Mahometans, wholly devoted to the Rules of that Philosopher; and it is well known, that Pythagorism is in great Reputation all over the East.

Hence we need not wonder, that he appears so much enamour'd with the Indian Gentiles, who are the strictest Observers of Abstinence, and of the whole Pythagorean Discipline, of any People

F

People in the World, as all our Modern Travellers can testifie.

ef-

es

to es

án

of

he

it

b.

n.

a

D-

re

5.

at

at 11

Œ

e y t

Tho' he cannot be call'd an Antiquary, yet he appears a great Lover of Antiquities; and no less an Admirer of New Discoveries; provided they be both of them Matters of Importance. and worth a Wife Man's Regard. For it does not belong to either of thefe Characters, that a Man is a Curious Collector of Medals, Images, Pictures, and a Thousand other infignificant Trifles, which can neither ferve to Hlustrate History, Regulate Chronology, or Adjust any Momentous Difficulty in the Records of Time; but are only Reverenc'd for their Rustiness, Illegible Characters, and Exotick Figure: Nor that he is fond of every little Improvement in Arts or Sciences, which perhaps has no other Tendency than the Advantage of some Particular Trade or Profession among Men, and serves only to divert the Mind from more Solid Objects. Whereas, our Arabian aspires at Higher Things: He loves Antiquities. but 'tis only fuch as draw the Veil from off the Infancy of Time, and uncover the (6) 3 Cradle:

Cradle of the World. This makes him infift with so much Zeal and Passion, on the Records of the Chinese and Indians. He admires New Discoveries, but only such as shall either conduct us to the yet Unknown Parts of the Earth; or present us with a Truer and more perfect Scheme of the Heavens, than what was before extant: As may be seen by his Letters to Osman Adrooneth, Astrologer to the Sulvan, Vol. viii. Book iv. p.268. and to Abdel Melec Muli Omar, President of the College of Sciences at Fez; Vol. viii.

Book iv. p. 336.

He often praises and recommends the Reading of History to his Friends: And throughout the Course of these Letters, gives sufficient Proofs, that he is no Stranger to it. Which yet need not be laid to his Charge, as if he affected to be thought a Knowing Man; or that he spent his Time in Studies Foreign to his Employment. For he began to read Histories, as he himself declares, long before he came to Paris, as foon as he was released from his Captivity in Pa-Aermo in Sicily, and had Access to the Academies. Which makes it no Woneder, that he should employ his Vacant Honrs

Hours in the Libraries of Paris, after he came thither; being a very Inquisitive Man, and Greedy of Knowledge. Besides, he was Commanded by his Superiors thus to improve himself, and to transmit the Abstracts of what he Read, to Constantinople: Which is a sufficient Excuse for All.

It only remains now, that we touch upon some Transactions of the East, as we have already done upon those in the West: That so the Reader, who perhaps has not the Leisure to peruse the Turkish History, may the better understand some Pallages in these Letters relating thereto.

Our Spy was born in the Reign of Sultan Achmet; during whose Life, he being but a Youth, it will be to no purpose to recount what happen'd in those Parts, or between that Monarch and the Christians.

Achimet dying, was succeeded by Mufrapha; his Brother: Of whom our Author makes some Mention; as of his. throwing Gold to the Fishes of the Sea;

and of the Cruelty of Sultan Amurath IV. in causing him to be Strangled. Indeed, he was a Prince who made so small and contemptible a Figure in the World, That few Historians take any other Notice of him, than as a Man more sit for a Convent, than for a Royal Palace.

Therefore he being Depos'd, and Remanded to his Former Prison, where he had spent his Youth; Ofman, the Son of Achmet, was plac'd in the Throne of his Fathers. He Renewed the Ancient Leagues, which had been made between his Ancestors and several Christian Princes ; wrote Letters to James I. King of England, and Lewis XIII. King of France, Aided the Emperour of Germany against the Hungarians, Bobehemians, and other Rebels. But at length entring into a War with Poland, his Army was beaten. From which Time his Affairs began to decline. And the next Year giving out that he would make a Pilgrimage to Mecca, he was Strangled by the Janizaries, who fuspected that he design'd to abolish their to control of ros plan . Order.

Order, and alter the Confishmion of the Empire.

-

eynd

9

e

1

n

1

Then Mustapha was taken out of his Prison again, and the second Time plac'd in the Throne. Who soon after experienc'd the Mutability of Fortune, in that he was again laid aside; and Amurath, the Brother of Osman, Establish'd in his stead.

This Amurath was a very Warlike Prince, and esteem'd the stoutest Man of his Age. He had not long Sway'd the Octoman Scepter, when the Persians came and Befieg'd Bagdat, or Babylon, which they took from the Turks. Then the Coffacks, with the Inhabitants of the Ukrain, gave him some Diversion, making violent Incursions into the Turkish Territories, and laying all Waste where-ever they came. However, the Sultan regarded the Persian War with most Concern. He fent an Army toward Babylon, in the Year 1626. who were defeated by the Perfians; Twenty Thousand Turks being kill'd upon the Spot. This was reveng'd afterwards, by the Slaughter of (6) 5. Thirty ?

Thirty Thousand Persians. Then follow'd the Siege, or rather Blockade of Babylon by the Turks.

A while after this, happen'd that dreadful Fire at Constantinople, which consumed a Third Part of the City. Of which our Spy makes mention in some of his Letters; especially to his Friend Dgnet Oglow, who had suffered igreat Losses in the Constagration.

Not long after this, there was a Rebellion rais'd in the Holy Land by Facardine, the Brave and Famous Emir of Sidon; with whom join'd some o-ther discontented Bassa's and Beys of Forces against them, reduc'd them to their Duty. Afterwards enticing Facardine to Constantinople, the Old Emir went accordingly with Forty Thousand Men at his Heels: Who encamp'd at a Distance from the City: But at length trusting too much to Sultan Amurath's Allurements and fair Promises, he ventur'd fo far into the Grand Signior's Clutches, that he was Strangled. This our Spy descants upon in several Letters. Next ol-

of

nat

ich

ty.

his

ed

by 0-

of

ul

to 4-ir

d

H

at y_

t

Next follow'd the taking of Revanby the Persians; which was accompanied by the Rebellion of the Beglerbeg of Greece. At which Time there rag'd a Destructive Plague at Constantinople. In this Year our Spy came to Paris. Much about the same Time, the Persians routed the Turks before Babylon, and forc'd them to Raise the Siege.

Amurath was enrag'd with these reiterated Ill Successes, that collecting together a Mighty Army, he led them in Person to the Walls of Babylon, and laid Close Siege to that City; resolving never to return to Constantinople, till hehad won that Important Place: Which he accordingly did, with an Infinite Slaughter of the Persians. Our Spy speaks much of this Siege, sometimes extolling the Bravery of Schah Abbas, King of the Persians; at other Times, magnifying the Valour of Amurath.

The Grand Signior returning from this Successful Campagne, enter'd Conftantinople in Triumph. And being puffed up with his Victories, gave the Reins.

Reins to his Passion, committing a Thousand Exorbitances and Cruelties. At dength he died of a Fever, which he got by Excessive Drinking of Wine and Spirits, to which he had much addicted himself.

Thrahim, Brother to Amurath, Succeeded in the Throne; a Prince wholly given over to the Amours of Women. Wet he commenc'd that long and tedients War with the Venetians, which cost so much Money and Blood on both Sides; which lasted above Twenty Years, and which was not ended till the Surrender of Candia, the Chief City of the Island bearing that Name, which Consummated the Conquest of the whole Isle.

The Occasion of this War is related Variously. Our Histories affirm, That it was begun on the Account of Sultan Ibrahim's Son being taken Captive by the Knights of Malta; who was afterwards Educated in that Island, became a Monk; and for Distinction's sake, in Regard of his suppos'd Extraction, was call'd Padre Occamanno, or Father Octo-

Ottoman. Our Spy contradicts all this, and fays he was only the Son of a Female Slave, belonging to the Serail, there being no Account to be had of his Father.

Ibrahim being transported with an Extravagant Lust after Women, and having debauch'd the Mufu's Daughter; the Mufti, with the Grand Visir and Tome other Baffa's, Conspir'd against him, drawing his own Mother into the Plos. At length he was feiz'd, depos'd, and after some Days Confinement, growing Mad, he was Strangled in his Prifon, and his Son Mabomet IV. afcended the Throne; a Prince addicted more to Hunting, and the Pleasures of a Country-Life, than to War or Love of Women. Whence it was, that he spent most of his Summers in some delightful Solitude, where the agreeable Shades of Trees. the purling Streams, and Harmony of Birds, envited him as to an Earthly Pa-Yet this hinder'd not the Grand radise. Visir from profecuting the Wars in Hungary, Dalmatia, Candia, and ellewhere, as there was Occasion. Of all which Things, our Spy gives Hints in his Letters, according to their proper Seafons.

th yilf of

)- Od, 's

i-

9.

To

To draw towards a Conclusion, the Reader of these Letters may observe, That our Spy, in some of them, makes Mention of several Papers and Journals which came to his Hands; and of one which he wrote himself in the Academies, wherein is contain'd the History of his Touth, with the most Memorable Adventures which besel him in that Part of his Life,

But among Foreign Journals, he seems to put the Greatest Value on those of Carcoa, Pesteli Hali his Brother, and Isouf his Cousin. The First of these was a Private Agent for the Grand Signior at Vienna, who liv'd some Years there after our Spy came to Paris, and held a strict Correspondence with him, by Order of the Tarkish Divan, as appears by several Letters, in the 1st and 2st Volumes. But at length dying, his Journal and other Papers were sent by his Successor, to our Spy, with a Ring which Carcoa had bequeathed him as a Legacy and Token of his Inviolable Friendship even to Death.

e

5

This Journal, as we may gather from fome of our Spy's Letters, contains Copies of all the Dispatches which Carcoa fent to the Ministers of the Port, during his Residence at Vienna; with fome of their Letters to him. In thefe, as we may further collect, is couch'd a History of all the most Remarkable Transactions in Europe, with parallel Occurrences and Events in he East, from the Year 1600, or thereabouts, to the Year 1642. at which time Carcoa died. Our Spy, besides other Commendations which he gives this Journal of Carcoa, particularly celebrates it in one of his last Letters, to Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna. At the first Receipt of that Journal, he fent an Answer to Nathan, which begins thus: [" Thy "Letter, with Carcoa's Journal, is come fafe to my Hands, and the Ring which " he bequeath'd me, &c.] And a little after, he fays, [" His Memoirs will be " of Great Service to me; containing a 4 More Accurate History of the German " Court, from the Year 1600, to the " Time of his Death, than I have yet feen "extant. I am not acquainted with " Rela-

Ħ

1

d

0

i

1

f

1

1

Relations of this Kind, &c. Vol. II.

Book I. Letter KKX. Pag. 107. But in the very Last Letter he wrote to that Jew, he gives this Journal yet far higher Encomiums, praising the Elegance and Succinctness of the Style, the Solidity of the Matter, and the Great Usefulness,
as well as Delightness of Both; as may be feen more at large in Vol. VIII.
Book IV. Letter XVI. Pag. 330.

The Second Journal is that of Pefteli: Hali, Brother to our Spy, and a Great Traveller in Afia. At his Return to Confrantinople, he was made Mafter of the Customs, and Superimendant of the Arfenal there. His Journal contains an Accurate Account of his Travels through Syria, Arabia, Persia, India, China, Tartary, Georgia, Circaffia, Mingrelia, &c. With Choice Remarks and Observations on the Divers Religions, Laws, Customs, and Forms of Government which he found among fo many People of Different Na-As also several strange and pleafant Adventures that happen'd to him on the Roads, and in Cities; the Escapes he made from Robbers, and his Intrigues with the Persian and Indian Ladies. All which 11.

in

at

nd

of

i.

li

ıt

o f

e n h

S

which our Spy professes he took great Delight to read. In a Word, according to the Character which he gives us of this Journal, we may believe, That it contains many Useful and Pleasant Memoirs, in History, Philosophy, Morality, and the Politicks.

As for the Journal of Isouf his Coufin, we may conclude from feveral Letters in our Spy, that it deserves much the same Character: Only with this Advantage, That besides his Travels through all or most of the fore-mention'd Countries in the East, he adds an Account of his Jon nies through the South, having Visited the Chiefest Regions of Africk. And Mahmut appears particularly pleas'd with this last Part of his Journal, as containing Narratives of Countries to which he was wholly then a Stranger. In a Word, upon the Reading of this Journal, he conceived so great an Affection for his Coulin Ifouf, the Author of it, that he recommends him to his Brother Pefteli Hali, and to one of the Balla's, as a Man deferving the Sultan's Favour, and some Preferment fuitable to his Abilities. Which may may be a sufficient Ground for us to believe, That this Journal was not stuff'd with Vain Romantick Fables, and Empty Trisles; but that it had something in it Extraordinary and Illustrious.

If therefore the Publisher of these Volumes (who has been at great Expence and Pains, in endeavouring to retrieve the said Journals, should ever be so happy as to succeed in his Attempt; he promises himself, That the Publication of the said Journals, will be a Work both Wifeful and Acceptable to the World.

The End of the Preface.

of not And Atlanta appears particularly please with a big art of his

Lais Capaner chronels the South

ing of this source, he processed in a set on the source of the set on the set on the set of the set on the set on the set on the set of the set

d yn

e

e

e n Mail. The Mane of God.

INDEX

INTERPRETING

Some Turkish and Arabick Words, which may seem Obscure and Unintelligible, either in these Letters, or in their Tules.

A.

to lice of

A Reaf, A Place of Prisons:
Purgatory, or a Mid-Receptacle of Souls between Paradise and Hell, according to the Doctrine of the Turks.

Allah,

An Index.

Milah, The Name of God.

B.

Baffa, A Title of Honour given to Governors of Provinces, and Privy-Councellors of the Grand Signior.

Berber Aga, The Grand Signior's Barber.

28ep, A Lord.

2Beglerbeg, Lord of Lords. A Title Equivalent to our Dukes and Princes.

C.

Cadilesquier, A Lord Chief-Justice. Cadi, A Judge or Justice of the Peace.

Corban, A Mahometan Sacrifice of Sheep, which being kill'd and cut in Pieces, are distributed to the Poor.

D.

Council: Alfo a Rais'd Ground in a Hall, or any other Room of a Honfe.

Demainta, A Festival or Royal Ho-

MINISTER DO NO.

Emir, A Lord.

H.

Halnadar-Bassi, Chief-Treasurer to the Grand Signior.

uffulning of Polylinging a True

Imaum, A Minister or Clerk of a Church.

Janisar Aga, General of the Jania faries.

An Index.

K.

mant, or Governor of a City. The Grand Vizir's Vicegerent. By Way of Excellency, 'tis appropriated to him who governs Constantinople in the Grand Vizir's Abfence.

Blaya Bey, Lord-Lieutenant of the Tanifaries.

M.

Mosch. A Turret or Steeple of a 990llah, A Doctor or Preacher.

Duccerman, A Carrier or Muleteer.
Dussulman, or Doselman, a True Believer, one Refign'd to God.
This Title the Mahometans arrogate to themselves, as the only Elect of God, in their own Conceits.

R.

Reig Effendi, A Secretary of State.

obe

3

aib-

*

a

r.

e

I.

1

S.

Selictar Aga, The Sword-Bearer to the Sultan.

Serasquier, A General of an Ar-

Sultan, A King or Emperor.

T.

Cefterbar, Lord-Treafurer.

U.

Mizir Azem, The First Minister of State.

Specification and a second believed Specify of the West Suitsty Aking amproc. the spring Too First Minister mall, that festourient felt can fearge be le la inv i bliefen ynear fo gam. Bing of low Scanire, of aprill lavolited Counte-

A dov.

A-Man'd, ann s yd sirWice greek to Tal-

a little Caffeck of black Serge, which is the Habit

I have chosen, I make two rigures; being in fleare what I ought to bel but Oovid y, and in Ap-ting Pollers with you. It is to bill that I LETTER Layrod ym april Mahmut the Arabian, and Vilett of the Grand Signior's Slaves, to Halnadarbaffy, Chief Treasurer to bis Highness at Constantinople.

BOOK

Have at length finished my Journey, after One hundred and forry days March, arriving at Paris, the 4th of this prefent Moon, according to the Christians Style: I made no stay in lungary per sojourned One and forty days at Vien-4; where I observed all the Morions of that Court, coording as I was ordered; of which I shall not ow fresh having given a full Account couthe ever sinciple Krair Asem , Being but nearly Affiliation fearce know any Body, and am as ligile: known a This te

M an 103

be

we.

n.H

This

felf. I have suffered my Hair to grow a little below my Ears; and, as to my Lodging, 'tis in the House of an old Flemming, where my Room is so small, that Jealousie it self can scarce enter. And because I will therefore admit of no Servant.

Being of low Stature, of an ill favoured Countenance, ill-shap'd, and by Nature not given to Talkativeness, I shall the better conceal my self. Instead of my Name, Mahmut the Arabian, I have taken on me that of Titus the Moldavian; and, with a little Cassock of black Serge, which is the Habit I have chosen, I make two Figures; being in Heart what I ought to be; but Onwardly, and in Appearance, what I never intend.

Carcoa at Vienna, furnishes me with Bread and Water, supplying me with just enough to live, and I defire no more. The Eggs here are dearer than Pullets with you. It is to him that I will ad-

drefs my Letters [A T T T

Eliachim the Jew came to see me, who seems to be sufficiently informed of what passes in the World, and will be an useful Man to me. Yet I will never trust him more than I need. Although I have a Dispensation from the Musti for Lying, and salse Oachs, which I shall be obliged to make; yet I have still some Qualms on my mind. However our Sovereign must be served; and, I can commit no sin, as long as this is my tole End HAS so the Intelligence which I shall send, no see shall could from me but what is true, unless I be first deceived my self.

It will be hard for me to mention any Thing comfiderable of a City which is not to be viewed in Onleday, It having been there but Seven. The peopled That the Borders of the Son with Sands the inhabitable longing we selve very Cock lote of the Holder Me Bull on the Bridges, bod you wond some Parts of it are joined by a great Bridge of Stone, well built and very flately. In the midft of it is feen, an Horse of Brass, with the Scarue of Henry IV, which bestrides it; whose Heroick Actions have justly surnamed him The Great, and he seems still to command this Capital of the Kingdom. The other Bridges being full of Houses, are not seen, appearing as if they had been made for the City, not the River.

The Ring's Palace is an ancient Building, yet retains a certain Majesty, which denotes the Grandeur of its Master: Within it appears a Desart; for, the Court is always abroad, or in the Army.

A Church-man, term'd at Rome a Cardinal, is the Principal Minister of State; his Name is Armand du Plessis, Cardinal of Richlieu. He is esteem'd a great Politician, a Man of Wit and Action, and every way fitted for the Place he holds.

All the People make Vows to Heaven, That their King may become a Father; for, the Queen has been barren thefe many Years.

I go into the Churches as a Christian; and when I seem attentive to their Mysteries, I hold our facred Alcoran in my Hands, addressing my Prayers to our Holy Prophet; and thus behaving my self, I give no Offence. I avoid Disputes, mind my own Concerns, and do nothing which may endanger my Salvation.

Preserve thy Health, and expect to hear from me, as oft as the Interest of our Great and Mighry Monarch requires, who is the Master of my Life and Affections a mary d. In he

Denti el cicio in o fine

be devoted to that Lord, whose Slave thou are as well as I. The Letters I write for the future, shall be directed to the Ministers of the Divas.

C

τ

d

r

1-0

ne |

1

h

g,

33

N-

ın

AS

c

my F

co.

122

Live with the Piety of a good Muffulman, and the Prudence of an able Minister, and preserve the Treasure as thine own Heart, (which shou knowest) is the last expiring.

Paris, 11th of the 9th Moon; of the Tear 1637, according to the Christian Style.

DESTRUCTOR BUILD

TER II.

To the Same Hasnadarbassy.

Had too good an Opinion of my felf, and did not sufficiently consider to whom I wrote, when I attempted, in so little a time, to give thee an Account of the Court of France, and how this King lives. An old Arabian was wont to say, To have a perfect Knowledge of Things, we must know them more than once, and forget them thrice, to the end, that learning them a fourth time, they may become perfectly our own. This will instruct me how to write to my Friends hereafter; not as I understand Assairs, but as they ought to be understood; For, once well done, is better than twice ill done.

I think I may fay, the Spaniards want Ground themselves, by taking an handful from others. Two and twenty of their Galleys, with some other small Vessels, have taken two small Islands named St. Margaret's and St. Howat's, which he over against Provence, and are barren and unprostable Places, and wilt serve to little purpose, unless for Ports; and 'tis also a question, how long they will.

hold them.

The War betwix: these Two Nations is like to continue, especially from the Death of the two Italies.

to

fo

to

Pa

for

Al

bo

for 35.

the 20

lian Princes, Victor Amade, Duke of Savoy, and Charles Gorague, Duke of Mantua. 10 101 180 90 1101

I believe it an Effect of Providence, that these Two Nations know not their own Interest, or knowing it neglect it. Heaven is more kind to us; for as our Empire transcends all others in Strength and Greatness, so it does in Unity and Concord, by which means its in our Power to make War or live in Peace. The Christians never consider the Advantage they lose, and the Good they may acquire by attacking of us, whom they yet hate and treat as Barbarians.

The Archbishop of Bourdeaux is at present General of the French Naval Forces; who though a Priest, is yet permitted to turn Tarpaulin and Soldier: For my part, I understand not how a Presare of his Rank can for sake his Flock, his Altar, and his Function. If what the Christians say be true, but that is nothing to us; and the King of France being so enlighted a Prince, and imploying him, as he does, he must needs be a good Seaman and Soldier.

To fay no more in this Matter, For Princes of what Religion soever they be, are always sacred, and not to be approached but with Respect, seeing their Doings.

lie above the reach of a common Capacity.

I would fain hear of the Grand Signion's Health; for, when he is well, all the World is to to me, and without him I am nothing. I will not write to food to the Grand Virin, being defirous to write what.

paffes here with more exactness.

g

2

-

ur

y

at 11 ad

rs.

ct

ed

1 ble

for vill.

.00

ta-

Link

I am in this Place, like a Man loft in Confusion; for, this Town seems rather a Province than a City, All is hurry and Noise, every Body brushing arbont after Action. The Men for the most part are for Martial Exploits, either at Sca or Land; and as to the Women, they are not idle, employing themselves as becomes them, either in the Shops or Kitchins. Yet they take more care to shew.

B 2 themselves as them.

themselves, than ours do to hide themselves. Do thou be careful of thy Health, for I shall never be Miferable having thee tomy Friend, Two Nations Grow not their own Interesting know-

Paris; with of the 10th Moon, of The 120 1 call hof the Tear $6270 to the hold to the street was

The children tever confider the Advanuage they HL and E Toff B Loav acquire by accashing of us, whom they wer hace and treat

To Darnish Mehemet Bassa. of the Freed Naval Forcest who though a Prieff.

I Have been at a Ceremony which I am willing to I fee often, to give an account of it in my Len ters; 'tis the Te Deum, which Christian Princes eanie to be fing in their Churches, on the gaining any confiderable Advantage over their Enemies which Te Denn is at Home composed by Two of their Stines to Wie Ambrole and Auftin. When the French beat the Spaniards they fing the Te Deum, and when these vanquish their Enemies they do the fame. These Two Nations do the Duty of the Muffulmans, in deftroving one another; and when this is done, they give God Thanks for the Evil they have committed. Whence we may judge of the Wifdom and Plety of the Mabonetans, among whom there's feldom feen an open War and, if it should happen, 'cis generally condemned and and and

The rejoleing of the French proceeds hence ; the Spaniards had befreged Lemente, a small Penia fala in Languedoc, which is but four Leagues round, with Two Ports, where a few Galleys, and Four finall Yellels may Anchor in fafety. The Place was artack'd by the Spaniards with much Heat, but was afterwards given over with as great Loss The Affailants being obliged to make a Retreat

-2

C

in cort

Par

not unlike a shameful Flight; quitted their Bag-

Count Serbellon offered at first to Barris, who commanded the Place, a great Sum of Money, which was to be attended with a constant Pension; which refused, they were necessitated to betake themselves to Force, by which, in short; the Spemiards were entirely descreed Serbellon withdrew towards Parmenan, with she Duke of Gardsung's Son. who was Viceroy of Catalonia, He loft all his Tents, his Plate, and the Money defigned for Payment of the Army : And I will fay yet more, that he has loft the Reputation of a good Captain and valiant Soldier, until be can recover an Opportunity to Fight and Kanguish and This Vistory must have been of Confequence and very Glorious, fequenche Kingathited in Person; together with the Queen, Two Cardinals the Council of State, and chanof the Finances, and that which they call here, the Courts Sovereign, which are a Company of Men chofen to judge others. Befides thefe, there was an innumerable Concourse of People, who testified sheir ley for rhe Advantage gained by their King. motwith finding in he at the Ooft of their Brethren my Sifter and Friend, whichroidilos amal sha do of Live happily, and conferve thy Honour as thy had the fame Sentiments of All Clion, I fee ball.

Paris, 25th of the 10th Moon,

Farrs, 25th of the term Men. . 7861 ras of the Tear 1637.

. 1

01

TH

el

19 5

of

hd

m,

he

he

că

cy

hê

gA

t ;

out 1988

LETTER IV.

To Isouf bis Kinsman.

Tell thee I live, and am well. I have received ho News from thee; perhaps thou thoughteff me Dead. I Salute thee first with my Letters. though thou oughteft to have begun. If thou art afhamed of my Kindred, accuse thy Parents, by whom thou are become of the fame Family. But be not ungrateful to them, nor forgetful of the Good thou haft received from me. Thou shalt now know where Pam and ought to flav, and mayeft applier me if thou wilt. Believe in the mean time the Counsel I give thee, although thou doft not demand it. Be devout in thy Religion without Hypocrifie, and remember there is no more Gods but One ; as alfo, that the Favourite, and fent of God. is Mahomet his Prophet. After that, love thy Mafler, without defiring any thing more than the Execurion of his Pleafuse; Embracethy Father as from my Sifter and Friend, which is the most endearing Title that Antiquity could invent for Persons, who had the same Sentiments of Affection. Live happily, and conferve thy Chasticy.

Paris, 25th of the 10th Moon, of the Year 1627.

. 0

O th

ha the t

ż

A

ė

at d.

8-

K-

m

21

90

20

dens, and the Restructions beriefe thou

To contains Hive thouland Booles, with great Gar-

It chon wilt add to shy valour by new Meritahica

To the Aga of the Junizaries.

Tokkill give thee some Pleasure in telling thee, that the Christians lose easier than they acquire. It seems the Marquess Ambrose Spinola, which all the World rook for a great Caprain, has lost much of his Reputation; seeing, that a Place is lost in Bleven Weeks, which he had formerly befreged Eleven Months, and where he had expended Eleven Millions. If these Circumstances are true, they are very extraordinary. However, he shall condition a great Caprain in my Opinion; and it is ordinary chough to see that lost in a little time, by the Cowardinass of one, which has not been acquired in a great while by the Valour of a whole Army.

The Prince of Orange hath taken Breda, a Place of g eat Importance, which had been furrendred. I welve Years and Three Months fince, to the faid Spinula, who commanded the Army of Spain. This Conquest is grean; for, 'twas the general Opinion, the Place could not be taken but by Famine; yet hath it been constrained to yield, by the continual

Fire and Volour of the Befiegers.

Place, they had been, as it were, block'd up on the fide of Brabant, and had the Enemy always at their Gates; whereas, now they are more at large. We ought to rejoice rather at their Acquisition, than those of the Spaniards, with whom we never had Peace.

This Place is fortified with much Regularity. It hath fifteen Bastions, besides some little Forts on the Moat side. There are sive Horn-works without. The Place is considerable for its Greatness.

B. 5

It contains Five thousand Houses, with great Gardens, and there are Three principal Gates.

I mention these Particulars, because thou art a Man of War. Receive my Letter kindly; believe me thy Friend, and do not doubt of my Fidelity. If thou wilt add to thy Valour by new Merit, which will beighten the Confideration Men have for thee, I will reach thee a Secret, which will not be very Expensive, but very Delightful. Read at Times, the Histories of others, and particularly those of the Greatest and most Fortunate Princes, and their Captains. Imitate rather the Wife, than those who have only fignalized themselves by their Valour. To conclude, be conversant in Histories, but chuse always the beft. I mean fuch as cannot be suspected for Lyes. Thou canft norfail of good Books both Greek and Arabiek, which are translated into the Turkishand Persian Tongues. Thou wile learn to be wife by the Folly of others, and wilt become yet more prudent, by observing the fage Conduct of such who performed great Actions: Above all Things, never neglect to make ferious Reflections upon the least Events. It happens sometimes, that Pasasages are found in Books that feem of no Confequence, which may yet be of use in important Occations for the clearing of Difficulties And for Example, learn this from a great King, Henry IV. who conquered his Kingdom by the dint of his Sword.

I will finish with a worthy Saying of Marque's Spinola's, which I think is to the purpose. He saith, I have Captain's Sword must be tied to his Heart, his Heart fixt to his Head, and conducted by his ludgment; which ought particularly to be formed by the reading of Histories. Love me as much as a esteem thee, and thou wilt never love me enough.

LET-

thath fitteen Baltisins . beful

ti

m fh

en

bu

the

Mi

de

ho

200

Sul

The

off

the

e

7.

h

e,

5, of

ir

0

r. (c

ì. h ic

et

h

S, ou

à.

.

2.

n-

n-

: S

ħ,

11,

is

ed

1

Ţ.

Brafe Gens. 17 . R. H. T. T. E. T. T. E. R. D. VI. erie Booc

of Wager, and in Bulk is viewen imported Tun. To Mehemetti Page Bunuch to the Sultar and as if it were the fidant all other Ships, it is called The Specieign. The Second News is, a Pro-

Hou has form Fourteen Years in the Soraglio, and to thy unhappiness, always been in the Service of Women; ferve now a Man, who is certainly fomewhat more than a Woman. Thou knoweft the Confidence we have in each other is arrived to that Degree, as to discover our Failings to end other, and to fuffer them. Seekig I am at prefent far off, and by Confequence the more exposed to Criticks and ill Offices, do not forget the Interefts of thy Friend. Watch Day and Night for the Advantage of my Life. Observe, search and endeavour to penerrate what People discourse of me, and what is laid concerning me at Court, Our Great Emperor fent me hither to observe what pailes here, and render ham an Account of I know I am where I ought to practife what I am commanded to do, but I do not yet know whether I shall return to the Place where I would willingly end my Days. Most things are done on that fide. but they are not all equally performed. I have therefore more just Reason to apprehend, that all Men do know that I shall acquie my self with Fidelity, of the Orders I have received. Confider how far this unhappiress doth extend, who serves another, who is Mafter of fo many Millions of Subjects.

I will inform thee of two Things, whereof thou shall tell the first to the Buffa of the Sea, and the other to the Mafeit Vicar. "Werne goldin This the Ride of England hath fer forther veriel about the Bring Octan Sof Glick Prodigious Great Great Be that it exceeds all others as well in Force as Vastness. It is armed with one Hundred and twenty Brass Guns. It draws Unrigg'd, Seventeen Foot of Water, and its Bulk is Eleven hundred Tun.

The reported, that it cost few Millions of Piesters, and as if it were the Ring of all other Ships, it is called The Sovereign. The Second News is, a Prodigy that happened in Upper Saxam, which finds but a lieste Gredit with the Wise, but is easily believed by the Women, and the Common-People.

They say, That at Dresden, one of the Duke of Secon's Courtiers having cut a piece of boiled Rees, rheneithed so much Blood out of it, that the Electr's Table was wholly covered with it; which extreamly troubled this Prince, looking upon the Adventure as a Presage of Famine and War. Let me hear often from thee, and of our Friends; but, make no Considence to any, of that which is betwixe us. Thou shall learn from me Secrets of great Importance, provided thou he staithful and Discrees. God grapt thee in an instant, the Good which I shall wish to acquire in my whole Life.

Paris, 15th of the 11th Mosn, 19 off on a never lieft of the Year 1637 our season flesh sayall on bas

but they are not alrequally performed. I have therefore more just reason to appreciately that an Men do know that I find acquirmy felt with Fidelity, of the Wilder Rate Teart. Confider how far this unlappineds does extend, who ferver

To the Invincible Vizir Azem. a hone

Things prefent, by thy Prudence and rare lindershing, and half defired me to inform the of those Things which shall happen in the Place.

that whi

whither then hast sent me; I will endeavour to penetrate into Affairs the most secret, to the end that nothing in this World may be hid from thee.

At present, there are but few Actions in Christendom which deferve to be reported ; and thou are sufficiently instructed in the Ashirs of France, and touching the Perion of her king." I expect to inform thee of Events, which at the fame time may divert thee, and infirmet thee. The Prince is called Henry the Just. He cannot be easted the Happy; for having as yet no Son to fucceed him, there will be always Occasion of Trouble in his Kingdom: Nor is there any Hopes that the Queen may prove with Child, by Reason of her long Burrenness. If the King will relative to be divorced from her. and rake another, it cannot be effected without Rome; and Rome, the Mufix and all cheir Priefts, will, according to their usual Manner, raile to many Difficulties, and be to long before they determine, that it will be a hard Matter to extort from them, that Confent which the Laws of the Christian ret der neeestary for the distory which toth thus Subject the Christian Princes is hard ; bur, it is a Point of their Lang which being of no importance to thee, I will trouble thee no. more with it. This Defect of a Successor in the King of France, is of great Advantage to the Spamigral; and one would think, Heaven had created this Nation to be Enemies to the Fremh Profeems moreover, there is a feeree violence which energy tuins an Andparty betwise the Two Nations which enforces a belief, that there can never be a folid Peace beavise them I would be

Thou haft already understood from those I write, and who dare hide nothing from thee, what hach happened here during the fmall time of my loyourning in these Quarters. I will not be pean that

Things

2)

10

11 ic ic

3

in 33 ad

ine

SM

lah

hor

in-ice,

ces,

řî.

Things; the Greatness of thy Genius, and the Eminency of thy Employment, have put thee far above every Thing that is not extraordinary, that we ought to inform thee of nothing but transcending Events.

I will not entertain thee with the taking of the Old Town of Sally, nor of the Diforders in the New. Thou wit have learned more (wiftly from the Coasts of Africk, Advices of the Hostile Acts which the English have committed with their Ships of War, against that City, which the King of Moracco protects.

The Assempt was great, and is discoursed of here as a hardy Enterprise. The vastness of the Understanding, will easily judge of the Consequence.

They say here, that the sing of France has written Rome, that he will willingly resolve to make a long Cestation of Arms with his Enemies. If that happens, this Repose will serve but to encrease the Forces of both sides, which may hereafter render the War more cruel. In the mean time all its choughs they design a General Peace, but Time will discover so the Policiolans, what we cannot at present draine.

This Court is great and Magnificent. It stays not long in a Place, and is very seldom at Paris; being in the Camp amongst the Armies, or for Pleasure in the Country and the Addition and her is but in the Country and the Courters as different but they beneated and Inches on the Courters as different but they beneated and Inches on the Country of the War and Love and apply the michys to but with much Confinenced and apply the michys to but with much Confinenced and apply the michys to but with much Confinenced and a second and we with much Confinenced and a second and a second

The Religion which they call. Protestant, and which has been the occasion of so much disturbance to the Kingdom, is now low, by the Surrender of Rachell, which was at altou knowedle, the Principal Religion of those of the Party Party of the Principal Religion of those of the Party Party of the Principal Religion of the Party Party of the Principal Religion of the Party of the Par

SACILLY E

th

ter

ma

fell and full lian

thi

23.4

It feems this King will imitate our Mighty and Formidable Emperors, and will regulate his Conduct by thine, in not fuffering within his State Two Religions which are opposite.

The Kingdom is norwithftanding, as yet, full of Trouble. Cardinal Richlieu (who holds the Helm of Affairs in France, as thou directeft that of the Empire of the World) feems as may be faid, in the midft of a Tempest, and hath reason enough to apprehend Danger; for, there are an infinite number of People, who follow the Standards of Luther and Calvin, who have no other Thoughts but of his Ruine.

In the mean time, the Power of France feems mighty Great, and 'tis to be apprehended, it may in Time angment infinitely.

r

u

n

B

d

のは

It

Thou knowest, Invincible Baffa, what the ancient Gauls did in Old Time. They were called Gallogrecians; for having over-run Iraly and fack'd Rome, they fettled in the middle of Afia, and could not be overcome but by the Romans: because the Heavens had ordained, that the Romans should subjugate all Nations But now that their Gauls are no more, and there are no more of these brave Romans, we must pray the I finite Goodness of the most High, that the Power of these Modern Gauls may be limit ted. If the French however would do, what a Spamard, who fled from the Passion of Philip II counfelled Henry IV. their King, which was To fet himfelf right wirh Rome, to have a great Power at Sea and a Countel composed of Wisc, Secret and Faithful Men; by that weam, he might one day perhaps equal the Ancient Romans. I think he that gave this Advice was named Antonio Perez.

I observe every thing with Care, but shall obme, that the Genius of this Nation is to aggrandize

ie fell, and extends its Limites colf

The French have a common faying, That Kings having nothing above them that may limit them, God hath given the Empire of the Earth to the ftrongeft. They add, That Adam left no Kingdoms to his Children, but that they made them for themselves. They glory in certain Prophecies, which promise them the Empire of the World. In relating this, I tell what they fay, not what ought to happen. They entertain here the faire Hatred for us, as others do when our Power is Formidable; but wife Men who have Knowledge of our Hiftory. Speak with more Admiration of the Ottoman Empire, than that of the Romans; and if these laft were restored by the Civil Wars which tore them in Pieces, the other will encrease and maintain it felf, by the great Pre-cautions used to hinder them. and by the Union of their Forces

Thou knowest more of the Extent of the City of Paris, than I can tell thee. It appears to me, great and full of People; but Constantinople is yet Greater, and more Populous.

Thou wile pardon me ofter all, if I make not a certain Judgment of a Nation, which I do not yet Well comprehend. However I will affure thee, the French are no Fools, and I believe never were. They do not love Noveley through Levity, but for Reason of State; and when they are unconstant, it is not to do ill, but to acquire Good. They are Happy and Unfortunate in Wars, like others a but what is confiderable. They do not combat their Enemies because they have them, but in Obedience to their Prince, which occasions the great Difcipline which is in their Armies And, what feems worthy of Reflection, is, That they love their King by Inclination; and, this Love produces in them, that which our Attachment to the Precepts of the Law, does in the Hearts of the best Turks. Tule this Comparison, which I leasns from thee who are the wifeft Map in the World : from whose Mouth I have heard, as from an Oracle, That it is nor much material, whether Subjects love their Ma. fter by Inclination or Fear, provided they always faithfully serve him, and are always humble.

If ever it happen I am discovered, thou wilt do me a great Honour to let me know, if I ought to avow my felf an Agent from the fublime Port; or. whether I ought to die without confessing any Thing.

5

1,

C

n

8,

n

11

e;

1:

A

m

K

D,

at n

4

ne

e. u

it,

re

154 pip

62 cia

ms.

in

in

RSG

bs.

I end with my Head in the Dust, withour ever ceafing to supplicate the Most High, that he will fhower his continued Happiness upon thee and the Empire.

Paris, 15th of the 11th. Moon, of the Test 1637 bet or you as you have sw Tribennelon . I how will cer-LETTER VIII.

To Muzla Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Octoman Empire.

Expende which they throw away out of Vanity. This is the Second Letter which I have writ to 1 thee. My Disputches hitherto have not been filled with Things of great Importance, by reason I have not yet had Time to learn them, I wish greatly to write what may please thee. Receive therefore what I offer kindly, and be perswaded, That I fear thy Cenfures, as much as if I did deforve them. as bus , atsailab vav anioe amoils

I live here according to the Inftructions which were given me, and live eafic enough. The Country is good and far, the men good Companions, are frank and feem Difereet it as shall than of

I have not as yet any Acquaintance with Women, and yet it is necessary I find Means to introduce my felf into their Companies. It is a Sex that will not pardon, when they think themselves neglected. They are proper to discover Things one would know, and to fay them when one would have them published; and likewise, they as much penetrate imo the Secrets of Hearts, as the most refined and spiritualest Courtiers. Forther, there are many of them that can conceal nothing, but what they do not know.

I frequent not the Monks, but when necessitated. If I fee them, it is to feem devout, upon Defign of being introduced by them into the House of a Minister of State, when I teach his Son the Greek Language.

Paris, 1 rth of the 11th, flegt, We must not expect ro find here the great Tranquility which is at Constantinople. The Town is to full of Coaches, of Horses and Waggons, that the Noise surpasses Imagination. Thou wilt certainly find it strange, that Men who are in Health, and have no fore Legs, should cause themselves to be drawn in an Engine with Four Wheels; but I more wonder to fee thele lame Men can relolve to fuffer the friconveniency of the Noise, and of the Expence which they throw away out of Vanity. The more moderate French, which do not approve of this Luxury, fay, That in the time of Henry III. there were but Three Coaches in Paris, whereof two were the Kings. But the number is now fo great, that they are not to be counted. or thank

Lean sell thee mo more of the Genius of the Eventh, -thoutknowest it perfectly. There is in albeheir Actions a Spirit very delicate, and an Activity like

dehit of Fire and or or proposed and will I

Infectins as if none but they knew the fhorr Duration of Man's Life: They do every Thing with so much haste, as if they had but one Day to live

76

- 11 8

I fe

はのかか

m

If they go on Foot, they runn if they cide, they fly, and if they speak, they eat up half their Words. They love new Inventions passionately. It can say nothing certain of their Fidelity, though methinks we might suspect such, who do not read as they write, nor write as they speak. They love Money, which they look upon as the first Matter, and second Couse of all Things: They well night adore it, and that is the Original Sin of all Nations.

Paris ought to be destroyed, to enrich many Cities in Europe. Whence thou may ft comprehend her Greatness, her Traffick, how Rich she is, and how all forts of Arts do flourish in her

The French Nobility is always ready to get on Horeseback at their King's Commands: And they love War so well, that it is to be supposed, we should have enough to do with them, if we were as near them as the Spaniards, and they did not want Infantry.

1, 11

l.

d

n

c

d

of 0

1.

n

c

n• is

at

T-

h,

to 1

to

he y.

ve II.

of

fo

b,

ir

ke

u-

I shall hereaster observe every Circumstance with so much care, as well in this Kingdom as elsewhere, that norhing shall escape me. In the mean time I shall endeavour to get Acquaintance; but shall want more Money than is allowed me, to answer what is expected from me. Two Chequins a Day, are more than enough to support a Man that will live like a Cynick, but not sufficient to introduce me into their Houses, to dive into their Secrets, and enable me to discover the Assairs of most importance, according to my Commission; so that thou must assist me to obtain more.

I hope to succeed in my Employment, if thou dost not refuse me thy Assistance, finding no Difficulty in the Execution of my Orders, but the Necessity of Lying, when I pass for a Christian. I fancy I see Mahomet in a Rage, and believe my Soul lost; though I am from my Heart more faithful in my Religion, than all the Mahometans put toge-

I

6 nly

m rf

R

fe

20

G

C

21

24

gether. Seeing I am resolved to do a Thing to which I have so much Aversion, thou mayest be affored, I will bear all the Evil imaginable that can happen to me with Firmness, though in all appearance I ought to hope nothing but Good Deliver, I befeech thee, this inclosed Letter into the Hands of the most Venerable Music; and extort from him, if possible, a Solution of my Doubts. There is nothing that touches me nearer, than what regards my Religion, and with my Religion the Service of my Emperor.

Paris 15th of the 11th Moon, the 21 to 2101 is of the Year 1637.

thould as see a cough to do sytth them, if we were as near them at XI . R AT TE B. Laid not want

To the Musty, Prince of the Religion of the Turks.

I Will die a true Massulman, though I should see all the Crosses of the Carthaginians set up for my Punishment, and had before mine Eyes, all the Instruments of the most Cruel Tortures, that the Enemies of our Holy Religion could invent. But, seeing there is no Question at present of dying, but of living to serve my Emperor, I beg of thee, Sovereign Presate, that thou wilt be pleased to conserve my Innocence, in giving me an ample Absolution, or in imposing a Penance that may cancel all my Crimes.

Paris hath always been the Residence of the Kings of France; whence it is, that the Exercise of no other Religion but the Christian, is suffered there; and those who acknowledge the Bishop of Rome for their Head, have the principal Management of the Affairs of Religion; and 'ris with thefe, that the Rives of the Latin Church are more firially obferved that which they call cite Gain that

I live here in Appearance, as if I were a Christian and a Catholick. I enter into their Churches, affift at their Ceremonies, kneel before the Cross and I appear with great Devotion and Humility before the Images, which are had here in Veneration:

I know well enough, if the Life which I lead be not permitted me, as advantagious to the Affairs of Scare, and the Person of the Grand Signior, that I commit Sacrilege, acting as I do, contrary to the Precepts of Mahomet, expressed in his Alcoran,

I am guilty of violating the Law which is prescribed me, and deserve Death, if thou dost not by approving this Life I am obliged to lead; affure me of both my Salvation and Life. 'Tis true thou haft already given me Absolution from all the falle Oaths I thall be necessitated to take, when they are for the Service of my mafter y but I am not affured this Absolution extends far enough to fecure my Confeience, when I abuse Hopreferre themselves more recurely. Butspoid Toyl

Tis thy Province to decide this Point which is of fuch Importance to my Repole, which makes me expect thy Refolves with Impatience of thou rhinkest ai Faithful Atuffulmany who conferves his Religion in his Hears, and lives, as I do, amongst the Enemies of the Law; worthy this Grace, was a

The interest of my Conscience obliges me to demands after what manner I ought to govern my felf, when thee them, who are offectively what I feers to be, practife the fame Acts of Religion

The French will in a latte Time colubrate chicit Comaval or Shroverice, As foon as long the Carbolicks think of Fafting, having half affified at a Ceremony, where Alhes are put upon their Horeheads

Cive

.

fee

for

che

the

But,

ing,

nec,

to

Ab-

ncel

ings

f no

ere;

e for cheit

lì

H

P3

31

91

660

W

rin sk

and

Con

of p

heads, to make them remember, they were formed out of the Duff, and shall return to Duft again. It is at this Time they go to hear Sennons, their Priests explaining that which they call the Gospel, and frequent the Church more than ordinary. They apply themselves oftner to Works of Piery; and having purged their Consciences by Penances and secret Consessions, which one Man makes to another, they cat of a certain Bread, which they call The Samment of the Empharish, where, after certain Words pronounced by their Priest, they will have the Body of their Mession to be really present under those Apparent Species.

This Ceremony is an Obligation that good Christians cannot dispense with, it being ordained by their Law, and by their Great Prelate, the Bishop of Romes! They commonly call in Confession, and Communicating, and Keeping Easter. Ought of hazzard my felf in committing to horrida Sacrillege, and tempth as I may fay, God, by so great a Superstition, and so irritate our Great Prophet! It may be said, perhaps, that many Jews have done the same Thing, and do it yet every day to preserve themselves more securely. But how many of them have been chastisfed by wistble Miracles from Heaven, and undergone terrible Punishments by the Ordinances of the Judges say at 18 2000.

All chefe Reflections crouble my Spirit, O Holy Primare of the most Divine Law. I do not think at lawful, to mack the Mysteries of any Religion what-forcer. The God of the Christians, is the same that we adore i but Their Religion is quite opposite to Ours. There is a great difference between their JESUS Crucifid, with all the Ignominies possible, as these lastele do believe, and a Mahomes Immortal and Triumphant, a great Legislator and the Angular Scone of the first Empire of the World.

Gige

Give me then positive Orders, to the end I may be eased of my Seruples, and may believe. That what thou permitters, may be an Effect of thy Justice, and not of a Toleration which may be permitted on the contract of the con

oft is true, i may wave, all these things in seigning to have done them; but it will be more advantageous for my Affairs, not to exempt my self, if that may be without a Crime, walk find bong nothing

3

d

1

.

1

24

is

or se

į.

y

qu

ııI

É

at

ve

63

124

es

dv

at-

at 10 dir Ao

net

nd

7.8

ige

fleach then a most Obedient Slave, what thou shall believe most conducible to the Glory of Godg and most profitable for the Shavice of our Schereign Bard. I do not fend thee my Doubts to pazzle theel bard Graw from the great and sublime Genius, such Lights as may diffipate the Darknesses. I live in the Homble Servant, and pray our Holy Prophet, that he will keep the from perithing of pain 1000 100

Eyelis thou may it intily calculate the Age of this Monarch, who clamen has isoda feith inviere freeze fadis, because he had a 201 gmay sta feit to his kingdom, beliefer, his Xears being near their being mean here, because here and his observery to pass mass of a country wind his observery to pass mass of a country wind his observery to pass of the country wind his observery to be a country wind his observery to be a country to be a c

Erved, That few Pinder arrive it a great Age.
The Queen May Ridlight Tiddly proves with Childs which it is should happen after Twenty three Years of findings first Series at angle cash been for long in the ming, will give an ample this is of of reafering to the Afrologies of Ears e.

I Received from thy Hand the first Dispatch that I has been addressed to me from the Sublime Port, and I received it at the Beginning of the Mean am colding to the Moint of these Infidely. The Date is if the Minch Minch Middles H. Thou orders me no wider to the of Two Chings, find to do Thiese. This wife for the Minch standwill this Kings be Aged, land of period Hench; and afterwards; If there he is 2001 any Hopes that the Queen may have Children. Thou wouldest also have me send his Highness the Pictures of the King, the Cardinal of Richlien, and the Eldest Son of the Prince of Conde.

As thou art one of the Principal Supports of the Power of the Sublime Port, elevated above all the Thrones of the World, (after the Virir Azem, whose Orders are the Rule of the Universe) Minister and first Slave of the happy Emperor of the Ortemans; I ought to do what thou commandest me.

nor doth he appear by his Gountenance, by his Hair, or by his Shape, to be yet Old; neither would it be easie to divine the Number of his Years, if we were ignorant of the Day of his Birth; But it is known to every Body, that this Prince was born the 20th of the Ninth Mon, of the Year 1601, according to the Style of the Christians.

By this thou may'll justly calculate the Age of this Monarch, who though he is in his Flowers feems fading, because he hath as yet given no heir to his Kingdom; besides, his Years being near Forty, surpass that of a young Man; and 'tis observed, That few Princes arrive to a great Age.

The Queen may still lie in, if the proves with Child; which it it should happen after Twenty three Years of Barrennels, 'cis certain, a Fruit which hath been so long in ripening, will give an ample Subject of reasoning to the Astrologers of Europe.

For my part, I fancy this King will fcarce be come a Father, unless they Repudiate this Wife and marry another. Secunity Series and bay isses I bas

"He is not permitted to be inquisitive into the Caule of this Sterilies. Hereby thou look the Weak new of those Christian Princes, who are subjected to the Laws of Rome, which thinks at Drime to gill the miles the Heirs that are not born in laying the wede

SOF

ock

12

9

S 'n

5

91

ŧ.

d

1

1

1

h

h

c lock; the it often happens, that when such are wanting, this Kingdom is exposed to Ruin, by the Differences and Civil Wars, which, on thefe Occasions, are always inevitable.

The anof High, who hath always protected the Grandeur of the Ottoman Empire, hath left the Infidels in thefe Errors; to the End, that he might give our most Mighey Monarch, who is the Avenger of the Divine Unity, an Eminence Superior to that of all Kings, who are his Slaves; and at the same Time, made him Holy above all the Saints in the World, and permitted us to have Children, that may succeed us, from as many Wives as we can entertain; the Children of True Believers being always Legitimate.

I humbly beg Pardon; I forgot I spoke to thee, who are Wildom it felf, and to whom no Secrets of the Law or State are unknown.

I will fend to Careon at Vienna, the Pictures of the King, of the Prince of Conde's Son, and of the Cardinal Richlins, according to the Orders I received from thee, and they that be dispatch din little Time: I would to Heaven I could as eafily fend thee the Originals; I should at one stroke difarm this Kingdom, which would thereby be fuddenly involved in Fire and Blood.

The Habit I wear, and the manner after which I live, have already gained me many Friends. I find Means to go once a Week to Court. My Deformity proceeds me against the Jealousies of Husands. Some People take me for a Wife Man, and discourse coundently in my Presence of Politicis and Affairs of State; neigher do I negled the making the of every Thing, which may be advan-tageous to me in my Ministry. Thus, in doing a Thing for the which I have much Avertion, I domstall I define; and I affare thee, upon my Paich, d thou wile continue to protect me and affift me with thy Counfels, I will do fomewhat extraordinary.

I inpplicate the Great God, to give a perpetual Health to thy Body, and make thy Soul enjoy upon Earth and in Heaven, the Felicity of the Bieffed.

Paris, 1st. of the 1st. Moon, of the Year 1638.

To Bedredin, Superior of the Convent of Derviles of Cogny in Natolia.

I Write to thee, who are Venerable by thy Age, and so many long Voyages, which thou hast made. Thou who hast been so many Times in Pilgrimage to Arabia, Tarray, Persia, and the lidies, always barefoot, and begging, out of pure Devotion to the Saint of Saints, our Great Prophet Mahomet.

I address this Letter to thee; Thee, who bearest the Sears of five and twenty great Wounds; Thee, who hast prayed nine and Fifty Times in the Sacred Porch, and adored the Holy Misteries in the most retired Santhury of Mecha, and hast lived more than seventy Years of Religion amongst the Derusses, where thy Meric caused thee to be elected Saperin of the Convent in Natolia.

Thou knowest well, that I serve him, who is Arbitrator of the Destiny of the Universe; I ment the Sultan, Sovereign of the World. Learn who I heard here from the Mouth of Christian, and pardon me, if I have not sufficiently sofwered them, but do not accuse me to have deserved Death, for having feemingly curied our Holy Law, and Him that gave it us; and if I have feemed to reject his Successors, Ali, Ofman and Omar, it was expedient that I (hould commit fome Evil, not to lose the opportunity of doing much Good.

DEVI

Thou knowest well, I am destined to serve; and, that being absolved from all the Perjuries I shall commit, I may transgress the Law by being permitted to lye. That suffices: Read my Letter, and learn how-far their Malice does extend, who are Enemies to our Religion.

în In ure sbet reft

ice.

crea

noft

har

eriu

io i

To instruct thee better in what has happened to me, I must tell thee, that amongst shele Insidels, there is an Order of Religious much in Vogue, called the Company of JESUS; wherein, there is an infinite Company of Men, some more able than others in all forts of Sciences sacred and prophane; and, according to appearance, ought to be very recommendable for the Holine's of their Manners.

These Religious, who are ordinarily called Jefuites, have the Education of the Youth almost in all the Civies of Europe, as well as in the Indies;
and many excellent Wits are brought up in the Seminaries they have established. When they Preach, the People crowd to their Sermons. They are the Confessor of almost all the Princes and Monarchs of Christendon, who discover to them their weaknesses, their Sins, and the Vices whereunto they are enclined; and receive from them, upon their Knees, like Slaves, such Penance as they think six to impose on them.

A Man may fay of them, That being Difpenfers of Penances, they are also the Masters of Recompences. They are Habited in a long Vest of black Wool, which descends to their Heels. They go not bare-foot, but their Vestments are simple. They observe great Modesty in all their Actions, they march with Gravity, never go alone, and suffer not their Beards to grow. They apply themfelves to edify the Good, and to correct the Bad.

C 2

The Founder of this Order was a Souldier, called Ignatius. The Spaniards will have him to have been of their Nation; and the French affirm, that he is of that Part of Navarre, which is subject to the Crown of France. If thou wouldst have me to speak the Truth, I think this Founder was a good Man, seeing all his Disciples are Men of Good Example, of great Modesty in their Actions, and very Discreet in all their Undertakings.

This Ignatius began to fludy his Grammar in his Seven and Thirtieth Year, which would make one believe, he rook less Pains to become a Saint than a Scholar. His Enemies call his Disciples, the Politicians of the Church; and I, on the contrary, weall them the Camels of Elan; because in bearing the Burthen of the Affairs of their Religion, they are loaded more than others, and forced to couch under their Burthens. There is one thing feems ftrange in them, to wit, that they should name themselves the Religious of the Society of Fesus; as of they had a defign, to diftinguish themselves from other Christians; and that this Title, which is particular to them, ought not only to agree to all the other Religious, but to all the Followers of the Nazarite.

If they follow the Precepts of their Father Ignatius, thou must needs approve their way of living. He has raught no other way than that of obedience, to those that profess his Order. He ordain, That those who enter into this Society, do abandon themselves to the Discretion of their Superiours: And they affirm, That if the Pope commands them to pass the Sea in a Vessel without Oars, without Sails, and without a Rudder, they would obey and must pass. And some having reproached them that there was Folly in such blind Obedi-

once: They answer, That Wisdom ought to be observed in the Commandments, and that it ought not to be searched in Obedience. Make Reflections upon this Sentence, which is conformable to our Laws.

To inform thee of the Power and Greatness of this Order, it suffices to tell thee, That during Sixteen Years that this Souldier governed it, he saw an Hundred Colleges in Italy, in Germany, in France, and in Spain; and that in Rome, which was sounded by Borgia, hath been, as may be said, the Parent of all the rest. Judge hereby the Number of their Houses, and Disciples.

Having one Day met with one of this Society who understood the Oriental Languager: and who converting with me, did not believe he difcourfed with a Muffilman: I heard him vomit injurious, and fearful Imprecations against Mahomet, against his Law, and against all true Believers. have fo much Horror to write to thee all he faid, that I will tell thee but fome few of them; and the rather to divert thee, by the knowledge of the Errors of our Enemies; and alfo, that thou mayft not be afflicted at fome Things not very reasonable, which are observed in mamy of the Precepts of the Law, which we llow. Let this be faid, as if I had not spokenit, feeing I pour frankly the Secrets of my Heart into thy Bolom; no ways doubting, but thou knowest to be silent in what may cause my Death. This Jesuit maintains, That the follalmans are not Wife in following the Precopes of a Drunkard, who forbed drinking of Wine, and committed Excelles himself, when he thought he was unobserved. He maintains further. That it is foolish to give Credit tofuch a Fellow, who makes a Paradife to confift of Beautiful Women, where one may abondon himfelf to all forts of Pleafure and Debauchery, and that he hath not foreseen a Hell, where he, and all his Followers, ought to suffer the Pains due to their Grimes. He adds further, That one must be very foolish to adore a Blasphe, mer, who hath commanded his Law should be maintained by the Sword, when it could not be supported by Reason.

The Father did not leave off fo; he faid, That feeing the Alcoran is filled with Dreams, with Bestialities, with Blasphemies and Impuritiers the Mufris, the Doctors and Interpreters of the Law, must be in a great Blindness, not to condemn a Polleffed, an Enchanter, who gives for the Precepts of his Religion the committing of Violences, Robberies, and all that may fatisfie the most Irregular Apperires. What Extravagancy, arged he, to adore the Heel of fo vile a Slave as Mahomet, and to believe, upon his Report, that Jacob's Father was his Porter, to Deihe his Camely and to place it in Heaven! He adds further. That there is nothing to ablurd, as ro command the Tarks to wash their Bodies. when their Souls are defiled with Filth; to give them at the fame time Charity by Precept, and to command them Robberies by Devotion. It feems also to him foolish, to believe that Mahomet is the only True Prophet, the only agreeable Person to God; and to Swear afterwards by One Hundred and Twenty Four Thousand Prophets. He still entertains me with this force of Discourses a Barbara and the control

But allichis (O great Dervis) is nothing; he vo

def

Die

m

be

afi

Dî

dé

ma

fta

of

if t

edit Wretches, and the most detestable that ever liv'd, were Judas, Mahomer, and Luther; That these two last, as most impious, are the more rormented in Hell. Judas, he said, suffered less pains, because if he betrayed his Lord, he was one of the list, uments of the Redemption of all Mankind; whereas the others in damning themselves, damn'd also an infinite Number of other People. This Jesus would have continued his Blasphemies, it Cardinal Richiten, in whose Anti-Chamber we were, had nor come out of his Closer, to go to the King.

Thad been filent all this while, becaple he gave me not a moments liberty to speak. At length, he asked me at parting, If I was not of his Sentiments, and I answered precisely thus; My Father, If thou are a good Man, I approve what thou say it, because thou speakest out of true Zeal; bur, If thou beest a Hypocrite, I disapprove all; because thou shall be damned with Mahomet, and all the Muffulmans.

The Jesist smiled, not comprehending the Venom which lay hid in my Answer. But, dost thou not believe, thou, who art a Dervis. the most illuminated, That a Man, of what Religion soever he be, provided he be a good Man, may be Happy after his Death? Tell me, I pray thee, thy Opinion herein; it is a Point very important to be decided.

As for me, I begin really to think, That there may be Saints, even amongst the Christians, as there are amongst Us. I have seen and understand many Things that denote true Piety in some of them; and we must acknowledge, That the Precepts of their Law have somewhat of Just; and if they be well observed, they seem no less Holy to me than our own. They have one Article that pazzles me. They affirm, There is but one Truth, fo that we are loft, if we are not Christians, or they are damned, if they are not Mahometans.

And this is what I had to fay to thee in this Matter; but, I shall not end this Discourse, without some violent Scruples of Conscience. Pray the Great Gad with me, That he will illuminate my Understanding with inward Lights, until the Man promised by our Holy Prophet; the Man, I say, who ought to be born of his Race, be descended upon the Earth; who is to see all Kings humbled in his Presence, and to unite with Jesu the Two

Religious that they may make but One.

In the mean Time let us live as honest Men. who have Sin in horror, like the Plague, which poifons the Soul; and apply our felves, as much as in us lies, to what is truly Good; and above all things, let us carefully observe this Precept, write in the Book of their Lam, but is not always imprinced in their Hearrs, Never do to others, no not thy Enemies, that which then wouldst not have done to aby felf. A Duke of Guife gave an Example of this to ell France; and 'tis what thou oughteft so preach in the vaft Empire of the Muffulmans. This Prince surprized a Villain that would have Affallinated him, who confessed that the Interest of his Religion (which was that of Calvin) had obliged him to form a Defign to take him away, to deliver himself, and those of his Parry, from so great an Enemy. The Duke, inflead of caufing him to fuffer the Pains due to fo black an Enterprife, Pardoned him, concerning himfolf to tell him, Friend, If thy Religion Obliged thee to Kill me, without bearing me, my Religión Obliges me to give thee thy Life and Liberty, now I have heard thee : Go thy mays, and amend the felf. This Prince was then General of Charles the IX's Army.

Sage Bedredin, our Mahomet never shewed such

Law

W

fo

in

an

Law this Precept against Christians, that had never Offended him; When you Encounter the Infidels, bill them, and cut off their Heads, imprison them, and keep them in Chains, until they have paid their Ransons, or till you find it requisite to set them at Liberty. Persecute them until they have all submitted, or are intirely overthrown.

Observe in this Letter, what may be of use to thee Pardon my Friendship, the frank Manner of Writing, and remember Mahmut in thy Prayers, who personates a Christian, and in his Heart a most faithful Mussummen. If it be in thy Power to succour me, never do me any Injury. God protest and govern thy great Age to the last Moment.

Paris, 28th. of the 2d. Moon, of the Year 1638.

Ø,

1

ė

h

LETTER XII.

To Chirurgi Muhammet Baffa:

THE Queen is with Child, when least expected, which occasions much Joy at Court, especially to the King; who, after so many Years of Marriage, will become a Father.

Thou, who hast applied thy self so long to the Studies of Astrology in the Schools of Egypt, yet makest Protession of this Divine Art, which discovers thee Things the most hidden to thee; who readest so learnedly in the Book of Heaven, whatever the Stars have traced there, who hast sound the Moment of their Alsing and Disappearing, with the Intervals between their Motion quicker

C

fo that we are loft, if we are not Christians, or they are damned, if they are not Mahometans.

And this is what I had to fay to thee in this Matter; but, I shall not end this Discourse, without some violent Scruples of Conscience. Pray the Great Gad with me, That he will illuminate my Understanding with inward Lights, until the Man promised by our Holy Prophet; the Man, I say, who ought to be born of his Race, be descended upon the Earth; who is to see all Kings humbled in his Presence, and to unite with Julis the Two

Religious that they may make but One.

In the mean Time let us live as honest Men. who have Sin in horror, like the Plague, which poifons the Soul; and apply our felves, as much as in us lies, to what is truly Good; and above all things, let us carefully observe this Precept, writprinted in their Hearrs, Never do to others, no not thy Enemies, that which thou wouldst not have done to thy felf. A Duke of Guife gave an Example of this to all France; and 'tis what thou oughteft so preach in the valt Empire of the Muffulmans. This Prince furprized a Villain that would have Affaffineted him, who confessed that the Interest of his Religion (which was that of Calvin) had obliged him to form a Defign to take him away, to deliver himself, and those of his Parry, from so great an Enemy. The Duke, instead of causing him to fuffer the Pains due to fo black an Enterprife, Pardoned him, contenting himfolf to tell mim, Friend, If the Religion Obliged thee to Kill me, without bearing me, my Religion Obliges me to give thee thy Life and Liberty, now I have heard thee: Go thy mays, and amend thy felf. This Prince was shen General of Charles the IX's Army.

Sage Bedredin, our Mahomes never shewed such

Sage Bestredin, our Mahomet never shewed such generous Sentiments, when he prescribed in his Law this Precept against Christians, that had never Offended him? When you Encounter the Insidels, bill them, and cut off their Heads, imprison them, and keep them in Chains, until they have paid their Ransoms, or till you find it requisive to set them at Liberty. Persecute them until they have all submitted, or are intirely overthrown.

Observe in this Letter, what may be of use to thee. Pardon my Friendship, the frank Manner of Writing, and remember Mahmut in thy Prayers, who personates a Christian, and in his Heart a most faithful Mussumman. If it be in thy Power to succour me, never do me any Injury. God protect and govern thy great Age to the last Moment.

Paris, 28th. of the 2d. Moon, of the Year 1638.

LETTER XII.

To Chirurgi Muhammet Baffa.

THE Queen is with Child, when least expected, which occasions much Joy at Court, ofpecially to the King; who, after so many Years of Marriage, will become a Father.

Thou, who hast applied thy self so long to the Studies of Astrology in the Schools of Egypt, yet makest Protession of this Divine Art, which discovers thee Things the most hidden to thee; who readest so learnedly in the Book of Heaven, whatever the Stars have traced there, who hast sound the Moment of their Alsing and Disappearing, with the Intervals between these two simes, and the Causes which render their Motion quicker

CS

or flower; thou who penetratest into the most hidden Secrets of Men, and knowest the Seasons of Famine, of Shipwracks, of Victories, and of loss of Battels: Divine in God's Name, Great Interpreter of the Secrets of Nature, wifer than Albumazar and Ptolomy, what will become of this Impregnation; and whether it be true, that this Child that's to be born, has been more than two Hundred and Sevency Moons in forming?

If thou believest what I writ last to thee to be

If thou believest what I writ last to thee to be impossible, say nothing of it; it would be no Credit to me, to pass for the Author of a Novel, that has no grounds of Truth.

The City of Paris is in an inconceivable Joy: and this Joy is foread all over France. Thou may'ft perceive by that, the Passion of this People to see their King a Father. 'Tis true, they have much to hope by it; but it is as certain, they have yet much to apprehend, seeing all their Hopes vanish in an instant.

Nature uses all her Power when the forms a Man, the most perfect of all Greatures. But, there needs but a slight Fall, to destroy this Workmanship before it is finished, as well as after.

I have heard a great many People question much the Sex and Life of that which will be born

All the Conversation at the Court, at Paris, and in all the Kingdom, is no more of Wars, of Leagues of Peace, or Naval Preparations; they all rowl upon the bringing to Bed of Women.

There will be other reasoning in some small time in Christendom; and even amongst us, if the Queen do not miscarry; France being no less considerable amongst other Kingdoms, than the Bourbane are amongst Men. Henry IV. who introduced the Grown into this Branch of the Family, was a Prince very brave; and if we live long enough to see his

Grand-

ma

.

5

18

c

Grand Children, we shall see, whether they will have as much Courage as the Chief of their Family.

As for thee, thou wilt have wherewith to divert thee, and exercife thy Talent, if this Queen be brought to Bed happily of a Prince. I shall in the mean time be very exact to mark, not only the Days and Hours, but the least Mioutes; to the End thou may'll know, by the Situation of the Planets, which ordinarily regulate the inclinations of Men, in what manner, a Prince fo long expected, will regulate his Affairs, and consequently those of others.

It is a great while fince we have had any Commerce here with the Sun, there being forty nine Days fince this beauteous Planet appeared to us; and the Gold is so violent, that it has changed (as I may say) the Wavers of the Seine, a large River, into Chrystal. Do not look upon these Effects as extraordinary; it happens here frequent enough; for, when the Days are shortest, the Cold is most intense. Thou knowest, that this Climate is very inconstant. I have often seen, in a little space of Time, Rain, Hail, Snow, and terrible Winds; and presently after, the Air become Fair and Serenc. This inconstancy of the Climate, has its Advantages; for, if the fair Weather do not last long, the foul is also of less Duration.

Fail not, upon the Receipt of my Letter, to communicate the News I fend thee, to the Grand Vizir, without reliing him the Reflections which I make. They are of no ule to fuch great Ministers; particularly by us, who are in comparison of them, but vile Slaves, always subject to the Septences they pronounce of us.

Love me, and consult the Stars to know, whether thou will be always Faithful to me; and, if it be by Force or Inclination.

As for my felf, I assure thee, that following the unclination of my Heart, I will conserve thee that Fidelity which I owe by Obligation.

Paris, 28th of the 2d Moon, of the Tear 1638.

LETTER XIII.

To Carcoa at Vienna.

THE Raimacham commands me forthwith to fend the Pictures of the Ring of France, the Eldest Son of the Prince of Conde; and of the Cardinal Richtieu. I caused them suddenly to be Copied from the Originals, by an Italian Painter, who passes for one of the best of these Times.

These Three Heads are the principal of France, if not of all Europe: The First, by reason of a great and porent Kingdom, which is this Day more flourishing than all others: The Second by reason of his Nobility or Royal Blood, and by his extraordinary Courage: And the Third, by a Wise Conduct in a Ministry full of Difficulties; being as it were, the absolute Master of Disgraces and Recompences.

As foon as these Pictures are delivered to thee, whole and well conditioned, pay the Express I disspatched to thee, the Sum contained in the Billet, which he will present to thee from me. That done, send the Packet to Constantinople, without loss of time, and address it to the Kaimacham.

I beseech thee order the Business of my Pension so, that I shall not need to desire the Payment of

it. Send me presently what is order'd me for my Subsistence. Nothing in the World appears so terrible to me, as to be obliged to ask.

I have only Moneys for fix days, the I should ear nothing but raw Herbs and Water. Both cost Money here, And every Thing is sold very dear, except Civilities and obliging Terms, which you have for nothing, and whereof they are very liberal. I must live, I must have Cloches, and go to Coart; for all which there must be Bread, Cloth or Serges, and Coach hire.

Thou knowest at present my Wants, suffer me not to languish with Expectation. Thou wilt injure the Emperor, and not Mahmut, if thou dost not readily affift his Stave.

The great God preserve thy Life, if thou does not forget me; and give thee Grace to be Sober, in a Country where People do not always drink. Wine to quench their Thirst.

Paris, 28th of the 3d. Moon, of the Year 1638.

LETTER XIV.

To William Vospel, a Christian of Austria.

I Am obliged to thee for the Confidence thou half in me, in declaring to me thy Loss. Another would have rejoiced in hearing of thy Two Adventures: but, as I do not believe it is a great Evil to lose a Wife, so I cannot think it is a confiderable Good to turn Monk. It is impossible for me to sorbear telling thee, That I find thy

Refo-

Refolation too fudden to approve of it. Thou are not the Cause of the Loss thou hast suffered, and yet recircit into a Concent to do Penance, as if thou haft committed a Crime.

Is it necessary thou torment thy Body for the Death of a Wife, if thou haft not Murchered her? If thou didft love her, because the was Discreer, her Beauty charmed thee, there are enough that may please; but if shou were weary of being a Husband, why are thou then of being a Widower? Tell me, What wilt thou do at prefeat in the Corvent thou art that up in ? The Carmelities are Wife indeed, but know not all Things. It is true, they are very Devout, but not exempted from Sin : Finally, they are Men, and too auffere. How canft thou fo fuddenly according thy felf to that kind of Life thou half cholen, and become at once Chaff and Sober? As for me, who am a Chriflian aschou are, and more restrained in my Plea-fures than thou hast hitherto been, I cannot underfland what I fee in that Order thou art entred into; neither can I figure to my felf, how a Man bare-footed, without a Shirt, covered with a coarse Habit of Wooll, who is no Master of Crowns, and who hath no Armies, should absolutely command not only another Man, but many, who obey blindly what he requires of them.

To live well in thy Order, thou must Fast; the least Faults are not Pardon'd; thou must receive Offences with Thanks: Finally, the Combat is affared and constant, and there is but little Certitude of the Crown which ought to be the Reward. Thy greatest Friend is obliged to betray thue, and thou will be deprived (as it may be said) of the Elements, to make thee defire the use of Water, Air, Earth and Fire. I cannot perfused must self, that there are so many Things required to make a Saint; for, when thou levelt God as much as it is in thy Power to do, and naffell every. Day, as if it were thy laft, I believe thou wile Live and Die a luft Man. Return mean Anfwer, and let me know. If what I write to thee be Conformitable to right Reason; or, that I am deceived in my Opinion. The Friendship I have for thee obliges me to write as I do, and to tell thee all I think that regards thee; because after thou haft taken thy last Resolution, I would rather see thee suffer with Constancy, all the Evils Imaginable, than to fee thee change with Confusion. There are many, who have abandoned with frame, the Places which they entred in Triumph and how many have been pushed by their Despair, to commit Follies which feemed Actions of Piery, which they had never undertaken in their right Wits?

quired

We fee in our Histories. That many great Men have capled themlelves to be Circumcifed, thereby to have Commerce with the Jews, and be inflructed in their Doctrines, finding their Ancient Temple Magnificent, Venerable, Holy and full of Maicity. We also read, That Pythagoras closthed himfelf in white, and fray'd fome time amongft the Safitaries of Mount Carmel, to learn the anfleries of their Religion. His Curiofity was the Occasion of this great Man's Voyage, as their Ignorance had caused the same Design in others. It is not the Defire to be inftructed, which made thee enter into the Convent; the Affliction for the Lois thou hast suffered, made thee take this Resolution. Take heed of quitting it by a Repentance, which would prove an Excess of Folly. The Jews are at prefent Vagabonds, without Law, wirhout a Kingdom, without Altars ; and according to the Alcoran, they will be Metamorpholed into Alles, to carry the Souls of the wicked Mabouerans into Hell. Who knows what will become of the Carmelites?

hey

They say Eliss is not Dead, but is to return to the Earth, to combate those Men who shall rise to trouble the World about the establishing a New Religion. Stay still where thou art, or return presently from whence thou camest; lest after too long a stay, to come out in form, thou complet a Fault, that God will not easily pardon, which will doubtless happen, if thou perswade thy self, that thou canst not find the Way to Heaven, but out of the Noise of this World.

If thou doft not find I advice the well, do thous better; but, above all things, govern thy felf so, that God may not reproach thee one Day, That a Moldavian gave thee good Advice, and thou didstrated it. The worst of Times might give the same Advice that I do, as a good Christian; and it would be no surprizing Thing, if thou Received's better from a Mahometan. Their Barbarians are sufficiently Instructed in Morality, to teach others that which they do not always practise themselves. Vertue and Truth are respected every where. Turn thee from East to West, from the South to the North, thou wilt find on all Sides Impious Men who Blaspheme against the Diety; but, true vertue has that of singular, That she is always Respected, and even by the most Prossigare.

Confole once again thy Forces and thy Conrage, and take a batter Refolution, if thou are not yet well fixed in thy fuft. Thus falutes thee out of this World; and prays Heaven to give thee the Pleasures of the Happy, in thy Solitude, if thou beeft no Hypocrite; and if thou haft not yet Repented of the Refolution thou haft taken.

Paris, 28th of the 3d. Moon, of the Year 1628.

LETTER. XV.

To Ibrahim, who Renounced the Christian Religion.

Thou hast Renounced shy Religion, either to fave thy Life, or for some other Consideration. I do not say this to make thee Scrupulous, but in quality of Resident in this Kingdom, to serve here the Sultan Emperor of both Seas, and of the Two Parts of the Earth, Distributer of all Crowns; the Grandeur of whose Majesty, I beg of God, may last till the last Day of Universal Judgment. I advise thee to take heed, not to sollicite those Insidels, whose Religion thou hast abandon'd, to run the same Course that thou hast done.

Thou hast written to thy Brother, that he is become a Beggar, because he Ronounces his God a Thousand Times at Play; and that thou are at present very Rich, for having Renounced him but Once, and by that thou exhortest him to turn Mulliphan.

I thought good to write to thee, That Souls are not to be gained with a Letter and a fearwy Jeft. Think of becoming a Good Man after thy Change of Religion, and give no Occasion to the Maritians, to fay, That shop are Infamus because thou haft renounced thy Faith, and that we are all damned because we are Mahmetans. If thou dost not approve the Advice I give, I shall be obliged to acquaint the Part with what shall come to my Knowledge; which I shall do with Regres because thou may'st suffer by it.

The Great God make thee rather Wife than Formulate.

Paris, 28th of the 2d. Moon, of the Tear 1638.

with the Sad of the said

LETTER XVI

To Dicheu Huffein Baffa.

A 5 the Knowledge which I shall have of Affairs will augment daily, so I shall have the more Matter to write; and will omit no Occasion to re-mark what occurs, which I will not fail immediately to communicate. Thou who with great Applicacion observest what passeth amongst Men, and art defirous of knowing the most secret Transactions of Potentates; thou may'ft observe, That there are more violent Enemies betwixt the Christian Princes of Europe, than all the other Princes of the World.

I cannot comprehend whence it is, that these Infidels cannot live in Peace; and, perhaps they do not comprehend it themselves. It seems a Decree of Heaven, That Man ought to be contrary to Man; and, that whilft there are Kingdoms there will be Wars and Enmittes.

The Wars which are carried on at prefent in Alface, look as if they would last long. The Death of Gustauus Adulphus, King of Sweden, the second Scourge of the Imperialifis, who was flain Six Years finer, did not terminate the Differences of Germaby; they are greater than ever; and there appears in the New Generals of the Armies, vafter Defigus than those in their Pedecessors. Perhaps they will sevenge the Death of Gustave, who was kill'd, not as the Christians affirm; but by one of the Forry Germans, who had bound themselves by Oath, never to quit their Swords before they had flain him, as the Turkifb Historians do write-

Duke Bernard Weymar, of no less Valour than Gultave, commands the reft of the Swedish Army. with a good Number of French Troops, and many Christian Hercticks of Germany. Victory attends the Arms of this General; and, the Princes which are united for Defence of the Empire, begin to apprehend a Captain, who observes less the Rules of War than the Emotions of his Valour, and whom they perceive seconded by Fortune. Bur, he doth not confider, That in weakning an Emperor, he dorn augment the Forces of a King, who will enjoy the Fruits of his Labours; and suppress him in fpite of his Bravery, when he pleafes. In the mean time, I am of Opinion, That it is our Intereff, that Weymar be always Victorious. It may be faid of him, That he hath fold to France, all bur his Glory, having referred nothing for himself bur Hope.

All that this Duke can conquer from the Germans, is for the French King, who furnishes him with Troops, with Arms, and with Moneys, besides wife Advice. Cardinal Richieu, who is an able States-man, fails not to perswade his Master, That the Places which Weyman shall take in the Empire, with the Army which he commands, are the fsees of his Counsels, and his Majesty's Money. The French begin to preserve their Conquests, and know how to defend the places which are subject:

to their Power.

e

c-ly

1 rt

ns C

cs

d.

ſe

lo

e.

y

re

n

h

ď

rs

4-

in in iii

This Prince makes Acquificions which are in truth of more Importance, than they feem confiderable for their Greatness He took Rhinfeld almost as foon as he had belieged it. The Place was strong, seated bear the Black Forest, where the Garrison was furnished with Abundance of all forts of Amani-

出古い

RA

John de Wert, General of the Imperial Army, had reliev'd it with Nine Regiments of Horfe, and Five Thousand Foor. He defeated Weymar's Horfe, took part of his Baggage and Artillery. The Duke of Roban, a great Captain, and great States-man, was hurt, and taken fighting; and the City relieved with Men, Ammunition, and Victuals, which rendered the taking of it more Glorious.

They write, that two Imperial Generals, the faid John de Wert, which hath fuccoured Rhinfield, Enbenfort, as also Duke Savelli, had been taken in a Combat which prefeded the Rendicion of the Place, befides Thirty Eight Corners, and Nineteen Foot Captains. These Spoils were gained by the Blood of the Swedes, and sent to the French King; who after he had caused them to march through all the Screets of this Great City, commanded them to be hung up in the Principal Church, where I saw and considered them, as Marks of the Triumphs of Policy. The Siege of this Place Jasted but Eighteen Days.

The Duke of Weymar, after this Victory, marched into the Marquifate of Durlach, where he took the Castle of Rotelen, Defended by the King of Margary; in which he found great Store of Provitions, and all torts of Ammunicions, which served greatly for the refreshing of his then needy Army.

In the mean time, Duke Savelli escaped out of Prison, and retired to Lazerne in Switzerland. The Officers that guarded him, were accused of Favouring his Escape, which cost them their Heads.

All I write to thee is most true, and thou may it came my Letters to be enregistered. God grant that Brifas, together with all differen, may full into the French Hands, and that the Emperor of Germany be subjected to the Laws of the Ofmans. Thus

jeeft

feeft the Time come, wherein the French make Conquest, without being present at them. The King of this Nation, appears not only Happy, but is to in reality; all things fucceeding that he undertakes His Queen's being with Child, and the Cardinal's Policy; puzzels the Spaniard, the Empire and Italy it felf. What will happen none knows, but God and Mahomer. 'Tis our Dury to humble our felves. and fay what we fee, and not be fo rath as to peperrate into the Future.

Do what thou canft by thy Intrigues, to augment the Germans Loffes; for the Reasons thou knowest; and particularly to facilitate the Sultan's Conquest in Hungary Assist, in the mean time, the poor and faithful Mahmut, not with the Sword that cuts every thing; but, by good Countel, by which we ordinarily perceive, the Re-union of what the Sword hath separated And I will pray the Most High, that all the Inf-dels bow the Knee before Amurath, and that all that breathe, may enjoy their Lives, but by an Paris, 20th of the 4th Moon, of the Tear 1638.

LETTER

To Ahmer Beig.

T Receive none of thy. Letters; I receive none from the Divan; and I have none from any of my Friends. Italy, where there are fo many p ple proper for War, that Province which hath com manded the World, is at this time troubled b

the Arms of France. The Pape and Venetians, who appear to have the Principal Interest there, make no Advance to divert the Storm that threatens them. Piemont, which belongs to the Duke of Saway, begins to feel the Incommodities that War draws alway wish it. That State is in the midst of the Spaniards, who artack it, and the French ruine it in defending it.

Theie last cannot abandon the Interest of the House of Savoy, the Durchels being their King's Sifter, and her Children his Nephews. The French are already firong on that fide, having a great Garrison in Pignerol, a Place very considerable which they call one of the Gates of Italy, whereof they have been Maîters fince the Year 1621, and their Power will much encrease, by the Accession of the Fort of Breme, which may be termed a Rampart, covering Caral and Percelle, and which also defends both Montferrat and Piemont. The Marquill of Leganez, Governour of Milan, having rendred himself Master of the Field, had laid Siege to Breme; and Marshal Crequi, having in the Name of the King his Mafter, undertaken the Defence o the young Duke of Savey, opposed the Deligns of the Spaniards. 'Tis believed the War will be cruel in this Quarter; being these are very strong and the other very expert.

Thou shalt know the Event. In the mean time, all the Assairs of the French do not appear so Fortunate in Italy; and, at this Hour that I write to thee, the Court laments the Loss of the General that commanded their Armies in that Country.

There is certain News of the Death of Mafhal Erequi, who was flot with a Cannot Bullet through the Body, as he was going to view the Spaniards Works before Breme. This loss was by to much the more sensible to the French, in that

let

they faw their Enemies make fuch great Rejoicings

All Men conclude, this Crequi was both a good Souldier, and a good Captain; a Wife Man, and of Excellent Conduct. He had acquired great Repuration, for the King his Master, in Italy. He slew Don Philip, Ballard of Savoy, who challenged him in the Sight of Two Armies. He several Times defeated his Sovereign's Enemies in Montferrat, and in Piemt, and beat back the Duke of Feria to the Gares of Milan. There remains no more of this Great Man, who did so many brave Things, but the bure remembrance of 'em-

Scarce any thing of his Body, fave his Entrails was left for his Soldiers to celebrate his Obsequies with His Soul is before the Throne of God; his Friends housing his Memory with their Elogies: his Kindred wours for him, his Sovereign praises him, and his caldings crown his Tomb with Herbs

and Flowe

b

8

e, 1-00 g-0-1-05 inc

The Italian tognighly upon this Occasion, That half has been fare to the Fiench, and that it will be fordways. They affirm, That the Duke of Sano will lole his Effare, if defeated by his Enemies, which he will likewife do by the Victory of his Friends. But, thefe are the Conjectures and ordinary Reasonings of Men, which I write to thee the end thou may it not only know what is done, but also the Discourses which are entertained upon the Events that heppen. We shall shortly have News of the Siege of Bremen; in the mean time, it imforts the French much, to conserve the Opinion had of their Valour and Goodness.

The Rufinels in hand is to defend a great and Muffeious House, which moreover pretends to the Sovereignty of the Kingdom of Cyprus, troubled by the Ambition of Kindred, and the Politicis of the Spaniards. These Ingagements import much to fe

1

A

H

Al

H

A

Bo

I

PO

pla

ha

Princes, who have as many Maxims as differing Interests; but, we have nothing to do with the Differences of others.

Mr.y it please God, that our Affairs be always attended with an Equality of good Luck, for the Ruine of these Insidels. Be thou constant in the Friendship thou promised it me, and always faithful to the Friend, who recommends himself to thee, as the Law obliges thee to be to thy Sovereign.

Paris, 20th of the 4th Mon, of the Year 1638.

LETTER XVIII.

To Berber Multapha Mgs.

This Day entertained a Man which came from Italy, and hath ferved in the French Troops. He gives this Account of the Death of Marshal Creque.

The 17th of this Moon, this General having approached the Lines of the Spaniards, to view their Works, and to Fight them, in case he judged it Expedient, a Gannon-Buller saparated his Body in Two, and the Bullet being taken up, they were surprised to see a Cross graved upon it, about which were also engraved Letters, which made these two Words, TO CREQUI. This Bullet, the Gross, and the Letters, caused no less Assonishment, than the Death of This Captain did Sparow, and every Body spoke his Sentiment of it.

and every Body spoke his Sentiment of it.

Many creat the Spaniards as Magicians and Sorcerers. Those who are perswaded of the Power of Negromany, affirm. That the Devil can carry a Bulke to the Place whither 'ris defigned: Others are of a contrary Sentiment, and believe, there is no Power without the Commandment of the Great God. There are others, who believe neither Charms nor Characters, nor Magick; who, despiting all these Superstitions, attribute all to Destiny; and I believe the same. Achmet Celebi explains this perfectly well in his Journal, which begins in the One Thomand and Twenty Sixth Year of our Hegira; when he affirms, that all Things which pass here below, are effected by the Orders of Heaven. 'We cannot doubt (says he) but the Events which we 'see, are the Effects of the Will of God; yet we must believe, he suffers all Things to happen by Second Caules.

Had not Sultan Ofman irritated the Janizaries, and Spahi's, by throwing them into the River alive, when he ran disguised through the Screets of Confiantinople, and found them drinking Wine in Taverus; And had he not published his Design of Reforming this Militia, and transporting the Imperial Seat elsewhere, he had not perhaps been murthered with fo much Ignominy.

He thought he saw our Great Prophet snatching the Alexan, which he was then reading, out of his Hand; and taking from him by Force, his Coat of Arms; and striking him down with such a great Box on the Ear, that he could not get up again. Thou knowest he consulted the Astrologers, and Interpreters of Dreams thereupon. I will not report what he, who was his Preceptor, said for it was plain. Flattery: But we saw, what was forestold by the Astrologers came punchally to pass. These had forestold, That the Emperor should never see the Feast of Ramezan; because the Star which presided at his Birth, was much obscured in its Conjunction junction with the Planet, that was then Predominant; which made em affirm, he would die in a very little time. The Ignominy wherewith his Death was accompanied, was an effect of Defin; for, never any of the Ofmans suffered so much Shame. He had several times seen the faral Cord about his Neck without dying. A Soldier, in charity, lent him his Hankerchief to cover his Head, which was without a Turbant.

He faid, all in Tears, to his Murtherers, To faw this Morning your Emperor upon the Throne, and this Evening you are for throwing him into a Dung Care, designed to carry Dirt into the Sea: Ton cannot live always, and God will require a Reason for this Cruelty. Thou knowest, his resisting of those that strangled him, caused him to suffer much Pain. They took hold of him by the Secret Parts; and one of his Ears was cut off, and catried to the Valide, who expected the News of his Death. The will of God appears in this Adventure; as also, the Power of Second Causes. Thou may stee all this in that Journal of Abmet. Had not Marshal Crequi been in the Wars, he had not perhaps ended his Days by a violent Death; and had he not been so rash is to approach too near to the Enemies Works, the statal Bullet had not touched him.

We fee hereby an Effect of God's Will accompanied with our Confent; because we fearch by our own Choice, that which we might avoid.

In the mean time, accuse me not of Ignorance, or Superstition, if I have been long in entertaining thee, upon a Marter in Action, betwint Man and the Devik. Thou knowest, that by Magick Art, we number the Twelve Spirits of Angels, which preside over each of the Signs of the Zadiack, which govern the Nations, People, and Cries committed to their Care. In like Manner, in the feeret Cabala of the Jews, by the Twelve Angrams of the great Name of God; and, according to the Colour of the Scones where these Anagrams were Engraved, they judged of the Future; performing thereby Things very astonishing. They have subjected our Bodies to these Twelve Signs, and divided them into Twelve Principal Members. But, how many surprizing Things are done with the Number Seven, to which they have applied the Seven Planets; by Means whereof, they discover the Severe of the good or evil Fortune of Men's Add to this, the Invocation of Spirits, and the Power of Figures, of Words, of Herbs, of Writings, of holy Characters, and so many other Inchantments, wherewith they consult the Black Angels; and thou will find, that Men'do many Wonders by this Art, which they cannot do without Supernatural Affiffance.

S

h

16

t,]-

y.

d

k

115

10

6d

of

r-

in 15

he

m.

ce,

in-lán

lt,

tie

of

The fittle Bits of Paper, cut Triangular-wife, which Tockta Cham, the King of Perfia's Embaffador caused to be thrown in the Night, round about the Imperial Tent of the Great Vizir Afis, (in each of which there was a certain word writ) wrought more confiderable Effects, than the Spaniara's Tuchanted Bullet, which killed Marshal Creput. The Ottoman Army revolted the Day following, as if possessed with Furies. The most Seditions took and bound the Vizir, and made him raise the Siege of Babylon. And the King of Perfia, who had already dismissed Mustapha Aga, our Envoy, with the Treaty, whereby he Surrendred this Place, being advertised of the precipitate Retreat of our Army, caused Mustapha to be called back; rearing the Treaty he had given him, in his presence; and bad him tell his General, He could not do so shameful an Action, as to furrender so important a Place, toan Army that was running away.

Hast thou ever heard of any thing so strange? Read this Ahmet Celibi's Book, and thou wilt see, that all these Prodigies arrived in one Day. The Historian makes no Judgment upon this Adventure; he only reports it; neither do I believe it was an Effect of the Enchantment of these Bits of Paper, and the Characters contained in them; because it is certain out Army was greatly presed with Hunger. But in Effect, when Adulaba, all in Tears, reproached the Vizir. That it he had gained but two Days time, he had made a Peace equal to a Victory. This answered him, How couldst thou with thy Tears, retain an Army possessed with all the Devils of Hell, and resolved to be gone?

If thou finish the reading of so long a Letter, accuse thy Parience, and reproach not me with tediouspels for having writ many things to thee worthy of being known. After the Death of the French General, Breme was presently delivered to the Saniards, by the Gowardliness of the Governor, who incurred, in time a rigorous Destiny for it; having his Head cut off at Casal, where they had imprisoned him.

The Great God preferve thee and thine for every and protect thee against the ill-will of those that do not love thee.

Paris, 20th, of the 4th. Moon,
of the Tear 1638.

And the Richard Poly of the had already duting on Market Preaduting on Markets aga, on Lavoy, with the Treaty whereby he are ended this Place, being adveryied had the are eighted had a cour Arnly, council Markets as he called had a rearing the Treaty he had given him, in his prefences and had him tell in the rear the court and do to limit?

LETTER

Hall thou ever beend of any thing to drange !

Asserted to the transfer

ten wae uncleanette at all

EETTER XIX.

To Murae Baffa.

THE Dutchess Downger of Savoy, finds here felf extremely prefled by the continual incursions which the Spaniards make into Piemont 3, they having belieged Vercelle, a Place which covers the Country on the Side of Milan.

She her felf appears on Horseback, with great Contage, being resolved to remove what is loft, as well as to defend the rest, which is in some danger; having joined her best Troops with great

Diligence, to those of France.

A Cardinal, which they call the Cardinal la Valette, commands in the Place of Marshal Crequi, those Troops of France, which confist of Twelve Thousand Foot, and Four Thousand Horse.

Thou dolt not know, perhaps, what thele Cardinals are: They be the principal Priefts of the Roman Church. Their Profession is not to command Armies, though that sometimes happens, either through want of sage Captains, which these Installed Rings may sometime stand in need of; or for other secret Reasons, which are not always easie to penetrate, and must be of great Importance. France not wanting sit Seculars. A Roman Most, called Innocent IV. gave the Purple Habit to these Priests, and obliged them to wear Red Hats, Caps, and Bonnets, that this Colour might always put them in mind, they ought to shed their Blood for the Service of their Church and Religion.

I have been told, that formerly that there were but Five and Twenty, and now their Number is faid to be Seventy Two; which is that of the Difciples of the Christian Messas; but, they are seldom compleat. I was defirous of being precifely informed, what the Dignity of a Cardinal is; and an old Phyfician, that feems an honest Man, instructs me in all chings, that regard the Religion, and Politicks of the Christians. He is such an Enemy to the Circumcision, that he gives often the uncleanest of all Meats to his Patients, such as we think unwhole-some, and cannot be easen without Sin.

Thou that art a States-man, and obliged to affift at Council, and in the Divan, ought to know more Things than others, and those more per-featly.

I will inform my felf, with Care, of the Life, Actions, and Genius of this Cardinal la Valette, to know, whether the King, his Master, has any other reason than that of his Valour and Experience in War, to make use of a Priest in his Armies, to shed Blood and ruine People; for, I never heard the Massaurans did ever make use of a Cheik, to command the Armies of the Empire: Besides, they are without Experience, Fearful, and Superstitions.

The Spaniards are more powerful in Infantry, and Cavalry, having Eighteen Thouland Foot, and Five Thouland Horse, whereby they pretend to render themselves Masters of Piemont, and drive the French wholly out of Raly. The Marquis of Leganez, Governour of Milan, affirms, That his king will not suffer the Children of the late Duke of Ravoy, to be under the Protection of Strangers. He says, That Pignerol, and other Places in the Power of the French, were usurped upon the House of Savoy, and must be restored. They affirm, That the House of Austria will hinder the Widow, her Children, and Subjects from being Oppressed.

Behold here an Example of the fingular Piety of the Spaniards, in Favour of a Widow and her Children, and on the other fide, admire the Kindness of the French, who fight against these same Spaniards, for the conservation of that which concerns neither of them. It will be difficult to difeover thefe fecres Myfteries. Every Prince Ducs a value upon his Reasons, as he does upon his Mony asid to rading a great namber of then you

The Dutchels of Savoy came accompanied with a great number of Ladies, and the greatest of her Court. She was on Horseback, at the Head of all the Company, both Horfe and Foot, and harangued

the Army amidft the Battalions and all and allow

She conjured, not only the Capeains, but even the Corporals, and private Souldiers, not to abandon her Defence. She shewed all the Sentiments of Grief, that a Person of Courage could have, in feeing her felf exposed to lose her Estate; or to fee her Children, in a manner, Captives; and upon this Occasion, the failed nor to mingle Torrents of Vears with the most charming Expresfions, which is ordinarily the flrengest Eloquence percer Percence to attach distillation of women.

The Army being fenfible of the Durchefa's Misfortune, which the had reprefented with all Postible Earneftness; the Cardinal Valette caused it to discamp to relieve Vercelle. He forced the Spaniards Lines, and put Two Thousand Men into the Place. The Belieged , fortified with Succours, made a great Sally, and much Infidel Blood was fhed onboth Sides. But all that the Cardinal could de, with his Care, and the Durchels with her Tears. could not hinder Vercelle to fall into the Hands of the Spaniards. 'Tis faid, that the Commander of this Place, and his Garrison, defended themselves. to the last Extremity , and having no more Powder or Lead, they fought at pulh of Piker wish Stones; and finally, when all was gone, with their with, coiled the Reformed. His Body washinBut this is not believed here, it being alledged, that the Governour, or the General, did not do their Dury. The Cardinal, fay they, failed in his Ducy alfo; for, knowing they wanted Ammunition, yet he did not fend it, though he found means to put into the place such a great number of Men. But the Governour is blamed yet more, that did not difcover this his Necessity to the General.

I tell thee all these Particulars to inform thee of the Manner how the French make War; many of whose Over-fights would coft us our Lives.

There marched out of Vercelle, Four Thouland Men bearing Arms. Thence thou mayest judge, that our Generals are not cruel, when they cause the Heads of Commanders to be taken off, that behave themfelves foill.

The Princes of Mantue, who has loft her Husband, would, they tay, marry a Prince of the House of Auftria, catted the Cardinal Infant, which is so Bifect of the Policy of the Spiniarity to have a better Pretence to attack Moniferrat, and drive Duke of Mannua, who was Sovereign thereof.

The valiant Duke of Roan, is at length dead in a Castle near Berne. I think I writ he was hare, and taken Priloner in the Battel fought by the Sweder against the Germans, He wat in the Sixty Biglish Year of his Age, and was very toafiderable for his Erudicion, Valour and Experience in War. He was bred a Soldier from his Youth; was always employed in Military Affairs, and had often commanded Armies. He supported, by his Bravery and Experience, for a long time, the Remains of a feeble and dying Parry, ugainft the Power of the King! He was illustrious by the Greatness of his House; and his Religion was that for the Calainists, called the Reformed. His Body was Embalmed, and afterwards brought to Geneva, with

L

d.

in

CY

et

11

at

if-

of

of

d

at

e

8

e

1

with great Magnificence and Warlike Pompi to This City is the Rorreas of Such as the Church of Rome calls Hereticket, who are all well received here; which gives great Occasion of Complaint to the Pope's Partizuns I how reasonably & will not prefome to determine; but, there appears to me much . more Splendor in the Geremonies of those of the Catholick Church, and they presend to greater Vertue and Antiquity low on the sort Officers

Thefe are the Transactions in Italy which came to my Knowledge: It will not fail so write what palled in Germany thele lift Moone, at food as I have the Certainty of them gain axe le vinedid

Pray God the many Differences and Wars, which are amongst the Infidels, may never end; that Italy may be humbled even to the Stirrop of the Monte, on which rides the Great Emperor of the Elable God, the faithful Mulfulmans ; and, that all Ociminy adore the Sacred Porch of Methan 1 finds

fipray God fipport thee always that thou never fall and fo conduct thee, that thou never goeft aftray. 1300 and to post white some three

Thorfand things which carry Repeated along Paris, 20th of the 4th Moon, The Philotophy of the Stricks Minast adulated during my Carcielty, cave my to underfland, of what Importance is is, for a Man to know himich

with them

Thou mail remember, perhapse in the Seguning LETTER XX ता वहरतात्व शेक्ष वर्ष

han taguin To Danes Oglow minned vin

Wetching did not were yind, provided I employed THE Condition I am in at present, makes me - barlink of thold long and redious days we part fed toperlier an Palermo, in Slavery, How fruitles whre the Tears, which the Irkformels of our Captivicy made as fled ? yet nothing below as but what a STORE D. c

What is common to other Men: But, thou wert too Young to support it, and I had not Experience consign of the World, to conceive the Unhappiness

whereanto Foreine had reduced me. 75

Thou are at prefent, at Conftantinople, where thou haft all thy Heart can defire, and I at Paris, where I have a Thousand things to take Care for. Confrantimple and Paris, are indeed, Two of the greatest Cities in the World; but, much differing in manner of Living Clothes, Language, and Resigion in Thon are at present in the midft of Pleafurespowithely Friends, Children, Wife, with the Liberty of exercifing thy Religion, which is the True one; and that, and in the Mosques, which our Fathers eftablished: Moreover, thou are elevated in Dignity .. I on the contrary, am amongst Infidella amongst Idolaters and Hereticks; obliged to ine lividica Nation much differing from Ours in their Inclinations and Gustoms Finally, I live amongfirthe Devills Peacocks. The excellive Liberty they give themselves, is not such as is enjoyed with true Satisfaction of Mind; feeing they do a Thousand things which carry Repentance along with them. Paris, com or the arm store, or

The Philosophy of the Stoicles, which I learned during my Captivity, gave me to understand, of what Importance it is, for a Man to know himself. Thou maist remember, perhaps, in the Beginning of our Slavery, that thy Master and mine, were no less opposite in their manner of living, than our Genius's were differing.

My Enquiry was after Books and Writings; and Watching did not weary me, provided I employed a in terming formewhat. On the contrary, thou being always employed with different Handyworks, didff little think, that Heaven had defigued thee to wear a Sword, and confequently, to the Employments of Was.

How

How many Things did we fuffer in those Days whereat we do now laugh? Thou were always chained; and I in Prilon, in a Den; thou were beaten, because thou wouldst not read; and I was banged to Pieces, because I would not embroider. to addition supplies of a special too

Dèc

es

100 ere ris.

or.

the

Bg

ir.

he

he ur

od fi-

to in

re

r-

d

2

g

d

The reading of Senera, could not induce me to pardon my Mafter the Baftinado's he gave me. That which I endured, was greater than the Pains which thou didft fuffer; I was persecuted for the Pleasure I rook in Reading; and they would oblige thee to fludy; whereas thy Inclinations were quite different from mine.

This hardship made me resolve to hide my felf in a Geller, without Bread, and without Water. I had nothing but my Senece with me; and I was . refolved to deliver my felf from my Servicude by Death's fo far had this Smith perswaded me nor to lives Thou and fo near Death (quoch he) and in the mean time att a Slave. Judge the Force of my Tempración , by the Authority of this Great Man. While I was thus hid, my Muster Carched me in vain, in the Garden, the Stable, the Kitchin, and had no tes Paint to find me, than I had to hide my felf from him. "But, he length I chole the better Part; which was to live, and to forgive. -IMy Mafter owes his Life to Senecu; he taught me lo well'to forget Offences, that my Defpair changed into Respect. I had no more mind to die. I felt my Courage fail, and Fear made me pardon my Mafter. Thou hadfi no knowledge of the Adventure because Pavenounce the Country. whichou wast ransomed swhile I avas out of Par laine of was to very intent open my Studies, that my Mafter, vanquished by my Obstinacy, gave me Etherina colapsto my felfred diems being himfelf allumed to continue ignorably while I dreame of withing but of improving my Minde: , dans . 3

Dive

In the Course of Four Years and Four Moons, that my Captivity lasted, Nero's Master gave me the first Tincture of Morality; and after that, I went into the Academies, where I writ the Journal of my Life. Plutarch, Livy and Tacitus, made me forget the odious Names of Master and Slave.

The Examples of so many Great Men, whole Histories we find there; of so many Emperors, Kings, Captains, Mallers or Slaves of their Passions; Some dead by the Hands of their Friends by Poylon, others by the Sword and Surprize; others, perfected by their Fashers or their Sons; sometimes by their Wives, and often by their Native Country and Slaves, so often saved and defended by themselves; disposed me to suffer patiently the State whereanto I was reduced; and to acknowledge. That the honest Man is never a Slave, where ever he is, when he can find his Maller within himself. I had time then to do a Thousand good Things, which I should never have done if I had not been in the Condition. I then found my felf in Consider how much we learn by Books, and more yet by the Disgraces that happen to us. We feethe Allas in a Berspective, and the Good in Lieste. Disgraces afflict us when they happen, and good Fortune when it leaves us. When I was an my House I lived at rest, because I famine Serving; and now I am in Service. I am in continual tear of not pleasing. How many Souls hath Amazath sent into the other World, to expect the Universal Day of Judgment? And how many more will be fend in this Siege of Babalon, whether he goes in Person, respecting Ferron with him, and homes in the forces sufficient to destroy the Empire of the Ressaut?

of the Christians, with all possible Application and Excensis, to have Information of them the

ns,

ne

al

de

ofe

rs,

n; es ry

nte

5 16

n

d

¢

will, in doubtful Affairs, have me to write to him my own Judgment, and not that of others. He will have mediate to thorten, but extend my Explications, that nothing may be left that will admit of a double Interpretation, and will rather have me redious, than appear eloquent by the Concidents of my Relations. He orders me to receive the Advices of Garcoa, who is at Vienna, and to inform Admit the Jew, who retides at Genoa, in what is necessary, so the end, that all that passes in Genmany, Italy and France, may be dispatched to the Ministers of the Divan.

The Secretary of States as Mafter of all that is written, has order to en-register my Letters, and examine them. He, according to his Capricions of Ignorance, may render the Exactness wherewith Lobey a criminal; by saying, I amake fool, or do taos write the Truth. This registring puts me in Pains For, as many mean things may appear very good; at first Sight; and are often cammended, because of their Noveley; so they may appear also very despicable, when they some to be examined; and may deserve a Check.

I tell thee what I have reason to feary without telling thee those things which might faile a Beilief in their that have reason to hope at a sollier

Our Sovereigns are Allighty from they diffinguish themselves from all the Potentius of the World, by the Impetuousness wherewish they give their Orders: And there is no Empire where the Runishments and Rewards; work forgreat Effects. Thou know that he rest, which is superfloous to tell thee, and which Princes do not will lingly hear.

Explain to me better, the News I heard of Angle fuladdin Aga, of an Action of Justice of old Berter.

He writ to me, That a Greditor to whom he wed for a Shirt, being dead, he had put the Price inco.

into the deceased's Hand, and wone his ways. This new way of paying Debts, seems very extraordinately to me. There is an Author, whether Gleek or Latin I have forgot, which wells another Adventure not unlike this, of a Man who not finding his Shooe-maker alive; threw the Price of the Shooes he had made him into his Shop. If these Actions he not done for Ostenration, they seem Verruous; but if out of Vanity, I cannot believe that our Negligence to pay our Greditors whilst alive, can be excused by the care we take to pay them after their Death.

are Living that have need of Supplies in this; and who suffer sometimes very much, when they are not punctually paid. The meions which Members sufficiently describe the Excess which Members mitted by their Pussions) and the Moderno do it as little. They are suff, sometimes very to Energy fittion; and sometimes Unjustoeven to Superstition; and sometimes Unjustoeven to Superstition; and sometimes Unjustoeven to Superstition; and sometimes Unjustoeven to Energy great. He was not latisfied according to the Prescepts of Pichagora, to give this to Beaster; his Simplicity went yet farther, not presidented by any Prince on Sainting the threw Pictes of a Gold to the Fishes, in Ponds and Rivers y alledging for his Read sainting the threw Pictes of Gold to the Fishes, in Ponds and Rivers y alledging for his Read sainting the threw Pictes of Gold to the Fishes, in Ponds and Rivers y alledging for his Read sainting the threw Pictes of Gold to the Preschile to God pand that these Animals would be were tell of its after the animals would be were tell of its after the animals would be were tell of its after the animals would be were tell of its after the animals would be were tell of its after the animals would be were tell of its after the animals would be were tell of its after the animals would be were tell of its after the animals would be were tell of its after the animals would be were tell of its after the animals would be were tell of its after the animals would be were tell of its after the animals would be were tell of its after the animals would be were tell of its after the animals would be were tell of its after the animals would be were tell of its after the animals would be were tell of its after the animals would be were tell of the animals and animals would be were tell of the animals and animals would be were tell of the animals and animals would be were tell of the animals and animals and animals and animals and animals and animals animals animals.

Explain to me better noise throwshift addox in a fulcadin Aga; of an Action of Juliconological ala for. He write to me, That a Creditor to whom he weed for a Shirt, bett g dead, he had put the Price.

STATE WILL BERE

ing another TER XXI and Jah

To the Kaimakam.

AY last Letters shew what happen'd in Italy, on the Side of Piemont, which thou maift have feen at the Diven.

I have informed the Conneil what the Infidels have done there; where three different Nations. which have but one Religion, fight together; The French make War upon the Spaniards, to affift the Savoyards; and these latter would drive the other out of Italy, and reduce Savoy under their Power, which does what it can to avoid the Yoke of both thefe Nations.

It is to be feared, that new Troubles may arise from this War; which will andoubtedly happen. if it be not suddenly terminated by a Peace. I will only write to thee what I know, and perhaps what is not come to thy Knowledge. I will not repeat what I have already written; because my Letters pass securely, by the good Order which thou hast taken.

The different Interest of the Princes of Itab occalion fmall Intelligence between them. As their E. flates are separated the one from the other, fother are divided by their Maxims, their Interefts, and Presentions. They have, however, but one Religion, which they make to ferve for a Pretext to their Defigns, which are all different; and there is not one of them which wholly minds his Religion. which can have but one only End.

There are few that can fuffer the Conquests of the Frenchin Iraly; because that Nation seems restless, and Men would not see the Spaniards more. powerful than they are; because they play roo. much the Masters. But however, as the least of these Princes have their particular Inclinations and secret Interests with these two Nations, thou art ignorant of those of the Republish of Genoa with the Spaniards, with whom they have strong Alliances: But peradventure thou hast not been informed of a Conspiracy, which appears to have been carried on in the City, to introduce the Spaniards into it,

which the Republick will in no wife fuffer # 1001

The faid Conspiracy is thus related t The Marquils of Montercy saving finished the time of his Government of Naples, and being embarked with fome Gallies, for his Return into Spain, came Incognito in Genoa; having had a Conference in a Village near the Town, with some of the Confoirators, to render himfelf Mafter of the Part, and afterwards built a Circadel upon the highest Side of the Far. Some of the most qualified, were co open one of the Gares by Night, and receive the Troops that thould be disbarked our of the Gallies. The Marquis of Leganez, Governour of Milan, promifed to fend to Genoa a Chain of Slaves fronger and more numerous than ordinary, which inflead of confifting of condemned Criminals, was to be composed of the bravest Officers of Milan; and fome Nobles of the Accomplices, who were to there in the Treaty, west to receive the Troops, and come armed for the effecting of the Eliceprize.

After a Delign to well laid, the Spaniards were ready to execute to hard an Undertaking; when the Republick. Being suddenly advertised of the Plots caused it to miscarry, without Noile, by redoubling the Guards, which did not a little surprize the Configurators.

Gardinal Richlier's Creatures give one; What one Doria, called their Prince, did diffuside for hinder the Plot, which was profitable for Italy, but contrary to our Interests; for themce undoubtedly had sprung a War which would never have had End, whether betwire the Subjects of this Commonwealth, who would have ruined each other, or France and Spain; and thou wile also find, that in preferring the Liberty of their Country, and keeping the Spainards at a Distance, they will maintain themselves still in a Condition advantageous for the Commonwealth, and necessary to the Crown of Spain.

They fay, That the Conftancy of Doria hath acquired the Honour of having twice faved the Liberty of his Country.

This Doria is descended from Andrew Doria, that Great Captain, who did so many brave Actions against our Nation, commanded the Markime Armies of Charles V. Emperor of Germany, and fince, those of Philip II. his Son, King of Spain, and who often combated the invincible Ariaden,

I do not believe that Adonai, which was at Genoa, hath writ this Adventure to thee; either because it may not be true, or because the thing being very secret, it was in a manner stifled as soon as discover'd.

If thou wile know the particular Reasonings, made upon this occasion, I will tell thee, That the most advised French believe, that the Spanismes did attempt so fair a Blow a but that the Two Parties in the City, the ope to preserve their Liberty, and the other to maintain their Authority, did both a void the Conclusion.

The Discourse is, at present various, concerning this Republick; and the French do as much endeavour to make secret Treaties with it as the Spaniards to hinder its change of Master. It being always of great advantage to such who have Presences in Itsy, to be in good Correspondence with this Place's which may be termed the Principal Port.

The French make a great Noise with their Pretences upon Genoa; and they, at present, revive many Ancient Histories. They affirm, That the Genoese, when they had Differences amongst themselves, have often-times changed their Laws and their Masters; and that they had been subjected to strange Powers: That Two Charlers, One Lewin, and Francis I. all Kings of France, have taken them into their Protection, having also subdued them by Force of Arms. They add, That this Francis I, continued a great while to send them Governouss: And that it was by the Valour and Resolution of Doria, that this Republick recovered its first Liberty.

These are the Discourses that People make at Paris, the Entertainment of Idle Persons, as also of our Politicians. It will be a hard matter to tell what the King thinks, and what are the Sentiments of his Council . And the side diver

Confider, in the mean time, with what Impudence People discourse here; they presume to decide Affairs of State; they divide and accommodate Differences; they support and ruin Commonwealths and Kingdoms: but this is no new Thing, the People in all Times having taken the Liberry to centure the Actions of Sovereigns.

It is not for enlarging my Letter that I write these Particulars of the History of Genon; but, being an Ancient Nation, which hath formerly wedried the Courage of the Romans by their Enterprizes and Opposition, and have performed, upon our Seas, great and noble Actions. The Ofmans have her therefore in Consideration; and, the rather, because we possess many Countries, and considerable Places, that were under their Domisminion in Asia minor, upon the Black Sea, and in the Archipelago.

I shall ever recommend all thy Words and Actions to Almighty God, and pray him to hinder thee from falling into Error, and profper all thy Untakings. Ty, mounted upon the Ships and Gal

Paris, 24th of the 5th Moon, of the Tear 1638. A control word don't bail ball

LETTER XXH. liw books

T TEnry of Bourbon, first Prince of the Blood of II France, marching by Bourdeaux, came upon the Frontiers of Spain, where he befieged Fontarabia, firongly feated upon the Brink of the Ocean. His Army is made up of Twelve Thouland Foot, and Twelve Hundred Horse. The Two Nations have had feveral Encounters and Skirmishings, wherein the Lofs and Gain have been equal on Land.

But the Squaifb Affairs go fo ill at Sea, that thou wilt wonder at the great Losses they receiv'd there. The French have burnt Two Gallions upon the Stock, that were making, and Six others entirely finished, which had noe been yet at Sea. have further taken Eleven great Ships, whereof Six were richly loaden for the Indies; befides the Equipage and Munitions of War; with Two old Gallions that were of no great life. They further took a Prodigious number of Cannons, which lay upon the Shore, One Hundred whereof were Brais, all with the Arms of Auftria.

If all this I write be true, as I verily believe lieve it is: We may fay that this Prize, where there were more than a Hundred and Fifty Pieces of Ordnance, was no mean purchase.

I say nothing of the great quantity of Artillery, mounted upon the Ships and Gallions, for sear of troubling thee with the news of a great Victory, wherein the French gained so many Vessels and such great Riches, as will suffice to equipagreat Fleet.

The Prince befieges the Place and preffes it, but the Spaniards defend themselves bravely; and much Blood will be fhed there.

The Priest of Bordeaux, which these Insidels call the Archbishop, was come thicher with Sixty Sail, whereof Forty Two are Men of War, and the rest Attenders; with some Fireships filled with Bituminous Matter, which inflames easily to burn the Enemies Ships where they can come at them, so that there is nothing wanting in the Armies by Sea or Land.

This Arthbiffion of Bordeaux, makes more noise at present than the Pole; and 'tis credible, that what he has done, will gain him great Favour with his King.

He has, with as much Courage, invested Fourteen Gallies, and Four Frigats, which came from the Neighbouring Ports to the Relief of Fontarabia, with Three Thousand paperal Spaniards.

He fought Six Hours together with this new Army, which he entirely defeated, having burnt and funk all these Ships, except one Galley, which was stranded and rendred useless. The Admiral of Spain, with Eight Hundred Men, was blown up; which was no small Missortune to the Spaniards, who lost upon this Occasion, a great Number of Soldiers and Seamen: And 'tis believed, they will not be able to appear before their Enemies in Sea this great while.

if so many Losses suffered by a Party, are not advantageous to the Grand Signor, because the other is grown so much the stronger thereby, he will however gain this Benefit by it. That the French and Spanish being both Enemies to one Nation and Religion, our Affairs will be in greater Security, when of Two Enemies we see One suppressed.

Feathings, the Advantage they receive from these Successes: And these Insidels have reason to rejoice, their Victory having all the Agreements possible; it is indeed great, and their Loss very inconsiderable,

They say, there were but Twelve of the Ships of France disordered, and that they loft not above a Hundred Seamen, and very sew Officers. Here hath been made a large Relation of this Victory; and tis engraver in Copper, to the end it may be made publick in all its particulars, and the Memory of it conserved to surre Ages. Since the loss of the Armalo, surnamed The Invincible, which Philip II. sent into England, in the Year 1588, to make Warupon a Woman, we have not known that Spain suffered so great a Loss.

This is the only News I can tell thee at prefent. So many Armies as are in continual Action, will furnish Matter enough hereafter to divert thee, by reciting the Follies of these Infidels, who seem to defiroy themselves daily, and ruin their Affairs to gratifie Us by their Deseats, and make Us triumph.

Paris, 17th of the ath mont start leichte of the form

Profestive

If to ring I ales fuffered by a Party, air, not LETTER XXIII.

To Afis Baffa.

IF thou always followest thy Inclination, and thy natural Honefty, thou wile be indefatigable in faithfully serving the Sultan, and thou wilt not be averse to him that effects thee, and loves thee

Read what I write to thee, and publish it when thou haft read it, that the Council may know, that it is refolved at the Diet held at Stockbolm, the Refidence of the King of Sweden to continue the War against Aufrias and, that the Duke of Weymar, and the General Banner, begin already to combat the Imperialifts. Thou wile fee Spain and Germany late tack'd on fo many Sides, and by such powerful Enemies, that 'cis credible there may happen fuch valt Losses to all these Christians, that the True Belieuers will have occasion to rejoice, and to hope yet the Aggrandizing of the Great and Moft Mighty King of Kings, Sultan Amurath, Mafter, and abfolure Sovereign of both Seas, and Vanquisher of all Nations. A fourment of a section of

This King hach fear an Army into Picardie, under the Command of Marshal Chatillion, to beliege St. 0mer, a very strong Place in Armife, belonging to the Spaniards; several Villages and Towns of Consideration, being already burne and pillaged.

The faithful Slave Mahmut faintes thee, gives thee a friendly Kifs, and wifhes thee all fore of Prosperity.

Paris, 24th of the 6th Moon, of the Year 1628.

fions. The Ambediadois of Princes wine a refide in Companie LETTER XXIV. awor aid to many extraordingry things. That fay porhing

To the Kaimakam. " and o's vary an atraid thou will take no. Pleature in the HE King of France hath fent forth another Ari myd: I have already informed thee that chis Prince hach already Three Armies in Three Parts of Europe. There is one in Piemont, commanded by Cardinal le Valette; another whereof Prince Henry of Conde is Generalifum, which they hope will quickly take Fontarabia; and a third commanded by Marshal Chatillion, which befieges St. Omera , violo The Duke of Lingueville, is at the Head of the Fourth, which is entred into Burgunds, with defign to ruinche French Comey, defended by Duke Charles of Lorrain, one of the Emperor's Gene-The insufold Wars which this Monarch unther

So many Armies, and fo many Captains march against the Spaniards. This Nation sufficiently manifelta her Force; the is attack thon all fides, and refilts and defends her felfrom all fides. This waff Extent of Countries, which the Auftrian's pollets though separated from each other, is the Reason, that they are always employed in defending themfelves; but they will be eremally exposed to los without any Appearance of Gain and Alady has NEW

Thou knowest, that the true Secret of preferwing Union amongst the Good, is to entertain perperual Differences amongst the Bads and showwite fer, that all the Adventures of this Country will render Us Invincibles What I tell thee is a mie Saying. The French, at present, are too powerful. with fo many Troops, fo many Armies by Sea and Land, which are feen in the Provinces of their Enemies.

2.

10 0

ci of 3

21

6

36

29

10

.25

bo

: 2

di.

êĒ!

,97

9.0

20

art

-77

1

0,2

tit

1

of

1

The other Christians are in continual Apprehenfions. The Ambassadors of Princes which reside in this Town and Court, observe with great diligence, so many extraordinary things, but say nothing; they do like me, they write and advertise their Masters.

I am afraid thou wilt take no Pleasure in the Relations a make thee of the Successes of so great a Power; but I ought to let thee know the Truth. Assirs are carried on here with much Air. The Ministers serve with great Fidelity, until are very secret. Cardinal Richlien hath an entire Assendant over the King's Spirit; and, to say Truth, is a Person of great Merit. They say, he aspires to true Glory, and will place the Grown, which Charlemain wore, as Emperor of the West, upon his Masters Head. If the good Fortune of France marthes always at this Rate, the Mistorians of its Enemies much be excessive.

The manifold Wars which this Monarch undertakes, and Richlien counsels him, do in the mean time make the People (who bear the Burthen, by the Taxes which they are forced to pay) murmur; besides their Grief for the Loss of their Parents and Friends slain in these Wars of their Parents and

The Cardinal fears Peace, and apprehends his Enemies may deftroy him, if they have leifure to eahal against him. Thus he finds his Interest in the War, and the Armies support his Authority.

I cannot yet make any certain Judgment of him, not have a perfect Knowledge of his Manners, no more than of the Extent of his Genom; because the Man hides many things during his Life with a Drefs, which will be discovered when he dies! We can see which are his good Inclinations; and it is not easie to penetrate into a Discovery of the Vices which he is inclined to.

en-

in cc,

12;

cir

the

t a th.

Wj-

Se.

Int

er-

ue ain

ers

ılà

3

*

ın Y d

ià

Ò

è

Ó

Ĉ

bog In few Words, he has much contributed to the Peace of France, divided by diverfity of Religion. He hath succour'd Italy, and manifested there the Power of the King his Sovereign; has weakned the Empire of Germany, by the War he harh carried into her Bolom, by the joint Forces of the Princes of the North, and them of France at once; and no less weakned the Power of the King of Spain.

Thou that knowest every thing that palles, and half Intelligence from all the Parts of the World, canft eruly judge of Affairs, which makes thee know and foresee all that may prejudice the formidable commendation of the second

This paye no imal! Capit

He flaid Four Days.

Empire of the Mussulmans.

Paris, 20th of the 7th Moon, of the Tear 1633.

e of Suffection in the French.

LETTER XXV.

saiden To the Kaimakam. To molist i

A LL is in Peace here, the War being carried A on abroad.

The Court continues to make Vows for the Queens Health, and happy Delivery. They feem not to much concerned for the King's Welfare as the Queen's; every Body being perswaded, that the Happinels of France depends on her fafe Dehyery.

I writ to Chiurgi Muhamet, that he should mention the Queen's being with Child, as a doubtful thing, and which might vanish; but at present, it is most certain: For the will thortly be brought to Bed. She lives in great repole, for fear of hursing her felf; the fearce firs out of her Bed-Chamber; and every Body endeavours to pleafe her.

These is News from Provence, of the arresting of a King's Son by that Governour. The Prinner is Brother to Wladiflaus King of Poland.

Tis faid that the King of Spain had made Prince Casimir Viceroy of Portugal, in Recompence of the Troops of Cossacks he had formerly raised to defend the County of Burguady. They add, that being embasked at Genoa, upon one of the Gallies of that Republick, for Spain, to take Possession of the said Charge, with a small Train of Domesticks, and Count Konick polski, who called himself Uladislaus's Embassador, with the Marquiss of Gonzague, his Kinsman; being arrived in Provence, and visiting with Care, all the Ports and Fortresses: This gave no small Cause of Suspicion to the French. He staid Four Days privately in Marseilles; but his Galley was arrested at Bouc, the last part of France, by Orders of this King.

'Tis not yet known what obliged France to make a Person of this Quality, Prisoner, having nothing to do with Polana; and King Lewis XIII. having no particular Pique against Prince Casimir: But the Secrets of State being only known to them that govern Kingdoms, I presend to penetrate no farther, but content my self to write what they do, and what they lay. Thou who in the Absence of the Vizur Azem art the Glory of his Highness's Council, art best able to discover the Reason of so extraordinary a Novelty.

Price most knowing Persons at Court, say this Price of will suddenly be set Liberty; and that having no. War that may authorize his Detention, it would be unjust to result him.

The Event will teach me who am ignorant, and them that will divine, that which perhaps no body d-

(c

of

is le

e

d

at cs

of

5,

4-11-

nd

:

b.

e,

c

g

-

0

15

body knows at present. May it please the Great God, Master and Sovereign Moderator of all Things, that the Intelligences and Guesses which I give, may always be profitable and agreeable; and, that thy Life may be of Evernal Duration, for the Happiness of our Great Emperor and his Empire.

Thou shall suddenly know whether Prince Cafimir be retained longer in Prison, or set at Liberty.
I would that King Olddish were in the same Misfortune, in the Hands of the Janizarier; and, that he as well as his Kingdom, were Slaves to the invincible Sultan. Ring of Rings; to whose Power may it please the Divine Goodness, and the Wisesto of his Prophets, to subject all the Countries of the Infidels; and then to place him with his Wives and all the Prophets in his Paradistance

Paris, 20th of the 7th Moon,
of the Tear 1638.

LETTER. XXVI.

of the Tear 1698.

To the Kaimakam.

Aving given thee an Account of the Imprisonment of Casimir Dewill relate to three the Voyage of King Utadislaur, his Brother, who is gone a Progress into Hungar) and Geograph.

The News here is, That the King of Paland was gon to make a Vific to the King of Hungary, who, to do him Honour, lent the Chief of his Nobles to receive him upon the Confines of Moravia.

from Vienna to meet him: They embraced like

Brethren; and returned together with the Queen of Poland, and her Sifter back to Court. 'Tis added. that the People received this Company with great Acclamations, with the Noise of the Cannon, and all the fmall Shor of the City.

The Day following, having dined in the Imperial Palace, they went together to Luxemburg, to wifit the Empres Fleaner, Widow to the late Emperor of Germany! The reason of the Penon of the ad time If Carcoa hath not informed thee of these partilars, thou wile receive them from Mahmut, who watches incessantly to give true Intelligence, and penetrate as much as may be, into all that occurs. and is done in this great Court, which gives morton Reprove me if I do not well and punish me

if the Emperor be not well fefred, and show fa-tisfied.

Paris, 20th of the prin 4th Paris, 1 sth of the 8th Moon, of the Year 1628.

LETTER XXVII.

THE REXX YOR.

makemie.

To Kerker Huffan Baffa.

dore an Account of the O not accuse me of being ill advised or negtigent, if I write to thee things that thou knoweft already. I am only caseful in telling thee what happens here; and my Butmels is not to enquire, whether thou art better informed another way. When I am ordered to write all that comes to my Knowledge, I do my Duty in doing it, and I ought not to be reprehended for it. from Vienna to meet him a They empraced like

Erc.

I am told that the Sultan is gone with an Army, more numerous than all the Leaves on the Trees, to destroy the * Red Heads * Persians, and conquer Babylon. I know that the Mastri, the Grand Vixir, and all the Grandees of the Divantollowed him; but am ignorant of what he did in his first Expedicion, when he took Reyan.

An old English Merchant, who comes from Haban, and has lerved in the Army of the faithful Mulfulmans, passed this Way in his Return to England. He hath been an Eye-witness of the great Actions of Amurath. He says, that this mighty Emperor after his taking of Revan, left Twelve Thousand Soldiers in Garrison there; with Two-Hundred Thousand Growns in Silver; besides Copper Money, to pay them.

He faith also, that our Mighty Monarch, being wearied to see so much Blood of the Faithful, yea, of the Heretick Musulmans, spilt, he had sent the King of Persia a Challenge; offering to fight singly in Duel with him, but he would not accept of his Deficient

He' tells how amurath being fallen in the Water, in palling the River Haver, was in great Hazard of being laid up in expediation of the Last Judgment Day, in the other World, had it not been for a young lufty Solack, who rook him by the Arm, and dragged him out of the River. This Accident was the Pselude of a great good Fortune, which hapned to this Mighty Prince upon the Bank of another River, called Maky, where he had the News of the Birth of a Son born to him in the Straglio, at Emstantinople, whom they call Blanddin; whose Nativity hath been celebrated with infinite Demonstrations of Joy.

This Englishman tells us farther, that Amurath raken Tauris, and appeared publickly here with all the Marks of a formidable power; that he had destroyed the Bing of Perfia's Seraglio, burnt the publick Markers, and caused a Million of fine Trees, which renders the loss irreparable, to be cut down.

Let me know, when thou art at leifure, whether tills News be true, and do me the Favoris to tell me our great Emperor's Success in the Expedition of Bubylon. The Politicians here, attend the News of it with much Imparience. The allowed, that Aminath is the most Potent of all Princes, the strongest Man alive; and, that only he can vanquish and tuin the Rings of the Earth.

Two Strangers of differing Nations, and both of Royal Blood, are dead in this City. The one in Dia Christopher, Son of Din Antonio, Hing of Possingals, who after he had lived Sixey fix Years, without ever attaining the Crown of his Father, died in a Configuration of Derviler, called Cordeliers, where he was buried, in the fame Place where his Father's Brother had

King of Perks a Challenge; offering Philipping

The other Stranger was called Zaga Christos; who was the legitimate Successor of the Kingdom of Arbippas a young Maniof Twenty five Years, Soneo the Empress Nagarene, Widow of Jacob, Emperor of the Abssins, who died in a Village near Parts. He quitted his Kingdom as thou knowest, forced by Civil Wars he arrived in France, in the Year 1635 of the Agyra of the Christians. After many Adventures, he composed the History of his Dravels, which he performed with Fronbles and Incommodicals which seemed insupportable.

What has he not inferred in traverfing many kingdoms, Arabia the Defart, Egypt, Afia Minor, and Jerufalem, where he ran the Hazard of being arrefited by the Baffa that refides there; whom he efcaped by reviring by Nightto Mazarah, among tithe Christian Devoies, where he concealed himself fine
Monne, a revised addition of a localist school of the

He faid here, that an Euruch of the Balla of Cairos had much follicited him to forfake the Chrifrom Religion, to which he would never confent and refused to go to Conflantinople, to humble limfelf, by professing his Face in the Duft of the Grand Signior's Feet; although the Balla extreamly prefied him to it, with very advantageous Offers.

This King has done much Honour to the Manes of the dead Prince, while perhaps, he fuffers Eyerlafting Torments which neither thou nor I shall fuffers of wedlways live like Raithful Mullulmans, according to the Precepts of the Law, ordained by Mahomet, and written in the Alcoran.

If fhall gladly hear that thy Life is fafe, and my Friendship agreeable to thee. or the applicant offer torell the Embaliadors, to give police of his Birth

Paris, 20th of the 8th Moon, and swiften risily or A Pricel. who is a Richop Post rast sate fairs Child, withour any Ceremony, in Presence of the

Grandees of the Mogdom ; the further Solenastry LETTER XXVIII - folker of or made it beharmmon gold gift

Chancellor of Prince, the Prince, Immediate and

To the Kaimakam Civillans, to thank Out !

Hat which hath been to dong expedied, is at length hapned : The Queen is brought to Bed of a Dauphin; the King is a Father, the Kingdom feems to defire nothing more, and the People witness their Joy by a Thousand differing Festivitics.

The Men, the Women, the Children and the Aged, run through the Streets as at Bacchenels, und

They rejoice with their Friends, they go to Church and rhank God, as if a Meffin had been Born to them.

ly fane :

All the Priefts praised God in their Templestor fuch a Prefent; and the Monks not fo content. deafen the People with the noise of their Bells. and do more than the Drums and Trumpers of the Soldiers, and all the Cannon of the Gittadel and Arfenal. I did in Company of others, what I (hould not have dared to perform, if I had been alone, or had not been observed.

Those who affirmed the Queen would be brought to Bed of a Son, pretend now they had been advertifed by fome Divine Revelation, and will pass for Prophers; and amongst these, there are many Rigina. Observe how far their Superfficion extends.

The Court has dispatched many Expresses into all the Provinces of France; and others have been fent to all the Embassadors, to give notice of his Birth

Adalagment band to treet by

to their respective Princes. In 18 act to their series

A Priest, who is a Bishop, hath baptized this Child, without any Ceremony, in Presence of the Chancellor of France; the Princes, Princesses, and Grandees of the Kingdom; the farther Solemnity being referved for another time.

The King commanded Te Deum to be publickly fung; being the Hymn which is usual to all Christians, to thank God for extraordinary Succeffes.

Nothing is feen in the Streets of Paris, but Bonfires, and Fountains of Wine, which run Day and Night. The People reftifie their Joy 3 and the Fires are fo great on all fides, that it looks as it the City were to be reduced to Ashes.

Amongst so many Subjects of Joy, the King has where with to afflict him, having been for fome Days commented with a violent Tertian Ague ; and Fir cannot be, but he must have his Spirits agitated with to many Wars at once. He has Armies against Spain, in Flanders, Italy, Burgundy,

and

and the Empire in Germany; without mentioning his Naval Forces, and the Designs and Pretensions which he doth not yet declare. Thou mayest be considered that Leagues will be formed against him, and Conspiraces against his State. The Great ones of the Kingdom are not asleep; having long since had Designs to humble the Favorites and Ministers, whose Deportments displeased them, and to make themselves Masters of Assairs, and the Government.

I have a piece of News to tell thee; but receive it as coming from a Woman, not Mahmut. I feldom fend that for affured, which in Appearance is not Truth. What I am going to fay, will undoubtedly feem ridiculous,

The Women give out, that the Dauphin has Teeth, and the Nurses will witness it. Those who easily believe Wonders, publish this as a most certain Truth. The People who add Faith to the most Incredible things, raise Stories upon this, and are full of pre-tended Auguries.

But there being no Law that obliges us to believe that which we find incredible, thou mayest therefore receive this News as thou pleasest, and look upon it as ulcless, and excuse me.

They give the King the Title of Saint, which they add to that of Jult, because of his great Pietry, in devoting his Son, before he was born, to the Frain, (which the Christians say is the Mother of their Melliah) with his Kingdom, People and Person, which he hath put under the Protection of the Mother of his God, which he has made appear by Prayers, Processions, and extraordinary Alms.

This Coremony is ordinary enough with these influent; who, by an inexculable idolatry, devote, their Towner and dedicate their Temples to Meatha are dead, whom they can Saints; worthing

ing them afterwards upon their Altars, and invo-

I have nothing more at prefent to write to thee, God give thee always the Grace to be just to thy opesion the Ki 2dom are not

Paris, 16th. of the oth. Moon, of the Tear 1638.

I have a piece of News on cell chee; one it as comine XIXX WETTE TEMPLE dom tend that for a fured, which in hope, a

What I am going to fay, will andoube-To the Captain Baffa in mon the

the Womei's Ive out that the Daughta has Tee in HE Birth of the Dauphie of France happied this Month, whereof I forthwith advertised the Kaimakam. I find my felf in a great City, where they fealt continually, to tellifie the Love they have for the King, the Queen, the Young Prince, and the State.

Joy (preads equally; the most miserable, to whom Fortune has given nothing but Tears, do now divert

The Women rejoice yer most; and, it feems this Adventure regards them principally. There is not one of em that would not lie in, all the Maid would be Mothers, and the most advanced in Tear do not now despair.

it feems here, that bod only hears the Prayers of the French; for they believe the Queen had never been with Child, if the People were not Hold Thus all believe, that they owe it to a Miracle be meaven, not of Marure, that the Child is born and for that reason he is called, biven of God.

If this be so, thou must conside, this Prince will

he very great, and much to be redoubted, who hath

th Fr

WC

api ter hath God for his Father, and is Heir of a great Kingdom. To fay the truth, France was never to flourishing, befides the great Armies they entertain by Sea and Land.

c,

Y

さるいちゅうと

But that which appears most Important to me, is, their vanquishing the Haganots, and defeating the Rebels. The Birth of a Successor, does much heighten these Advantages, and causes a great happiness to this Kingdom. I have my Share imake Feathing, being obliged to do as others; for to what purpose should appear afflicted?

Before I relate to thee a bloody Combat of Gillies, which was fought in the Sea of Genoa, I will inform thee of a ludicrous one in that of Marfeilles, which refembled those Speciacles the Ancient Remans exhibited with so much Pomp and Magnificence called Naumachier was Last on rain sing

The Count of Alais, Governour of Provence, caused Pour Gallies, Two against Two, to combat, first wich Ganpon, and afterwards with small Shor; and lastly, to board with Swords and Pikes; which was a faral Presage for Two Nations, who ram in search of each other through all the Ocean, and exhibited a fast Spectacle by Battols, where a number of validate Men were seen to perish in 1911222

Five and wenty Spanific Callies appeared on the Goalfs of Provence, where it was faid they were come to suprize some Maritime Place. But the count of Harour, General of the Armies of the Levant, for the King, having given them Chace, some of them retired to the Coults of General where they were attacked by a like number of those of France, which had fall followed them since they were seen before Marseilles.

It was the first of this monthat they fought Never appeared more Valour; never was Combat more terrible; and 'tis scarce conceivable what Blood was shed. Thou who art a great Captain, and an excellent Scaman, maist guess.

These

These Thirty Gallies having began their Combar with their Cannon and Musquets, the Sea was in a little time coloured with Blood, and covered with dead Bodies. Each Galley having fingled out his Enemy, the Fight was the more bloody and obstinate. This said this Battel was seen from the Walls, and Tops of Houses in Genoa, which were crowded with Spectators; and looked on with the same concern, as if they had fought for the Empire of Italy.

pretended to; seeing they took Six Gallies from their Enemies, amongst which was The Royal Patron of Spain, the Captain, and the Patron of Sicily, with Eight Hundred Prisoners, having themselves lost but Three Gallies, which were taken by the Spaniards. The following Night there arose so violent a Tempest, that the Sea had well nigh swallowed the Victorious and the Vanquished. The French loss the Royal Patron of Spain, which breaking loose, retired into a little Port of the River of Genos, where the Inhabitants of Arenzano seizing it, restored it to the Spaniards, which they say here, the French will how fail to revenge.

because I have it from disinterested Hands, and such as know the Truth of what passes. In more slaves and Soldiers, the Victory of the French, was by formuch the more glorious; and they affirm, that the other, had Two Thousand Foot extraordinary, designed for Milan.

God give shee always Victory over thy Enemies, and make thee feated of all the World were teen before identifier.

It was the first of this model decide to days. eirse appeared more value: never 8801 mod out to be certible; and insterne conservable what there was

HELD BOW WITH AVER FIVER CHONEN, and an Caroci-

Thos art Valette, thy Employment gives the chercommen XXX RECTAR TOTAL Whold World this little Mer of the World

but by the Goodnels of America whole Clemency infilters their December 34 of

They do here so highly magnify their Successes, as also those of the Allies of the Grown of France, that I know not what to believe, these Exaggerations being so contrary to the Glory of the Osmans. Having given thee an Account of the Fight betwirt the Gallies of France and Spain, I will at present, inform thee of the Advantage they fay the Gallies of Malta have had.

They affirm that this Squadron has defeated a very great Galley of the Baffa of Tripoli, laden with great Store of rich Merchandise. We know well that this Vellel and her Loading are of good Value; but not so great as the Infidels publish. They fay farther, That they took upon the Coast of Calabria, Two great Veffels, and a Polagu, commanded by Picoce, Admiral of Tripoli, who is a Renegado of Marseilles. They say, there were Two Hundred Torks, Three Hundred and Fifty Prisoners taken, and Fifty Christians Slaves let at Liberty. If what they fay is true, there were also a great many Brafs Cannon in these Ships. They confess that the General of these Gallies, did all that was to be expected from a Valiant Man, although he had the Gout; and that they loft but Right Knights.

Thou who knowest the Truth of this Adventure, punish so great Lye. 'Tis true, that the Christians have taken the Vessels in Question; but it is not true, that their Advantage hath been so great as they make it, seeing there were no Brass Cannon, but a few Christians delivered; and, they having lost much more than they acknowledge.

Thou art Valiant, thy Employment gives thee the command of the Sea; root out of the World this little Neft of obstinate Pyraces, who breather but by the Goodness of Amurath, whose Clemency hinders their Destruction.

Paris, 4th of the Loth, Moon, to sail ob vol of the Tear 1628. of France, chief I know not visar to believe, their Enapperation, being to contrary to the Glory of the Olinam Having owen there an Account of the Fighe bereine che Gulies of France and Spein. I will so protent inform thee of the Advanture they far the Celler of Matte had had

They affind that this Soundron has defeated a very great Galley of the Bolla of Princh laden with great Store of rich Merchandise. We know well

hie; but not fo great as the Infalsh sublish. They fur ference. That chev took upon the Coall of t'alib by Two great velicies and a Political command. ed by Plence, Admiral of Thirth who is a fewends of Marfeilles. They lav. there were Two The End of the First Book. what they fay is true, there were alfo a great mamy Brafs Cannon in thefe Ships. They confefs, that the General of their Gallies, did all that was to be evereded from a Vallant Man, withough he had the Sourt and that they loft but Light Kalefres

Thou who knowed the Fruth of this &dventure. punific to great live. 'Tis true, that the Christians have taken the Velicle in Queltion but it is not vive, that their Advantage hath been fo great as they make it, feeing there were no Breis Cannon, but a few Christians delivered; and, they having loft much more than they acknowledge.

e

amper Facilities plainly now, that I find be colleged to accure there of Treaton, in case thou continued the Commerce with the Emperor of Cermanics Secretary.

ally irelents, and receives the same from thee? Be perfiveded, every type the appeared savourable to the Chaptians, that the bleafaires then doft their render thee criminal so the Majfabrana. For in fine, what the reason of the perfus force, in ole than arten slaves which thou tented, and that quantity of bacunificent versa which thou preferred the

of that filter Herein some Old soutched with Early which one of the Brithful receives from an Extensy of our Holy Law? It fightles nothing to at fiver my ketters with Pallion, and Raping: Go to the Tribunal wing of Receipt of Questions are to be decided this judge will relicibee, whether for a Connector is lawful, even in times of I cade thou much the outcome of t

with the sincerity where voted the side of the side of ample: Bus I tell thee plainly now, that I shall be obliged to accuse thee of Treason, in case thou continuest thy Commerce with the Emperor of Germany's Secretary.

What Interpretation wouldst thou have me give the Correspondence theu holdest with this Minifter; when I discover, that he lends thee continually Presents, and receives the same from thee? Be perswaded, every time thou appearest favourable to the Chriftians, that the Pleasures thou doft them, render thee Criminal to the Muffulmans. For in fine, what the meaning of those Perfian Horses, those Hungarian Slaves which thou sentest, and that quantity of Magnificent Vests which thou presenteds to thy Friend? What wouldst thou have a Manthink of that Silver Wercules, and Clock enriched with Pearls, which one of the Faithful receives from an Enemy of our Holy Law? It fignifies nothing to answer my Letters with Passion, and Raging: Go to the Tribunal where thele kind of Questions are to be decided; the Judge will tell thee, whether fuch a Commerce is lawful, even in times of Peace. Thou much exaggerateff the Obligations thou haft to thy Friend at Vienna, because he used thee well, when chou were his Briffoner of War. Toubis inis enforce aniwenigThan if he behaved inmiest like a Geneleman about oughtest an imitate him, like a good Mahometane Should he bappen to be thy Prifoner, take then thy Reverge, and endeavour to require him, adhered an intervention for the Again, supposing its should be discovered, that shis shy friend has presents these with this sumous Cyphen, composed with supplies a what oping may be only called Ants Washingtones; what oping on on the Massing have of thy Ridelity? It is known with what Application thou well into write into Gammy, and to decypher the Answers which thou receives a Asomore these sufficient signs to ample:

303

flew, that the Disparches thou writest, and their Answers, are like the Trojan Horse, concealing abominable and dangerous Mysteries? Be perswaded, that I had not writ to thee from Germany, the Letter which has to greatly offended thee, on fineple Conjectures. The Secretary thy Friend, faid one day, he must be a Witch or a Devil that can difcover the Arrifice of these Characters; that an Italian, who was condemned to perperual Imprifonment, had wrought Twenty Years to meliorate this Art, and had brought it to such great Perfection; that he never faw any Body that could understand his Letters, with they Key it felf, which he gave them. Tis faid, that this Invention is wholly new; and the more admirable, that a Letter of an ordinary Style, of domestick Affairs of Love and Compliments, may contain Secrets of the greatest Importance, without using Equivocal Expressions particular Characters, Figures, Supposed Names. Hieroglyficks, Juice of Herbs or Liquors; it being impossible ever to discover what one designs to hide. He adds, that one may write in Turkish, Anabian, French or Italian, and conceal a secret, written in any Tongue whatever.

Thy Friend carries it yet farther, and fays, he could make use of Verses to decypher Prose: And this audacious Man affirm'd one day in the Empetor's Anti-chamber, that he would put into French, this horrible Blasphemy, The Tyrant Amurath will soon die; which is found in the following Verses of an Italian Poet, whereof he immediately made a Proof : And thefe are the Italian Verles.

Giace l'Alta Cartago, a penai Segni
De l'alte sue rume illido de serba
Muiono le citta, muiono i Regni
Cuope i fasti, e le pompe arena de kerba
Et l'hum di esser mortal parche si
O nostra mente cupida, de superba sdegni, po

Tilf it appears that I am too flarp against thee, I will receive thy Ourfes without Reply ? But if thou knowest I have had just Reasons to write to thee, as I have done; Why are thy Athwer's forfull of Image Think better on thy Interest, and be always faithful, if thou intendeft a long life of all one day, he walk is a Windh or a Beril that one diff-

Paris, 4th of the worth Moon, to someth side wares Indian who was condemed. 8881 mar with foris fonces es, had wrought Twenty Years to incliorate

fection; even he never law any Gody that could un-

this Art, and had brought it to fach erent Per-

Countingents, may continued or of the greatest

HE Imall Success which we always meet with at Sen obliges me to entertain thee thereone I shall take no Notice of this to the other Granders of the Port, no nor to the Kaimakam, to whom I have bot written thefe Three Posts. If thou hast received my two last Letters ... thou oughtest to be sarisfied with the Care which the faithful Mahmut takes to give thee found Advice. Confider well all the Circumstances which are related here, concerning the Sea Affairs.

The Bols of fo many Gallies, great Ships and other Veffels, made this Year, by the Friends of the Empire, the True Fantiful; do much leffen the Reputation of the Ottoman Greatness.

The Discourses made hereon by the Christians, are fo many Invectives against the Honour of Amurath, against thine, and that of our Nation. If it be by a Decree of Heaven, that there Venetian Pyrares have taken this Year, all the Gallies of Africk; we must then conclude, That God is offended with us, and does not hear our Prayers.

For

Formy perty I believe it; but I should not be a good Muffulman, thould I pretend to understand the Secrets of Browndenes, That the People of Titis Bigerre, and Algiers, are greatly dilmayed at the loss of their Fifteen Galleys, which General Capelle has taken from them this Year. Thou knowest how the business has happened; the Intraction of the Treaty is manifest to all the World, as well as the infulrings over the Fortrels of the Grand Signier I capnor imagin what Excuses the Senitors of this Republick can make, for what their Admiral has maliciously done against us, when they shall be obliged to give an Account of their Actione at the Floet of Amurath. I speak to thee with all possible Hamiluy, and thou needest not doubt but I speak with zeal. I believe tis time for thee to oppose, and put a stop, not only to the Pyracies of these People, but the Incursions and continual Energy reses of the Corfairs of Malta, and so many Velich which intest our Seas, under the Banner of the Duke of Tulagny, and other Insidel Princes. Thou pughtest to succour those People which are Friends and Tributanies to the Port, whole Affifance thou balt often advantagiously used; neither dost thou want means for this, having at thy disposal the terrible Forces, entrufted to thee by Amurath, and, with thefre, the magnanimous Courage given to thee by Nature.

The Christians have vowed to pierce, this Year, into the Bopborus, and put all to Fire and Sword. Above Sixty French Knights are determined for Malraco joyn thenselves with their Comrades to cruife our Seas with them. And thou knowest the Resolution and Gourage of this Militia, and the Progress shey every Day make.

hu Believe what Maurist cells thee, Thou haft Two Scar to the prising it is be true, thou haft made Ali Piccinino, to come from africk with to many Galleys, deligned to the keeping of the Coalis of Barbary, 'tis not to be doubted, but the Divine Providence has ordered, (it concerning to greatly Amurato's Honour) that the Guiley be purfued; to that not one of them may escape his Vengeance.

All People say here, that Piccinno has lost his Army for want of good Conduct. However here are great Rejoycings at our Losses; and, if possible, more in Italy, where they feel the Advantage of so considerable a Prize at the same time, together with the Honour of the Victory; and where we are hated more than in any place else besides. I beseech God to chastise these People by the Hand; and that the Edge of the Cymiter, in giving Death to our Enemies, may put an end to Slander and Slanderers.

Here's an impudent Fellow, who reports he has feen thee feveral Times at Conftantinople. He with great Confidence affirms, the Christian Corlaries will bring thee one Day, laden with Chains, into the Arfenal of Venice, or that of Malta. He grounds his Prediction on that thou are, fays he, furious when thou commanded; and that being too forward, thou canft not obey the Orders given thee. He adds, that Tobacco, Love of Boys, Wine, and Women, drive theetwice a day into a Condition uncapable of exercifing thy Reafon. " He moreover fays thou wantest Courage in a Land-Fight, neither are well skilled in Sea-Combass. I would not write thefe Fooleries to thee, were I not perswaded that they really are so; and that thou wantest neither Courage nor Experience. I am moreover perfivaded of the Malignity of thy Accolers, couching the Debaucheries I mentioned; and it appears to me more pertificate to write thee this than to the Grand View , though I must confeis, I am enjoymed to inform the Ministers of the Port of whatever I hear, without any Re-

7

of Venice and Capello who commands its Navy, that this General will be punished for doing too well; that this puissant State, will be humbled to the kiffing the Stirrup of our great Emperor's Horfe; but it will justifie the lawfulness of the Prize, which this General made, as being no breach of the Treaty with the Sublime Port, whence come the Orders by, which the World is to be governed; and that, in fine, the Pyrates of Africk, are not comprehended in the Treaties of Peace made with his Hiebnels.

And it is moreover alledged, that should this Republick be obliged to restore these Galleys which she ha taken, cwill appear, they have been loft through rid was of fice at Icveral Accidents.

i

is

è

F

ge e

è

3

D:

di

si.

d.

25

V.

s, fe e, og n

ċ.

li-

He

d-

T

iat

11 hy

d;

ée

uft

of

he

HOCK

All Christendam is perswaded, there's no Republick in the World governed with greater Prodence; which will make her avoid all occasions of Difference with the Port, and feek all Ways of Reconcilement with Amurath, to prevent a War which cannot be for her Interest.

Thapned into a Company of differeet Perfons, who blame Ali Precinino's Conquet; and arribote his Misforrune to his want of Skill, and to his Raffi-They affirm, that had he had the Courage of a true Soldier, he would have behaved himself not only in the Archipelago, but in the Adriatick Sea. fike a Captain, and not like a Thief; and, that God has given him this Mortification as a Ponifiment for the Cruelcy he thewed to the innocent fall, whom he made Slaves at Calabria, topether with a great Multitude of Old Men, and Children which was an Act no ways furtable to a brave Commander, And this is the Discourse canfed by the Hatred to our Nation, and especially to Ali

The Great God, Sovereign Moderator of all Things, keep thee in perfect Indement, and make in all Places, enlighened by the Beams of the Sun.

Paris, 6th of the Lith Moon, will a policy of Horfe , but it will justific one 8604 met wit bene

the Orders and that Bars To Bell, ine nor Frize, which this General made, as being no breech of the Tree with the Suddens Fort, whether completiended in the Treaties of Peace made with And to in more cover and gene, that include this We Winesprine Xellerday, what the Schle of the World was of thee; and I write to thee this Day what Mine is Alchough thou askelf nor my Advice, yet I will give thee fush, as perhaps, thou will approve of

and may be uleful to thee in due Scalon.

Wilt thou be revenged of the Venetians, and all the Christians at once! Pals over into the Adriatic Seas, with twenty small Galleys; draw be Night to the Shoar as Anona : And, before the show mayfi carry away thence as great Boory, is ever the Conjuls and Roman Emperors did ellewhere.

Couldft thou conceive the immense Riches shut up in a little Chamber, (where the Christians firm. That a Virgin received an Embalfador from Beaven, under the Form of an Angel; after whole Words the found the had conceived the Mellia, whom the Christians worthip) thou wouldest por defer the executing of what Mahmut countels thee.

'Iis reported in this Kingdom, as if Piccinia had fuch a Defign. Why did not this brave Spark

then

cl

aı

D

ha

his Highness

then execute what he had fo well contrived? When he was in Africk, he was to ravage all Daly; and he had no fooner come on those Coasts . but he loft all the true African Courage. He let himfelf be raken Prifoner; he fuffered a mighty Fleet to be loft, and the Shamefulness of his Defeat will for ever blaft his Name.

If Amurath returns a Conqueror of Babilon, which is very likely to happen, and thou takest Lorero ; it may be faid, that the Ortoman Empire is arrived at its full Height; Lorento being the Metha of

ren. Then knowest, that after the Limitirdo sats ill of,

かるかのない

hee.

inino

park

then

There is no Season, wherein one sees not arrive an infinite number of Pilgrims from all Parts; who come to offer there their Devotions, with the firme Zeal as the Faithful go and pray at the Tomb of our Holy Propher; and they often joyn with their Prayers, Offerings of confiderable Value. A small number of Priefts of the Roman Church, have fuch Treasures effere in their keeping, as cannot be fully valued! Veffels of both Gold and Silver, with Vestures and Ornaments, and precious Scones, which ferve to fet forth this Temple. the most magnificent and famous amongs the Chriflians; an infinite number of Lamps, Growns and Scepters offered by the greatest Princes of the Christian Belief; and in fine, whatever can be imagined most Beautiful, most Great, and Costly. Thou that knowest not what Fear is thou canft forefee nothing in this Enterprize which may deter thee. The Priefts of this famous Temple sleep all the Night long, and spend the Day in chanting their Maffer ; and the Soldiers defigned for the keeping of this Place, are few in number. and can make but small Resistance : If thou beest perswaded of the Truth of what I write, do more. than Cafar; go, conquer, and repose thy felf. I have no more to write to thee : I fend the Kaima-

kam

bam a Copy of this Letter. I have writ thee whatever has come to my knowledge, and thou wouldft farther know, that Mahmur, under the Habit of Titus, has discoursed at Paris. I am willing to inform thee. I have answered some People, who have had the boldness to say, That the Ottoman Empire will be foon ruined, should it receive such another Blow; that if Trees be not manting in Afia, the Mehometans will not want Ships now Gallies ; and that they will have as many Soldiers and Seamen as they please, if she Women do not happen all of them at once to be Barren. Thou knowest, that after the Battel of Lepanto wherein the Great God, and our Brophet defign'd to mortify the Faithful; that Selim's Favourite maintained the Glory of his Mafter, in thus speaking to the Baile of Venice: There is difference between the Loffes which the Republick maker, and the Misfortunes which happen to the Muffulmans; that when me took from you the fland of Cyticus, me cut off one of your Arms; and when you defeated ou in Battel, twas just as if you had cut off our Beards, which will foon grow up again. And if Women and Trees do not fail my we fhall foon have Ships and Men ; but the lafe of your Arm can never be repaired an hour in The Etrnal Lord, without whom nothing can fitbill, make the Sea always navigable, and without Tempelts, that the Winds may favour thy Defigns; and when thou half finished all thou oughtest, for the Glory of the Empire. I pray Heaven make thee Possessor of the Insidela Countries, which thou romed of the freit of whe I will a be been not fhale fibdie of this for subdul alla

mus

fleep all the trade and should the Day in the cash he day, and the cash he day of the trade and the fleet and the fleet and the cash end the cash end the fleet and the fl thing Colds, get, consider, and a posserby feffel.

A

-

e

f

1-

.

1-

n

1,

of

be

n

et

1;

10

té

1 and the grantetter iv.

To the Kaimakam.

This Letter will perhaps prove troublesom to thee, wherein thou wilt find an odd Mixture ; however, thou wile have no cause to complain of me; for, whatever I write to thee, shall be put into fuch Order, that if the first News be troublesom to thee, the last will prove otherwise. Thou hast received none of my Letters in the last Pacquers which I fent thee; and, I have found it more to the purpole, to make thee know at once, though fomething later, what I could not write but at Three times; whereby thou wilt be better informed than others, to whom I wrote the first Notices I had. There's nothing like to Patience; as in all other things, so more especially as to what concerns News; the lame Post always bringing the best Intelligence.

However, I hope thou wilt pardon me, if I wrote only to one Person, who is the Captain Bassa, those disagreeable things which I heard, that I might not make a new Recital, which would not please; besides that he is obliged, as well as the other Ministers of the Port, to impart to thee the Advices he receives from me.

Thou wilt find by the Copy of the Letter which I have written, that 'tis por without Reason I am angry with him. My Design is not to learn thee, what thou knewest probably before me, but what thou may'st be ignorant of, and yet oughtest to know.

The Christians express continually their Hatred against us, always speaking ill of our Affairs. Although there be no War declared between these Infidels,

F

98

fidels, and the ever invincible, Sultan; yet they cease not to be our Enemies; and thou maist know by their Discourse, they are ever laying Designs against us. Thou knowest, the usual Way of the World, is to discourse first of Affairs, and then take their Resolutions. The French are generally excepted from this Rule, for they have executed their Defigns before they began to speak of them; so lively is their Imagination, and so ready are they to take their Resolutions. They do in Affairs of State, what we are wont to do in those of Religion; they decide them by the Sword. They affirm, That Princes who have Valour, have no juster Tribunal than War; and that their Soldiers are their Lawyers. What measure then, most Wife Kaimakam, can be taken with a Nation which is in continual Activity? The French cannot remain at Rest; and when they diffurb not their Neighbours, they make War amongst themselves. The Ministers of Foreign Princes, who do, near the matter, what I do; although they have a Charafter which I have not, are inceffantly in Action: They watch without ceafing, as I do, on what passes; and thou maist assure thy self that the Diwan shall be fully and certainly advertized of all things.

The Pope keeps here, as his Ambaffador, a Prelate, called a Nuncio. The Emperor of Germany, the King of Spain, those of England, Swedeland, Denmark and Poland; the Electors, and several other Princes of the Empire, entertain also Embasfadors, to observe the Motions of this Prince, who often breaks all their Measures. The States of Italy do also the same. There are, in this Part of Europe, Princes and Republicks: these little Soveeigns, are more jealous than others of their Inrerefts; and do more concern themselves in all Affairs which pass. The Republicks likewise use greater greater Precautions in their Conduct, than the

The Republick of Venice has acquired a great Reputation; France keeps a good Correspondence with her; the Emballador of that State, living here with all the Marks of Grandeur, and the fame Prerogacives granted to those of Crowned Heads. Neither Persia nor Moscovia, keep any Publick Minister here; yet, perhaps, they may have some that give Private Intelligence to their Masters. As to what concerns the Princes of the Indies, they feem not to me, to have any Interest here; forthat they have, I believe, no Agent in these l'arts, either publick or private. If the Name of Spy be mean, or dishonourable, I know no Body that is called one; for I being unknown, my Reputation therefore runs no hazard. I ferve, without being obferved. But, to speak plainly, what are the Embaffadors and Agents of Princes, but Jecret Spies, as I am, who under a presence of keeping a Correspondence between their Masters, inform them of what they can discover in the Courts, where they are fent.

Thou shale be sufficiently inform'd by the Bassa of the Sea, of Piccinino's Adventure; he will shew thee what I have written. However, there are Sixty Galleys lost; and our greatest Consolation is, that we shall not want means to be revenged: If the Christians have cut off one of our Fingers, we ought to pluck out both their Eyes.

PE I

's said here, that this Admiral is made Prisoner by the Venetians: If this be true, his Confinement must be very uneasie to him. But, all People are not agreed, whether he be a Prisoner or no; for some maintain, he is at Constantinople, where he justifies himself with his usual Arrogance; laying all the Fault on the Renegado, who commanded the Admiral of Algiers.

F 2

I have

I have recommended to the Baffa of the Sea, the Enterprize of Loretto. If thou hast leisure to examine the Project, thou wilt find, though I am no Captain nor Mariner, what I have hinted is worth regarding. The Knowledge which I have of the World, of the manner of Living of the Christian Princes, and Priefts of Rome; together with the other Notices I have acquired, by reading of Hi-flories, should make me considered, as a Man that is able to offer at great things; though I have not vet gain'd much Credit in the World.

The Embassador of Venice, residing in this Court, fays, that their Republick will satisfie the Grand Signior; affirming, that Ali is a Pyrate; that the Africans have broken the Peace; and, that the Action of their General Capello, is Just and Heroical; and, that Amurath himself will chastise Piccinino. He moreover pretends that the Gallies which were taken, will not be restored, seeing it will be made apparent, that they have been loft by different Accidents: I think he fays, they have been all funk before the Isle of Corfou, by the Senate's Order, to prevent the Expectation of a Surrender, the Admiral of Algiers only excepted, which those Infidels have brought in Triumph into their Arfenal, to preserve the Remembrance of an Event, which they pretend to be very glorious to them But thefe Misfortunes are not extream, nor past Remedy, if God continues the Life of our Great Emperor, and thy Health.

many of their an other train and that

Paris, 7th. of the 2d. Moon, of the Year 1638.

e e

h

c

k

0 į-

ls

0 h

ſe.

if

d

TETTER V

To the same.

Hey have at length given over talking of our Losses, but I give not over devising the Means to be revenged of the Christians, Remember. that the Grand Vizir keeps in Prison a Man fit for great things at this time, who can do the Nagarenes confiderable Mischiefs, and procure notable Advantage to the Musfulmans. If the old Renegado of Dalmatia be yet alive, he is capable of destroying all Places in the Mediterranean Sea. Advise with him about the Destruction of Loretto. There is no Corfary that has done more bold Exploits. He has spent Sixty Years in coursing on the Arthipelago and Adriatich Sea; where he has made horrid Devastations, with infinite Prizes. He has likewife most considerably damnified the Coffacks, on the Black Sea. He began the Trade at Nine Years old in a little Veffel; has been wounded in Twenty, or Twenty two Occasions, taken Prisoner Four Times by our Pyraces, and Thrice escaped out of their Hands. And not being able to fly the fourth time, nor redeem himself by Money, he redeem'd himself by his Religion, which he quitted to embrace ours; and fince he has been circumerfed, he has brought to Constantinople above Thirteen Thousand Slaves in about Thirty Years space. He has pass'd full Five Years in the Cleft of a Rock, along the Banks of the Adriantel Sea , which by his Industry he made a sure Place of Retreat. Here 'twas that he hid himself with his Men and Velfel, like a wild Beaft in his Den; and 'cis hard to imagine how many Snares he laid during that time, for those of his own Religion. He has been often

I have recommended to the Baffa of the Sea, the Enterprize of Loretto. If thou haft leifure to examine the Project, thou wilt find, though I am no Captain nor Mariner, what I have hinted is worth regarding. The Knowledge which I have of the World, of the manner of Living of the Christian Princes, and Priests of Rome; together with the other Notices I have acquired, by reading of Hiftories, should make me confidered, as a Man that is able to offer at great things; though I have not yet gain'd much Credit in the World.

The Embassador of Venice, residing in this Court, fays, that their Republick will satisfie the Grand Signior; affirming, that Ali is a Pyrate; that the Africans have broken the Peace; and, that the Action of their General Capello, is Just and Heroical; and, that Amurath himself will chastife Piccinino. He moreover pretends that the Gallies which were taken, will not be restored, seeing it will be made apparent, that they have been loft by different Accidents: I think he fays, they have been all funk before the Isle of Corfon, by the Senate's Order, to prevent the Expectation of a Surrender, the Admiral of Algiers only excepted, which those Infidels have brought in Triumph into their Arfenal, to preserve the Remembrance of an Event, which they pretend to be very glorious to them But thefe Misfortunes are not extream, nor past Remedy, if God continues the Life of our Great Emperor, and thy Health.

willing the first with the distance and the

Paris, 7th. of the 2d. Moon, of the Year 1638.

often our fact of toyer be taken, and his

To the same.

T'Hey have at length given over talking of our L Losses, but I give not over devising the Means to be revenged of the Christians, Remember. that the Grand Vizir keeps in Prison a Man fit for great things at this time, who can do the Nagarenes confiderable Mischiefs, and procure notable Advantage to the Mulfulmans. If the old Renegado of Dalmatia be yet alive, he is capable of destroying all Places in the Mediterranean Sea, Advise with him about the Destruction of Loretto. There is no Corlary that has done more bold Exploits. He has spent Sixty Years in coursing on the Arthipelago and Adriatich Sea; where he has made horrid Devastations, with infinite Prizes. He has likewife most considerably damnified the Cossacks, on the Black Sea. He began the Trade at Nine Years old in a little Vessel; has been wounded in Twenty, or Twenty two Occasions, taken Prisoner Four Times by our Pyrates, and Thrice escaped out of their Hands. And nor being able to fly the fourth time, nor redeem himself by Money, he redeem'd himself by his Religion, which he quitted to embrace ours; and fince he has been circumerfed, he has brought to Constantinople above Thirteen Thousand Slaves in about Thirty Years space. He has pass'd full Five Years in the Clese of a Rock, along the Banks of the Adriatick Sea ; which by his Industry he made a fure Place of Retreat. Here 'twas that he hid himself with his Men and Vesfel, like a wild Beaft in his Den; and 'ris hard to imagine how many Snares he laid during that time, for those of his own Religion. He has been often

0

o

d

often pursued; but could never be taken; and his Name became so terrible amongst the Christians, that there was no Place but dreaded him. But, in fine, having, as 'tis said, attempted to betray his Master, in delivering into the Christians. Hands the Five Galleys he commanded; he was sent, by Order from the Grand Vizir, into the Castle of Seven Towers, although his Crime was not certainly proved. 'Tis about Two and fifty Moons since he has been there kept Prisoner; and he is not only very old, but decrepid. The long Penance which a Man has undergone, that has done such great things, and who is accused of having done one ill one, of which he is not convicted, does plead for some Indulgence.

I shall never go about to sollicit for the Liberty of a Traytor; yet I must say, That Men who have dared to execute great Crimes, are often capable of Heroick Actions. This Man was, and is still, at the end of his Life; perhaps if thou wilt eadeavour to procure him some Advantage, and make him hope still greater, he may repair his Fault, by performing fomething for the good of the mepire; or at least, give some good Advice. Thou knowest the Ancient Persians had a Law, whereby their Kings were obliged, Not to put a Malefactor to Death for One Crime ; and private Persons not to chastife their Domesticks or Slaves for One Fault. Thou knowest moreover, that Princes should observe in the Chastisement of their Subjects, whether the Services they had rendred, have not been greater than their present failings, and pardon them if their good Deeds furpalied their badd. These Laws, although no longer observed in Persia, yet cease not to be wife Precepts; to which, if thou haft no regard, yet thou wilt have some to the Zeal and Affection of Mahmut. And, if thou will fuffer me to make here a short Digression, in comparing the State wherein we are, with that of the Ancients; thou will find, how much our Monarchy furpasses all others. Dost thou believe, Generous Raimakam, that the Ottoman Empire is equal, inferior, or superior to that of the Ramans in Pompey's time ? Let us content our felves with fappofing it equal, to speak without Pashon, and cut the course of Disputes, which might be made hereupon; and reflect, I pray thee, on the Conduct which Pompey held in the War he made against those infinite number of Pyrates which intested the Seas of Italy, Africa and Afra. He was made General of an Army of Five hundred Sail, with abfolure Power to do what he thought fitting, without giving any Account. Thou knowest his Conduct was so prudent and full of Valour, that embarking with Ten thousand and Twenty Foot, and Six Thousand Horse, he in Forty Days cleared Lybia, Sicily, Spain, Sardinia; and in, in a Word, all the Seas which depended on the Roman Power, from an infinite number of Pyrates; who had, as it were, befieged the Capital of the Empire by their Incursions, Rapines and Violences.

parng

Now, although the number of our Enemies be not fo great, nor their strength so considerable; yet its to be seared, lest the Insidels be one Day bold enough, (having joined their Forces, which now are dispersed,) to fall upon us, and shake the vast Monarchy of the Ottomans, which they now often disturb by frequent Enterprises in several Parts.

1

e

f

.

e

it

1

y le le

11

IF

m

y

1-

H

2+

-

or

es

ts,

30

ie ie

et ou

10

le

n-

g

We have an infinite number of Places to preferve. We have several Kingdoms, populous isles: We command Warlike Nations, and the number of the Empire's Subjects are innumerable, which ought to incourage us to undertake no less than Pompey did heretosore, who was called the Agamemon of Italy, because he commanded a numerous Fleet, as this

F 4

Hero

Hero of the Greeks formerly did. But, it being already Midnight, I am forced to finish this Letter, left it should be too late for the Post.

I shall inform thee by the first Opportunity, of what has happened in Italy and Germany, and of feveral other things which I thought I ought to give thee Notice of by this Express; but, accuse me not of neglect, in not having written all to thee in this Letter, and receive my Excuse, which is just. and fincere, and grant me thy Favour.

The great God encrease thy Prosperity, and continue thy Health and Credit in the Dominions of the Invincible Sultan, under whose Glorious Reign follows or reac do be at he discould

we live.

Paris, 7th of the 1 tth Moon, of the Tear 1638.

LETTER VI.

Sire I housend Horice, he in Fonty Lave coursed in

To the Same.

e, the legal superfrequent of the Training by their pass immediately into Monferrat, without lea-I ving France, to tell thee, That the Spaniards have there made themselves Masters of a little Town, which the French could not keep for want of Men; and have also demolithed the Fortress which guarded the Place, that their Enemies might not have any defire after a Reprizal.

The eldeft Son of Amadem, Duke of Savoy, is now dead; he was called Lewis Amadaus; he was but Seven Years old when declared Sovereign, and was to but few Moons. He died Four Days after the Ceremony of his Baptilm. The King of France and the Queen of Spain, were Godfather and

God-

God-mother to this Prince. Thou wilt ask me perhaps how this could be, feeing they could not be there prefent? But thou must know, that these Nazarenes affist often as these Ceremonies by Procuration. The Dutchess of Savoy seems to me worthy of Compassion, having lost in one Year, both her Husband and her Son, and a good part of her Estate, and sees what remains to her, exposed to the hazards of War; but she has ever shewed her self a Woman of Courage and Resolution. Her Second Son has been declared his Brother's Heir, and the States have chosen her Regent, during his Mi-noricy.

STSW

The reason of the sudden Vifit, which the Ele-For of Saxony gave the King of Hungary, is not yet known: We have had advice of his Departure from Drefden, the Capital Town of his Country, with a great Train of Courtiers, and the Three princes his Sons, and that he went to Leutmaritz, where this King expected him; and, 'tis further faid, that in the small time they were together, they have had several Conferences, the subject of which is not yet discovered. The King has presented the Dake wich a rich Coach, with Six starely Horses, sumprubully hartiefled; and given Diamonds and Golds Chains to his Courtiers. But thou being nearer the Place of this Conference; and the Port having every where fubrle Agents, thou may'ft fooner get this Secret than I: For, 'tis not to be doubted, but there's formerlying hatching against the Octoman Empire. while Amerath is at that Diftance, and the chief Forces of his Empire employed ellewhere

As to what concerns the Progress of the Duke of Winner, who earries ou the War in Alfaria, there are infinitely different News come from thence, fince I wrote to thee; but this is what is most certain. After the taking of Fribourgh, this General made himself Master of the Champaign about Brigac, and his Army feizing on all the Posts thereabouts, the Imperialiffs put themselves in a Posture of hindring them; but, for Three Months Time, they could do nothing but spoil the Corn, and forage in the Country, whereby they wasted their own Subfiftence. They have also fruitlesly endeavoured to break down the Bridge, which Wimar had built at Newremberg; where they met with fuch refistance, that they were forced to retire with their Army which was in great Danger. But the Duke also met with no Success in his Enterprize on Offemburgh, through the fault of Fifteen hundred Musqueteers, French and Germans, who came not foon enough to plant their Ladders against the Walls, and furprize this Place: And, he has fince made different Trials, which have proved all in vain. An Officer had already entred as far as the Ramparts, with a small Parry, which he commanded by means of a false Pals port; bur, being discovered by a Sentinel, he was forced to retreat in Confusion, with the Loss of some of his Men. Wimar fince defeated Two Regiments of Dragoons, and Two other Regiments of Horse, and seized on the Caftle of Manberg; the Garrison of which Place surrendred at Discretion, to a Suedish Officer. But I am informed, that the Two Armies came near to one another on the Banks of the Rhine; of which I shall say no more than what is necesfary.

The Emperor's Troops being discovered by Wimar's Vant-guard, commanded by Tutenne, gained an high Ground son which, fortifying themselves,
they sheltred behind a Church and some Houses,
before which there was a Battery raised of several Pieces of Gannon, to keep the Swedes at a distance, and hinder them from encamping too near. Some French, imprudently advancing to discover the Enemy's Postures within less than Musquet-shot, were were almost all kill'd on the Place. By this time the Duke of Wimar, seeing he could not draw the Imperialists to fight, and it being impossible to force them on the Mountain, where they were intrenched, retired under the Castle of Mauberg, with his Rear-guard, commanded by the Count de Gurbian, a French Gentleman. The next day he joined the rest of the Army, and being informed by a Moor that ferved him, and in whom he put great Confidence, that the Imperialifts began early in the Morning to revire; he immediately therefore pur himfelf into a Condition to follow them, making his Army to march in Battel-array. His Horse confisted of Twenty four Squadrons, and his Foot of Eight Bartalions; befides the Auxiliary Troops, of which

d

50

5.

1

155

e

e

6

The French affirm, the Imperialifit were the ftrongeft, as having Four thouland Men more than the Smedes; of which 'tis hard to know the certainty; but the Particulars of the Battel are worth ones writing. Twas very bloody, the Fight being obstinately held by both Parties, and the Victory long inclining, fometimes to one fide, and sometimes to another . So that the Combatants were ready to retire, weary of friking and being firuck; when Formne on a fudden declared ber felf for the Duke of Wimar, who behaved himself in the Fight like a Wife Captain and valiant Soldier (Tis certain, the Imperialifts have lost Two Twouland Men in this Occasion, with feveral of their Principal Officers: And also, above . Fifteen Hundred were made Prisoners; amongst which, there were above Two hundred Persons confiderable on the Account of their Birth or Employs. I make no mention of the Number of the Cannon; neither do I reckon the Hundred Colours or Corners, nor Three Thousand Waggons laden with all forts of Ammunicion, which fell to the Conquerors: But I greatly value the Box of Writings of Two great Commanders, wherein were found the Instructions and fecret Orders of the Ring of Hungary, and some Treaties made with the Sublime Port; to which, all the Potentates of the World should pay Homage.

It cannot yet be discovered what these Treaties contain ; yet I thall do all that's possible in order to it. The Booty has been great; however Wimar feems not to fer much by it, as aiming accomething more confiderable. He remained Two Days in the Field of Battel, the better to affure his Enemy of his Conqueft. He moreover pretends in his Letters to this Court, that he had not in this Expedition above Five hundred Foot, and few Cavalry; which out of a Bravado, he fays he will reinforce with his Pages. This is that which our Emperors who are the Mafters of the World, would feruple to fay in the Presence of their Slaves; fo far would they be from speaking so before an Army, as this Prince did, in the Presence of a great King. See the Vanity of one of these Infidels Generals.

In Obedience to the Orders which I received from thee, I here end my Letter; fo that thou wilk receive a very imperfect Relation, of the Events which I began to relate to thee; and I shall conrinue my Difparch to morrow, that thou may's the better remember what I have already written to thee, that I may not lose the Thread of the Hiboth Two. Two salsod ftory.

Paris, 24th of the last Moon, w horballe assure encome of the same of the state of the state of the state of the same of the s

feveral of facts Principal

the Daines, Trompels, and the Applicates when

LETTER VIII.

To the Same.

I Find in the Alchoran, the Chapter which speaks of Limbo's, to be very long; and, I believe I never wrote thee any Letter, wherein there were so many Words; Thou shak not receive henceforward any from me, larger than the Hundred and six Versicles of this Chapter, seeing thou enjoynest me to be short. I have therefore divided this Dispatch into Two, less it should prove tire-fom to thee; although I believe thou wouldest have sound it when intire, not so long as the Chapter which treats of Hell.

Wimar lost no time, but went and encamped before Brizae. He caused the Trenches to be opened with great Diligence, and has so befer the Rhine, that nothing can pass without his Leave. This River is considerable for its Largeness, and Length of its Course; carrying Vessels of great Burthen, which makes it much frequented.

Provisions of all kinds, used all imaginable Artifices to surprize it, or carry it by Assault. It is the Capital of a great Province, where he is Master of several considerable Places, and several strong Castles, from whence, one may lay, the Place was already besieged.

Things were in this Condition, and there was no other Discourse in the Sweder Camp, bur of Victories, Losses and Wounds, when the News of the Birth of the Dauphin was brought there, which caused another Noise to be heard. The Horse and Foot, joyned their Shouts of Joy of the Sounds of the Drums, Trumpets, and the Artillery, which was feveral times discharged.

The Valour of the Duke of Wimar, and that of the Troops which he commands, made not the Imperialiffs to lose their Courage, having recruited their Army with new Troops. General Lamboye, a Man of Courage and good Conduct, appeared in the fight of the Swedes, having added tothis Army Five Thousand Men, with the rest of the Troops of Prince Savelly, and walted the Country which the Enemy was in Possession of the thou wouldft know the Situation of the Suedes Camp, and in what manner they made their Trenches. and Circumvallations, I can certainly inform thee; baving had fome time fince a very exact Draught of it. This Camp is Three German Miles in Gompass; Fortified on each fide by a Trench Sixteen Foot thick, with a large deep Ditch, a double Pulifatio, and feveral Redoubts. The Lower as well as Upper Parts of the Town, are mightily ennoyed by Two Bridges made on the Rhine. The Abundance of all forts of Ammunition, does much hearten the Army. The Commander, although very ill. yet is incellantly watchful, and feems indefatigable. The Soldiers animated by sheir past Successes, think of nothing but new Conquests, and new Booty, imagining themselves invincible. The Artillery, which is in the Camp, is Fifty Pleces of great Cannon, with which such Batteries have been made, as drive the Belieged to despair. I mention nor to thee feveral fmail Skirmifles, which continually happen, yet this is what is most considerable :: Some Troops of young Soldiers of the Imperial Army having taken feveral Cattle from the Sweder. and made some Prisoners, had Notice of the March of Colonel Sillard, who came from Frances and brought a good Sum of Mony for the Payment of the Troops. They went to meet him, and took it, together with feyeral Young Gentlemen Prifoners, all Men of Note; and, who had also a great deal of Mony about them, At the same time, the Duke of Lorrain, a Prince of great Valour, who ferves in the Imperialists Party, has undertaken to relieve Brizac, which he knew was reduced to the utmost Extremity: And, having chosen, for this Defign, Forty Companies of Foot for a Convey of Provisions; and, being on his March, he mer with the Duke of Wimar. And this is the shore of the Story: The Prince was fill juditpoled, by reafon of his late Sickness; yet, this could not hinder him from embracing this Occasion, which he believed to be of great Importance to his Party; he got cherefore on Horseback, and marched up to the Duken bluce and American could could able

The Combar lasted Five Hours, and Lorrain, did all that could be expected from a brave and experienced Commander. But, he was constrained to yield to the Duke's Fortune, and retire into a Wood, with what he could fave of his Troops; and, the Suedes Courage was not a little increased by fo great an Advantage, which will certainly be attended with the Surrender of Brigge. The Duke of Wimar remained Mafter of the Field, having entirely defeated the Imperialifts Foot, and put the Duke of Lorrain's Horse into a Horrid Diforder: There lay above Twelve Hyndred Dead on the Place, and all the Baggage, together with the Ammunicion, fell into the Hands of the Conqueror. A Man would think, Thuftrious Kaimakam that the God Mars has united himself with this Caprain a fore norwithstanding the Weakness of his Body, he performs every Day most Heroick Actions with his valiant Soldiers, who are ready. to undertake any thing, when he is at their Head. Whether this happens from his noc valuing of Life, or his Thirft after Honour ; yer, forit is That Christien he

Syl

That he cannot live without nourishing himself with Victories; and, he begins already to equal the Famous Gustavins, under whom he has learn'd his Trade. Yet he has lost, norwithstanding his Diligence, two Forts he built on the Rhine, which, if he retakes, 'twill not be without the Cost of much Blood on both sides. The Germans have already lost Sixty Thousand Men there, amongst which there were Four Hundred Drowned.

The Extremities of Brigat, of which we have already private Advices, is at present known by all the World. The Sweder intercepted, the last Moon of Odober, a Letter from the Governor to the King of Hungary, wherein he laid open his Condition. and rold him plainly, that Places which wanted Men, Victuals, and Ammunicion, could not be defended bur by a Miracle ; adding, that the best Officers and Soldiers were already dead; and those that were alive, were either Sick, or lay Wounded. and fo greatly tired, that they could do no Service; and besides, their Victuals would last but twelve Days. He feemed afterwards to reproach him for letting the time flip, in which he had promifed him affiftance; and put him it mind, he did not believe he could hold our to the 4th of the Minn of September; being reduced to fuch Extremities. that he durft not mention particulars, left his Letter should fall into other hands. Observe the Imprudence of the Expression; he dares not write all. and yet he writes more than needs, to discover than the Place will be infallibly taken at

If then beeft impatient to know the Surrender of Briene, thou fliale be fatisfied by this Differely. The Post is now come, which brings News of the taking of this important Place, and he has come hither in Three Days. The Place was taken according to the Rules of War, surrendring the Ninth of the last Mean of this Year, according to the

Christians

Christians Stile. The Governor procured very honourable Terms: and truly, he sustained the Siege with all the Vigour and Courage pollibles to the laft extremity. He is called the Baron de Reynech : His Name deserves a Place in the Letters thou enregister's; and that the Divan should be inform'd of a Man, who knows fo well to defend what is intrusted to him, that they may give to Vertue her Due. There wene out of Brizac, only Four Hundred Foot, and Seventy Horse, who were all Naked, Wounded, and almost Dead with Hunger; they were reduced to those Extremities, that they had already eaten the Flesh of Horses, Cats, and Dogs; and some were said to have devoured Human Flesh. As touching the Booty, there are different Discourses; but 'tis certain, the Conqueror found above Two Hundred Pieces of Cannon in the Place the party will be made and viculant

But, there is a strange Story related of a Young Lady, of admirable Beauty, who falling down at the Duke of Wimar's Feet, thus spake to him: Sir, I have but some few Moments to live, Hunger having reduced me to the Gates of Death; but, I shall die desperate, if you do not revenge me of a base Fellow, who has exacted of me a Diamond of great value, which I have been forced to give him for a roafted Mouse; I am not angry with him for his taking of me a Pearl-Necklace during the Siege for four ounces of Flour; but I confess my Weakness, I cannot see my felf bereaved of what I most valued, and die without Satisfaction, 'Tis faid, this Prince could not forbear shedding Tears at so pitious a Spectacle; this Lady dving almost at the same instant she had done speaking; but 'cis not known whether he called this hard-hearted Fellow to an account for what he had detained.

The Siege of Brirac lasted Four Moons; almost Fourscore Thousand Men perishing in the Town, by Sickness, Wounds and Famine. Bonfires are made at Paris, for so great an Advantage; and, the Duke of Wimar's Praises, are every where celebrated; and, great Commendations are given him in the Letters from the court. Our Empire may have one Day something to sear, from so brave, so experienced, and ambitious a Captain, were he at leisure. But, Germany is so large a Gountry, so full of stout Men, and contains so many great Towns, and chose so well Fortified, as will afford him Work enough, without troubling Us.

Tis pleasantly said here, That the Emperors of Germany will no more sleep quietly; for, in losing Brizac, they have lost their Pillow on which they rested; and, 'eis thought, France may one Day unite this Conquest to her Crown. The great God multiply the Years of thy Life, as the Sand of the Sea, and increase every Day thy Fortune, and continue thy Health.

Paris, 25th of the last Moon,

LETTER VIII.

the bis exacted of the a Hatten's et was studie

unich i einer beim toreid in grac inm for a roulfed Mode : I was a carre publican the less taking of

To Melec Amet.

Have heard here a confused Discourse of the Disgrace of Stridya Bey; but, thy Letters have satisfied me. Thou scess, Friend, how Things go. He had the Prince's Favour, and yet could not save himself. He had moreover great Riches, and yet was obliged to undergo such great Ignominy. He 0

f

g

d

c

1-

0.

10

et

Ic.

Ili

DESCRIPTION OF

will be more deformed than he was, having now left his Note and Ears in the Hands of the Common Executioner. Amurath, in condemning him to this Punishment, has done an Act of Justice worthy of him: For, the honestest Men in the Empire, have ever wished ill to this proud and insolent Greek, This Man, who was but a piciful Fisherman, and Seller of Oysters, got this intollerable Pride by the prodigious Riches he acquired in this mean Occupation. His great Wealth made him find the means of obtaining the Favour of the Ministers and Favourites of the Prince; and bis Highness himself honoured him with his Friendship, gave him Offices, and heap'd up Riches on him. Thou fhouldest know all, I say, but I am astonished thou shouldest write to me, That this Wretch, having been put out from the Government of Waluchia, by reason of his insupportable Pride and extream Coverousness, should pretend to re-enter on this Office by means of Mony, trying in some fort to corrupt the Justice of Amurath. Ob-Prince's Indignation: The Emperor must have been more coverous than Stridga, had he favoured his Defign; bur, 'twas the Decree of Heaven that Stridya should be punished, and, that our Mafter should give a terrible Example of his Justice, to terrifie those who use their Riches to commit all forts of Crimes, and to purchase all manner of infamous Pleasures.

The News of the fall of this Slave, had in some fort mitigated the great Melancholy I felt, when I received thy Letter: But, the Death of Zagarabajci, our common Friend, does not a little afflict me; as well as the Marriage of his Son Caragurli, made the same day, does aftonish me: For, I cannot comprehend, how there could well be celebrated in the same day, and at the same House, two such different

rent Ceremonies, as is a Funeral and a Wedding.

I find this adventure very flrange; and though our Friend indeed was very old, yet I bewail him, as if he had died before his time. He was an honest Man, of great Piety, and moderately Rich: and this is what makes Mortals happy in this World and the other too. But, thou doft not inform me, whether the excessive Joy he had to see his Son married to a Greek, rich with the Goods of Fortune, endued with great Vertue, and a Mute, has not canfed his Death. I rather think thou wilt fay, our Friend Zagarabasci is dead by some Excess, than yield to what we contested about formerly. I always found in this Friend great Marks of Honesty and Sobriety; and he also appeared to me to have great tenderness for his Son. I cannor without offending thee, accuse this old Gentleman of want of Moderation, yer, he is dead with a transport of Joy. Thou seeft, I affirmed no impossible thing, when I maintained in my Youth, that an extraordinary and unforeseen Joy is more likely to kill, than sudden Grief, though never so violent. Didst thou think it a matter of fmall Satisfaction to a Father, that is a wife and fober Man, to obtain for his Son a Woman that is a Mute; for what greater pleasure can a Husband have, than to have a Wife that is not talkative? The Christians understand not the Wisdom of the Turks, when they laugh at our Sultans, who find the greatest part of their Pleasures, in the Conversation of Mutes. Is there any thing more delightful than to hear a Man, that does not freak; and to fee one reason on all things, that has no Tongue; Thou knowest how many things these Mutes of the Seragtio, do give one to understand; and what Eloquence there is in their Signs and Geffures. remembreft, that when Amurath would thanks to the Sovereign Moderator of all the world,

5

e

n

n

ie

u

6.

-

u

c

ic d, World, in that he had escaped Death, when the Lightning fell on his Bed, and burnt to his very Shirt; he seemed to offer him a great Sacrifice, in putting a Mute out of the Seraglio, which he dearly loved by reason of her Tricks and Gestures. Muses were one day ready to fall together a Fighting, because they would not receive amongst them a Tenth Companion, fent them by a Mandamus from a King of Italy: But, when this Tenth Muse fignified to them, That the was Dumb, all the Voices were for her. Dear Melec, 'tis not without Reason I write thee this. Thou art still young, and defignest for Matrimony : Believe Mahmut ; there are few Women that are Wife; and they fay little that is Good: Think then what those say, who know nothing, and whose number is infinite. When they have talked a whole Day, believe me, they have faid nothing. If thou Marrieft, follow my Counfel. Take not a Mute, for then thou will Marry a Beaft. Neither chuse one that talketh; for thou wilt be linked with a Moufter. As to our Friend, he died by a particular Grace from Heaven: Yet I cannot but think still of his Death. How many more extraordinary Accidents will thou fee, if thou livest to old Age; and especially, if thou livest at Constantinople; where are communally beheld frange Adventures, and extraordinary Effects, both of Life and Death, Cruelty and Clemency; as well as of good and bad Fortune. Being in Breath, I could continue still to write to thee; but I think it's time to end, left I prove tirefome. And I end in praying Heaven to keep thee in Health, whereeverathon are money to the second to a second to replaced the contract of the rest of the contract of the contr

Paris, 25th. of the laft Moon, of the Tear 1638. To Chillian Williams remain Sol to the the first the and As and rent Ceremonies, as is a Funeral and a Wedding.

I find this adventure very flrange; and though our Friend indeed was very old, yet I bewail him, as If he had died before his time. He was an honest Man, of great Piety, and moderately Rich: and this is what makes Mortals happy in this World and the other too. But, thou doft not inform me, whether the excessive Toy he had to see his Son married to a Greek, rich with the Goods of Fortune, endued with great Vertue, and a Mute, has not caused his Death. I rather think thou wilt fay our Friend Zaearabasci is dead by some Excess, than yield to what we contested about formerly. I always found in this Friend great Marks of Honesty and Sobriety; and he also appeared to me to have great tenderness for his Son. I cannot without offending thee, accuse this old Gentleman of want of Moderation, yet, he is dead with a transport of Joy. Thou seeft, I affirmed no impossible thing, when I maintained in my Youch, that an extraordinary and unforeseen Joy is more likely to kill, than sudden Grief, though never fo violent. Didst thou think it a matter of fmall Satisfaction to a Father, that is a wife and fober Man, to obtain for his Son a Woman that is a Mute; for what greater pleasure can a Husband have, than to have a Wife that is not talkative? The Christians understand not the Wisdom of the Turks, when they laugh at our Sultans, who find the greatest part of their Pleasures, in the Conversation of Mutes. Is there any thing more delightful than to hear a Man, that does not freak; and to fee one reason on all things, that has no Tongue; Thou knowest how many things these Mutes of the Seragtio, do give one to understand; and what Eloquence there is in their Signs and Geffures. remembreft, that when Amerath would thanks to the Sovereign Moderator of all the world,

World, in that he had escaped Death, when the Lightning fell on his Bed, and burnt to his very Shire; he seemed to offer him a great Sacrifice, in putting a Mute out of the Seraglie, which he dearly loved by reason of her Tricks and Gestures. The Muses were one day ready to fall together a Fighting, because they would not receive amonast them a Tenth Companion, fent them by a Mandamus from a King of Italy: But, when this Tenth Mule fignified to them, That the was Dumb, all the Voices were for her. Dear Melec, 'tis not without Reafon I write thee this. Thou art still young and defignest for Marrimony : Believe Mahmur ; there are few Women that are Wife; and they fay little that is Good: Think then what those say, who know nothing, and whose number is infinite. When they have talked a whole Day, believe me, they have faid nothing. If thou Marrieft, follow my Counfel. Take not a Mute, for then thou will Marry a Beaft. Neither chuse one that talketh; for thou will be linked with a Monfter. As to our Friend, he died by a particular Grace from Heaven: Yet I cannot but think still of his Death. How many more extraordinary Accidents will thou fee, if thou livest to old Age; and especially, if thou livest at Conflantimple; where are continually beheld frange Adventures, and extraordinary Effects, both of Life and Death, Cruelty and Clemency; as well as of good and bad Fortune. Being in Breath, I could continue still to write to thee; but I think it's time to end, left I prove tirefome. And I end in praying Heaven to keep thee in Health, whereeverathou art. non-entil 1 700 -and leek out to established the contract on the Seal businesses

Paris, 25th. of the last Moon,

NEW YORK THE PARTY OF THE PARTY

Y

5

d

15

d

s, ic

n

n

ne

u

e-

0-ou

ve

lie

World in the little clouded Death, when the 'where aid or muerTreRid IX. of griffing L. Shire; he feemed to efter hum a great Reminee, in parting a . the county bad; or which he dearly loved by ree on of received and Certares. The ... The ... While were one day ready to fall together a bights

Daris, where I live, is a very healthful City, and fo are all the Places thereabouts, free from Peffilencial Airs; and yet there of happens fudden Deathstias well as ar Conftantinople ; and, they die here likewife of Joy. I will relate to thee what I have parely feen, and not what I have heard, to happen in London, the most ancient and chiefest City of the Kingdom of England: A rich Old Man falling Sick, and lying on his Death-Bed, fenr to his only Son, diving at Paris, where he spent his time in Pleafure, to come over, that he might withohis Estate all give him this Blefting of Think what News this was to a Young Man, to whom the Life of a Father was roubleforme, as being an Obstacle to his Liberty pand, who waited his Death, to take his I wing of all the Pleafures, which his corrupt Nature makes him respect as his Sovereign Good. This Young Man intending to get upon Horfeback, to run where he was called, found himfelf embarked for la Moyage, which he did not defignate make; he fell dead on the Blace, and I faw him in the fame inflant, wherein he was living, and healthful to expired Wore hof he Self of our Bhilosopher Muslaadin Saadi, I would tell thee, it matters not, whether one dies indically, or languish a long sime; whether a Man dies in his Bed, or at the Gallows. But, I being none of Zend's Difciples, and knowing no Peripatetick, or Philosopher, amongst fo many Sells that were in Orece, who dispured, Whether Life or Death is to be preferred: So, expect not from me any Arguings on the Morals of those Greeks, nor yet of the Perfrans.

sians. But if Death be such a terrible Thing, endeayour to live in such a manner that it may never affright thee when it shall approach thee, or when thou that fee it invade others; expecting it at all Times, and in all Places. Doft thou know by what Herb, or by what secret Magick Charm I do not fear it? 'Tis by the leading of an innocent Life. Here is published, and that with great Reason, the last Words of a Man of great Birth; who died when he was very old, by a Wound he received. He had served divers kings in Places of the highest Trust; and being mortally wounded in a Battel, mark what he said to those that exhorted him to die like a good Christian, and with the same Courage he had shewed in Life: His Reply was, That a Man who had lived well Fourfcore Tears, cannot be to feek how to die well for a quarter of an bour. This great Man, who was a famous Souldier, was also a true Philosopher; and I might fay, he was a Saint. had he been of our Religion. I believe he was a most edifying Spectacle, and the more confiderable, in as much as the Example he gave of dying well, is more valuable, than that which he gave in fo many Battels of couragions Fighting. He was call'd Anne de Montmorance, Constable of France; whose Life I had the Curiofity of Reading; being to be found in the History of the Civil Wars of that Kingdom.

But, before I and this Letter, let me denote to thee the difference there is between the Effects of Grief and Joy. The Messenger from England, of whom I already spake, finding at his Return, the old Man, whom he had lest Dying; still alive; he gave him such a strange Stroke by telling to him the Death of his 80%, that Grief having vanquished the Assault of Death; restored to this unhappy old Man, that Strength he had lost in his Health; so that coming himself some days

d

C

I

g, ır

it

n-

à,

r,

0

cgs

Y-

after, to Park, I faw him bewail the Loss of his only Son.

He that faid heretofore, A Man flould learn all his Life to die well, uttered no strange Doctrine. Our Days will last long enough, if we be ready to fay, at all times, We have lived enough: And, if welove as we ought, our great Emporor, who is Invincible, Holy, and the most Just among Men: And, if we observe what a French Peasant said to all those that passed before his Door, Never deny your Affiftance, nor never do any Body any Hurt.

Let thou and I number our Days (as was preached heretofore in the Seraglio, to the white Eunuchs by the Persian, whose Eyes were put out because he faw too clearly.) He always infifted on the Shortness, Uncertainty, and Vanity of Human Life. He faid, Twas short, considering what we had to do in it; uncertain as to what we shall do in it; and always mix'd with what we have done, and what remains for us to do. Teach not thy Son Mehemer yet, for whom thou haft so much Affection, these Precepts. Children have not that Ripeness of Judgment as is necessary, to hear Discourses of Death; they are too hard Bits for their Stomachs; and, which indeed Old Men can hardly digest; and which they fwallow not without feeling all the Bitternels of them.

I pray God keep the Imperial City, wish those that dwell in it, and shelter it from the Scorms which fall on infamous Ciries; and I befeech him, thou may's live without Offence, that thou may'st never fear Death.

Paris, 25th, of the last Moon, of the Tear 1638.

the medianes, to see how many Dond steeling and the to the seed of the seed of

To Enguruli Emin Mehemet Cheik, a

en me ; ricce's no svoiding on s

WHEN I parted from Conftantinople, I against the Gravel, and thou presented'st me with a Paper, which was to secure me against all Bodily Evils. Time only can decide which of us Two made the best Present to his Friend. Thou hast precented to teach me in few Words, how to live amongst the Infidels; And I thought in giving thee a Scone, to give thee a Remedy against the Diflemper thou are troubled with. I never turn my felf towards the Place where Mecha lies, but I remember where thy Amiry began, and how far fince it has been extended towards me. Absence has not leffened thy Kindness, nor hindred thee from fending me thy grave Counfels; but I am as yet too young, to fee about the preparing my felf for the other World; and too vigorous and healthful, to hearken to thy ferious and melancholy Discourses.

I with thou were but at Paris, where thou would ft fee a great Number of People, who fell a most precious Thing, to purchase a vain and fantastick Title: How many with great Earnestness sure for Placear's from the King, that they may seek their Deaths? Perhaps thou never thoughtest there were any such kind of People. What dost thou think then of the Soldiery in General; are they any others than Martyrs of Ambition, to whom one would think Life is a Burnien? 'Tis a fad spectacle, to see how many Dead lie in the S reets; or carried on the Shoulders of their Friends or Kinsmen to their Graves: Yet this is so common a thing in Paris, that the People make no Wonder of it.

This way of Living obliges me to do as the reft. I begin to confider, That what happens to another, may happen to me; there's no avoiding ones Deftiny. This Preface is only to bring in a Story of this King's Goodness, which ought to be an Example to all Princes. The French have need of fresh Soldiers to fill up so many Troops as they continually entertain : Not long fince then, there came a Man full of Years, and overwhelm'd with Defpair, who defir'd to be Lifted in elis Prince's Service. To obtain what he defired, he told the King, That he was the Father of Twelve children. Seven of which were Daughters, who were Marriageble; that he could no longer live, being not able to maintain such a great Family; and that being ignorant, as yet bow to die, be would learn it in the King's Service. The Prince having appointed him to wait upon him one Day privately in his Closer, thus spake to him : Thy Despair makes thee desirous to be lifted among it my Soldiers; and Charity obliges me to retain thee, amongst the Citizens. Those that are Fools when they enter into Troops, commonly come out wifer; because they learn several things of which they were before ignorant : But as to thy part, what Time ball thou, to learn, who are ready to fall dead at the same Moment thou enterest into the School? Tet I receive thee; take this Sword; go and combat thy Folly; and take this Purfe to Succour thy Family, and be enred; but if thou art wife, fay not from whom thou bast received toy Cure. I know not what Som was in the Purfe, no more than I do of what Metal the Sword was Ent I have this Story from an Officer of the King's Closet, with whom I have that strict Converse, that he told me this Pal-

fage as foon as ever it hapned.

d

6

4 re

कि मामिक

1-

e-1-

eft

er rey

10-

to.

100 20

199

be

OM

at P

m ap

I'll tell thee, if thou wilt, some of the principal passages of my Life; for I conceal nothing from the Ministers, and the most Venerable Mufti, who knows all that I do: I adore the Sovereign. Mafter of the Universe; and have a great Ven neration for his Holy Prophet : I never defileuring. Hands in Blood, neither have I ever violated any Man's Bed: Leafily forgive my enemies, and hate, above all things the Crime of Slandering. If this be not sufficient to merit Salvation, I do not know what is. These are all my Vertues; as to other Qualifications, I have none I have no Knack at Thiering ; my Talents lie not that way; were I qualified, I might, as most do, devile means to put my Art in practice. But living according to these afore-mentioned Maxims, I doubt not but I shall find entrance into that Paradife, where faithful Souls will enjoy a perfect Happinels, and fet their Feet on the Necks of the Enemies of our Holy Law, where, they shall suffer neither Hunger, Thirst, nor Nakedness; free from, the parching Heats of the Sun, and the pinching Sharpnels of the Colds, caused by the Mosa; where, under the agreeable shade of Trees, they shall gather the preciousest Fruit, standing, sitting or lying; and drink in Cups of Gold on Emerald. the most delicious Liquors, which spring from a clear Fountain; and be ferved with inconceivable Magnificence. In this Divine place, they that be more beautiful and thining than the Scare in the Firmament, whose Brightness enlightens the Darkeft Night; their Robes shall be of finest Silk of a Colour more green and pleafing to the Eye, than the Herbs which spring up in May : And shall forther receive from the Hands of God, a porion, more

more (weet and delicious, than can be imagined, as a Recompence for the Good they have done, during their Abode amongst Men. Thou knowcft, 'tis impossible for me to go on Pilgrimage to Mecha, seeing I am obliged to abide at Paris. Thou knowest also, I cannot give my self to contemplation, being forced to lead an active Life; for I must not remain among the Dervifes, who pass their Days in Solicude; ferving in France, as I must do, our Puissant and Invincible Emperor. Thou seeft here what my Condition will bear; accuse me not therefore for neglecting the pious Advices thou givest me. I forget not so much Death, as I forget that I must die.

Be informed of this from me, There's not a Town in the World, where People do learn better to live ill. than at Paris; neither is there any Place where they are better taught to die: I need nostell thee, here are publick Academies (as were heretofore amongst the Egyptians) wherein dead Bodies lie exposed to publick View, to make Men remember the indispensable Necessity of dying. But I may tell thee, there's no Day, wherein in this great Town, a great quantity of Fools do not teach wifer than themselves, Things they have been ever ignorant of; for the Gibbets and Scaffolds, fet up for the Puniffment of the Guilty, hinder the Destruction of great many People, whose Innocency is preferved by these kind of Spectacles. Here the Poor, who had heretofore plentiful Subfiftences, teach good Husbandry; the Proud, Humility; the debauched with Women, Chaftity.

I believe, there is no Part of the World, where there are more Thieves and Pick-Pockets, and who do their Work with greater Art and Subrilty; they exercise their Crast in all places; in the Churches, as well as the Streets, Markets, and Bridges; fo that our People of the Morea, who as of God, a postos.

Time brought the Commer Menine forfren are thought by us to be fuch great Masters in this Science, are mere Asses to them. Adieu.

Paris, 10th of the 1st. Moon, of the Tear 1639.

LETTER XI

To Cara Hali, the Phylician.

I Know not whether what I thought I faw laft I Night in my Bed, be the effect of a Dream, or of a real Vision. I was awaked by a great Earthquake, which made me rife affrighted out of my Bed. But, informing my felf by some People, I found 'twas but a Dream.

My Adventure has renewed the Remembrance of one, which proved of fad Confequence to one part of Italy, Physicians are at a loss to find our the Causes of these horrible Fires, which are vomited up at certain times by Mount Gibel, Stromboll, and Vesuvius; Mountains in Sicily, not far from Naples, whose Roots seem to spring from Hell; whence arise often filthy Exhalations, Smoaks and Sulphur, with Flames which cast up Scenes and Ashes to the Clouds

'Tis known, I believe at Conftantinople, That towards the Beginning of the Moon of February, there was loft near Naples a little Island, that had Four Miles in Compais. It's related as a Thing certain, That after this Isle was suddenly swallowed down into the Soul the Fire which it included not finding its usual Vent, there was opened fome Days after, a new Way along the Coafts of Calabria, near Meffina. There did it appear, having first caused an horrible Earthquake, which overthrew a great Pile of Building, which the Christians call a Steeple, that belonged to a principal Church; which buried under its Ruins a vast Number of People, whose Devotion had at that Time brought thither. Some Towns of the Kingdom of Naples suffered by this Earthquake, with great Multitudes of People, and Herds of Cattle, which were miserably lost in the Fire, by the Smoak and Heaps of Ashes. And amongst those that have been smothered to death, are reckoned several Lords of those Countries, who are Masters but of sew Subjects, and yet bear the Title of Princes.

My dear Friend, Cara Hali, these are dreadful Effects of Nature, whose Causes will not be and our by us. Certainly, these Countries of traly, must be far from Paradife, sceing these Mouths of Hell (if it be true as many people fay, they are in these Mountains) do frequently ruine by these Irruptions Calabria and Sicily. Natwalife affirm. That these Mountains nourish Sulphoreous Marter in their Bowels, which is cafily inflamed, and iffues out with more or left Vehemency, and more or less Frequency, according as the Marter is more or less disposed, and the Subterranean Winds kindle and eject these Fires, and open the Mals of Earth, under which they are thu up. But the Opinion of certain Philosophers, who maintain. That meer Change produces thefe extraordinary Events, appears to me very ridicus lous & affirming, That one Scope Ariking another, produces a Spark, whence happen these great Inflammations: Nay, they proceed farther, and would perfuade us, That a lighted Lamp, left by Chance, by those who searched into the Bowels of thele Mountains, to discover the Secrets of Nature, might make these Flames; which lighting on a combustible Marter, and meeting with nothing that is contrary to 'em to extinguish them, do cause these surprising Effects. They also say, That Lightning striking siercely on some one of the Coasts of these Mountains, may do the same thing; as the Scones striking one against another, or the Lamp left.

lighted in s

These Opinions would not appear so ridiculous, were it possible to make any Demonstration of em: But these Events being all extraordinary, and in a manner prodigious, I shall willingly suffer thee to believe, that 'tis a Work of Nature, or Hell, or Chance alone, which causes the perpetual Motions of these Fires, which are so terrible, and so greatly damnise one of the finest Countries in the World, as Greece is, and this Island which is the Delight and Nurse of almost all the Provinces scituated on the Banks of the Mediterrange near-Sea.

We find also in Ireland these Mountains of Fire, yet with this Difference, that their Flames do no Hurt, which make 'em no ways dreadful to the Inhabitants. I think too I have heard my Father say, That being in Company with certain Arabians in our Lycia, he saw these kinds of Fires come out of the Earth, but they broke out gently, and caused no Damage.

I am now perswaded of one Thing, which I would never believe before; which is, That Old Pliny, intending to relate to the Emperor Tum, and leave to Posterity a Relation of the Effects of Vesuius, and a perfect Discovery of the Causes of so many prodigious Effects; he therefore went himself on the place, because that in his Time this samous Mountain had cast out an horrible Quantity of Fire, Stones and Ashes, with so great Violence, and such terrible Noise, that the Effects of it were felt in Spria, Africk, and especially in Agric. But the Curiofity of this wretched Phis Garage to facilly Marian

allymask wireshood but

which is the Spile of losopher having cost him his Life, the Romans expect still with his Return, the Discovery of the fecret Caufes of fo many prodigious Effects. Take care of thine own Health, and let not any of thy Patients miscarry through thy Neglect or Rashness. Continue to love me, though I am at a great Di-ftance from thee. Write to me fometimes; and believe, that I am not able to conform my felf to the way of living of Strangers amongst whom I refide. I shall be always a good Mussulman, and a Faithful Friend.

Paris, 10th of the 1st Moon, of the Tear 1639. as the Warb en ton

LETTER XIL

To the venerable Musci, Prince of the Re-ligion of the Turks.

HY Decree is very cruel, to separate me, without having committed any Crime, from the Communion of the Faithful.

Thave read the Holy Answer thou hast made me, with great Veneration; but this has not been without many Tears. Thou half not unried the Knot of the Difficulties which perplex me, but made it indiffoluble. So that I only live in the Certainty of having no Certitude; and my Soul which is encompaffed with Fear, will be in Dread till Death.

If I do what thou proposest, how shall I be fure of not failing, iceing I do not understand what I ought to do? I am to dull, that I cannot diffin-

10 0

y

0

3

guish, Whether thou exhortest me to do what I have ever done, or whether thou forbiddest me what I asked of thee.

I entreated thee to let me know, Whether I might live amongst the Christians, and do in Appearance, what they do effectually in the Observance of the Ceremonies of their Religion: And thou answerest me, That the Circumcifed, or Faith. ful, should have no doubt in his Law, and needs no other Precepts to observe it, than the Law is felf. Moreover. That the true Muffulman must be willing to lose his Estate, his Life and Honour in the Sultan's Service; That the Christians are Enemies to the True God, the Emperor and Religion ; and that in fine, one ought to ferifice all Things not to betray this God, who is noon chief Mafter. Tell me, I entreat thee on my bended Knees, Cannot a Man besa true Mabomerand without having evernally the Bollowers of Jefus And in living amongst them fecretly a True Musiliman; must one shew ones self to be of another Religion or pretend to be of theirs? Thou wilt'sell methe Alsoran speaks with great Clearness, yer howlmany obscure Paffages do we find in the Words of our Holy Prophet, wherein we need the Expositions

I have no Belief for Ingot, neither will I given Credit to the Devil; my Law expressly forbids it of For, I believe in one only True God, who knew the 3 Intention of our Hely Lawgiver, and fees what we cannon discover. And the Prophet ories out, That is that has such Principles, cleans on the strongest Prophe can ever meet with; there being norhing which is able to overthrow it.

Differfe, Revetend Sir, as much as then carif, ther Darkness of my Spirit? I remoure thereby the M Almighty Father, who can make live Fish come on the dry Bones of the A's, which died an hundred by Years past.

bad

I do por discontinue here my usual Prayers. which I make in the Manner they are prescribed me by the Law, with my Face always turn'd to the Side of Mecha. When I fast, I car only at Night, and I continue my Repast till Aurora advancing the Day, gives me Light enough to diftinguish Black Thread from White, And I pass over the Day, without taking any Nourishment, till the Darkness be fo great, that I cannot fee the Eve of a Needle ! Tis true, I give no Alms to the Poor. because I doube. Whether it be lawful to do good to those, who continually move Heaven against

The Bilhops here are in great Veneration. They have not an absolute Authority, because they depend on the Roman Prelate, and the King Yet their furifdiction is very large, the Kingdom, being full of Churches, and thefe Churches frechesized by Millions of People. They wear about their Neeks a Golden Crois. They live in publick good Lives; are obliged to know all the Points of their Law; they must be Dostors, are obliged to Celibary, to be Sober, Hospitable, Prudent, Tyreprehenfible, without covering others Goods; they must never be Drunk, or shed Hamane Blood. Their Habit is a long Vest reaching to the Ground, of Black Silk or Violet. They go little on Foot, but are carried in Coaches, to avoid the Wearisomeness which would oppress them, in a Town which feems the greatest in the World; which thou wouldest do too perhaps. were thou defigued to be their Sovereign Prelate. which is able to outside out this

The great Arbiter of the World, favour by his Mercy, or by an Effect of his Juffice, the inconceivable Honour of fuffering thee to fweep during thy Life, his most floly and only Temple of Mecha, in the Company of Ismael and Abra-00 1

Vol. I. A Spy at PARIS.

cast in the Uncomie; sees sellived

131

bam, that thou maist keep it clean, without any Filsh of what Rind soever.

Paris, 10th of the 1st Moon, of the Tear 1639.

one who show cuts, deal some

LETTER XIII.

To the Kaimakam.

THE French Armies are at present in Winter-Quarters, and the Court is bussed in contriving what they shall do in the Spring. I do not believe I write thee any false News; for it is to be believed, that the sharpness of the Winter will hinder any thing from being undertaken before that Time.

The Ever of all the Court are fixed on Three Objects, the King, the Dauphin his Son, and Cardinal Richlien; but they more carefully obferve the latter, than the former This Man has made himself Creatures by his Benefits : the Thankfulness for which, and the hopes of new ones, has bound them to his Interests. Yet'ris to be believed, he has more Enemies by means of the great Credit he is in with his Prince, and the Occasions he lipds to increase it. His April Chamber is always full of Attendants, who afpire to Employs, of such as are in Offices, and feveral other Perfors who are defrous to be Witneffes of his. Actions. Thefe who threaten him in feeret, to but increase his Courage, and make him more carefully frank on his Guard; and those who have most experience of the World affirm, this cardinal knows too much to be furprized. edge of the Minilian are on the L

Hear the Recital of one of the least of his Adions, whereby thou maift figure the greatest, and give them the due Price they deserve. For Three Years together, was observed in this Cardinal's Anti-chamber, a Man who was not far advanced in Years, and as affiduous to make his Court, as he was modest in his Discourse; very reserved and patient; and which is very rare at Court, was never heard to complain. The Cardinal who pretends to read the Souls of Men, and who is inferior to none perhaps in this Arc, caused this Person who had so long attended, to be called to him, and thus spake to him: I know who thou art, and how long time thou haft frent in observing me; although thou outwardly appeared a French-man, thy great Patience affures me thou art of another Climate; get thee to Rome, and wait but balf the time in the Pope's Anti-chamber, as thou haft done in mine, and I doubt not but thou wilt penetrate into the most hidden, Secrets. Part then immediately for Italy, and obferue the Actions und Motions of the Wiseft and most Dissimulative Court in the Universe; discover not thy felf to any Body: Send me an Account every Week what thou canst discover; and in this manner thou wilt be useful to me, and avoid Idleness. My Secretary will give thee a Cypher, and my Treafurer has order to give thee what's necessary for thy Voyage, as well as to keep thee when then art at Rome.

The Cardinal studies to extend the Bounds of the Kingdom, and for that purpose consults those who can any ways advance his Projects: Especially, the King being now certain of a Successor, by the Eirth of the Dauphine, who seems very likely to live long. All Hands are employed at Thoulan and Marjailes for the fitting out of Gallies, and other Vessels; and its thought, the chief Deligns of this Minister, are on the Coasts of Italy. I am told he was heard to fay, That the Romans could never have conquered all the World. as they did, had they not before been Mafters of It aly; That Hannibal had the same Design, and after Hannibal, Pope Alexander VI. intended to see whether such a Design would rake Effect; bur, his Price and Cruelty made all his Projects prove abortive, and that he could meet with greater Success than Hannibal, could he be to happy as to obtain one thing. And here he ended his Discourie

He io greatly minds whatever pales in the Regal Family and Kingdom, that he can discovere as he pretends, all the Thoughts, yea, and the very Dreams of the Grandees, Governours of Provinces.

and those that command in Places their to some

He fays, he has learnt feveral ufeful Things in the Relation given us of the Government of the Chinefes, having from them the Way of difcovering the most difficult Matters, without its appearing he does any thing for this Purpole. And this is the Method of governing he observes in this Kingdom, wherein are fo many reftlefs

ACT 16

Spirits. He maintains near all People who are in any confiderable Offices, Perfors that depend only on him, and who are known to no body elfe; who in all Places wear mean Cloaths, and inceffantly watch over the Actions of the Officers and give him notice of whatever pages. He makes ule of thele kind of People about his Master's Embassa-dors in foreign Caurty, He always carries a Book a about with him, which he calls Richieu's Soul in which Book contains the Defigns, the Interests the fecret Practices, and inclinations of all their Princes, who hold a Correspondence, and have any Tyes with France, and on whom France has any Pretentions. The most skilful Aftrologers in Ev-Tope, rope, have allo fent him the Horofcopes of all the Kings and great Men, with their Judgments touching the Term of their Lives, and what they may probably undertake in all times. This Car-dinal laid on another time, That he kept a great many Courtiers, yet he could well enough spare them; that he knew what paffed in remote Places, as foon as what was done near him: He once affirmed, he knew in less than Two Hours, That the Ring of England had figured the Warrant for the Execution of ____ If this Particular be true, this Minister must be more than a Man. Those who are his most devoted Creatures affirm he has in a private place in his Closet, a certain Mathematical Figure, in the Circumference of which, are written all the Letters of the Alphaber, armed with a Dart, which marks the Letters, which are also marked by their Correby the Sympathy of a Stone, which those who give and receive his Advices, keep always ar hand, which hath been separated from another, which the Cardinal has always by him; and 'tis affirmed, that with fuch an Inftrument, he gives and receives immediately Advices. This great at them'; yet he fave With a ferious Air . That God has given him Two Angels; one White and another Black, to inform him of both good and bad Matters; and that with their Affiffance he fhall overdirow the Cabals of his Enemies. He fent fome days part, a Man to the Galles, that wal accorded for curring in pieces the King's Picture; but having been better informed, and knowing twis be perdoned, because he had done no have so the Original. Here are Theatres and Feafts preparing to chiertain the Proplet in Hohour of the King and Cardinal; and 'ris whilepered, that the Queen

is again with Child.

Heaven preferve thee ever from the Sultan's Anger, and all other Misfortunes which may fower
the Comforts of thy Life.

Paris, 25th of the 1st Moon,

Punil is of Kernl Bloods. Arms thy fell theat with

To Egri Boynou, the White Euruch.

To thou good into Pruffia in Bythinia, as thou writest, above all things remember to prepare thy felf not to live long, and never to inform the young Sultan Mustapha of the Misfortune of the Grandson to Solyman the Great, and Son to poor Bajazet, whom his Grandfather caused to be strangled in his Infancy. This unhappy Place makes mefearful of thy Life, as well as that of the Princes; the Care of whose Education is committed to thee; I cannot forbear weeping every time I call to mind what paffed between the Victim and the Executioner. Thou thy felf toldeft me, That this unhappy Child embraced and kiffed feveral times him that was to give the fatal Stroak, even in the Moment when he was puring about his Nick the Silker String which was to firangle him. All Afia is informed of the reft of the Hillory ; and? 'ris known, That this Child although, ffrangled, yet d triumphed at his Death ogeraf is Murcharer : Bon 1 being formed by the Careffes of this Infant, whom he was about destroying, he dropt down in a Swoon; and Briager's Son had by this Occasion efcaped fcaped Death, had not the other Executioner, more cruel than the former, done the work

Although thou doft not certainly know who is Mustapha's Father, yet thou main well presume he is the Emperor's Son. Thy Age and Prudence so long experienced, and the Office of Chief of all the Eunuchs of the Empire, which thou hast so long enjoyed, leaves no place of doubting, but that thy Pupil is of Royal Blood. Arm thy self then with Courage, and study to perform well thy Dutyin this Solitary Place: Nothing is so troublesome as the Instructing of Children, when they will be taught as Masters by their Slaves, and will not submit to Rules, like private Persons.

Thou maift be fure, I shall render thee all the Service I am able, seeing I consider thee as a Friend that is extream dear to me: But why dost thou seek amongs the Christians, an illustrious Subject, which may serve for a Model to form a Child born in the Religion of the Mulfulmans?

Did I not know thy Wildom, I should think thou are very simple, in searching after Examples amongs the Enemies of our Holy Law, to propose them to be followed by the Ottoman Children. Thou haft chosen for this purpose Henry of France, termed the Great; and are thou ignorant that this fo famous a King, was the most implacable Enemy of the Empire? Be it known to thee, That this Prince underrook the boldest and dangerousest Delign as was ever imagined, to destroy the Monarchy of the Mullulmans; and might probably have succeeded had not Heaven, by an unforeseen Seroak i matched him from the Earth, to appear before the Tribunal of the True God, who judges Kings as well as other Men. But left thou should'it imagine I make this Pretence to excule my felf from fatisfying thee in what thou defireft, receive at least one Part of waar thou expedent

Thou

Thou wouldft have me fend thee the Hiftory of this Prince; content thy felf with a short extract of it, otherwise I must be forced to fend thee a large Volume. However, make not use of his Example in all Things; the Way of Living, the Laws and Cuftoms of the French, do not fuit with the Turkill Way of Regiment, If thou wilt make thy Pupil accomplished, form him on the Model of some one of those Hero's which the East has given us. Mustapha will read with greater Profit, the History of Alexander and Pyrebus, than that of Charlemain and Henry; and, should one wonder at the Defaults of the King of Macedonia's Son, and at the small Fortune of the other? Pray shew me what Men there ever were, who had at the fame time the Frailties of human Nature, and the Perfections of the Divinity.

And if thou wilt fearch into Persia and Egypt, thou wilt find a Cyrut, and an Arthurerses, Ptolemy, Psammeticus, Campson and Tomonheis, all great Princes, whose Actions honour Assiquity. And how many Hero's wilt thou find in our Greece, if thou wilt take no Notice of those whom Rome has sent into the World? But not to go out of the Ottoman Family, thou knowest very well, that we Turks have for proverbial Speeches, the Modesty of Solyman; The good Mein of Alis; The Justice of Nonquirevan; The Majesty of Osman; The Gravity of Humer; and the Justice of Abubekit; not to mention the Courage and Magnanimity of Amarath, who is, at this Day, more valorous than any of his common Soldiers; whether he be in his Seraglio of Constantinople, or in his Tents before Babylon.

Ten Days ago I received thy Letter, and I have employed a great deal of that Time, in collecting what thou half defired of me; and to speak truly, thy Commands have supplied me with matter wherewithal to divert me. Thou wile be without doubt furprized, that two Men who long ferved this King in mean Employs, have discovered several particulars of his Life with which the French themselves, perhaps, are not acquainted. My Sentiment has ever been. That his more necessary to know the Manners and Cultoms of Men, than to know the Number of Places they have belieged or raken and so be informed of their Good Qualities and bad ones, than to learn the manner of their Encamp. ments, and the Number of the Barrels which they have won or loft. All Hiftories concain the Actions of Men, and the principal is, to know thefe Men, to infruct others ; for Hillories do generally rather divert than inflind Men. Thefe will teach thee better what thou are to leavn, than the Hifforians themselves, Christian Authors are, at present, like the Elements, always in War, and ever contrary to one another, and never agreeing. A ball 1

These two above mentioned Friends, who are now very old Men, have served King Henry above Thirty Years, and ever held a strict Correspondency with one another; One was his Barber; and the others Buliness was to divert him with reading to him, when he was going to Reft.

That which is related of Hem's coming into the World without weeping, is certainly a Fable; int it is certain, the Queen of Navar, his Mother, fung a French Song, in the Time of his Birth; whereby this Princets Icemed to flew other Women that its possible to be brought to Bed without Crying out. The first Milk which this Royal Babe drank, was an Ambrosia, which the Gods of our Friend, the Poet Oglou, never tasted. His Father made him drink in a Golden Cup, of the strongest Wine thut could be gotten, wherein he put and squeezed a Clove of Garlick, which he shought proper to strengthen his Temperament, and render him more vigorous. He was after wards bred up like Cyrus; spending his first Days in Woods, and oftentimes in the Company of Shepherds. He went always with his Head bares whether exposed to the fcorching Heats of the Summers Sun, or during Winter, to the Rain, and most rigorous Frosts, Snow and Hail. It feems as if he had began his Life in Prison; being cotfined to the Fields, distant from all Converse, clad in coarse Hair Cloath, to accessom his Body to Fatigues, and fouple his Spirit to the Accidents of Fortune the I made allow we have the care and

He was but Nine Years old, when he loft his Father Anthony, King of Navar. The Death of this Prince may ferve for a Leffon to Muffapha; for, having received his Death's Wound, at the Siege of a confiderable Place, he made the Wall of the Chamber where be lay, to be broken down, that he might be carryed into his own Bed, dying as it were in Triumph, into the Town: Miferable Ambition of Great Men, who ftrip not themselves of it till Death ftrip them of their Lives. Seven Years after the Death of Antony, the Young Henry was declared Head, and Defender of the Hugomot Party; and when Eighteen Years old, he was in a confiderable Fight ; but 'cis not well known, whether he himfelf was engaged. Fortune was for contrary to him in the beginning, that having loft a Bauley he was obliged to fly for Six Months, rogether with the reft of his Army; and to traverse almost throughout all the Provinces of the Kingdom, without taking any reft, for fear of being furprized. Thou haft never read, I believe, of any Captain that made a Flight of that durance. before him. The Queen his Mother, being a Woman of a Malculine Courage, and Pirmnels of Mind, died poilon'd by a pair of Gloves. At Nineteen Years of Age, he married the King's Sifter, who Mod

Vol. I.

then Reigned, named Charles IX. and never any Wedding was folemnized with fuch Bloody Tragedies. 'Tis hard to believe whar an infinite Number of Hugonots was then maffacred; the Defign was fecretly laid, during the Celebration of the Wedding, and executed fix Days after, at full Noon. Tis faid, that in one Day, all France was died with the Blood of these poor people; there being at least an Hundred Thousand of them flain ; amongst which were Twenty Lords of great Confideration, with the Great Admiral of the Kingdom; and, at the fewest. Four Thousand Soldiers maffacred in Paris. Henry did not perish on that unhappy Day, but he was very near Death; and the King having called him, thus spake to him, with an angry Tone; and fierce Countenance; Henry, thou art alive, because I would spare thee; but I will not spare thee if thou persist in thy Here-Ty .: Chuse one of these two things; either the Mais, or Death. If thou knowest not what the Mass is, I will thew thee in another Letter. This Prince chose to go to Mals, rather than to lose his Life: And therefore publickly abjured the Religion he professed. These two old Men affirm. That Nero or Caligula's Court, were never corrupted as that of France was then. No people were more in Fashion, than Buffoons, and never did the worst fort of Debaucheries so abound, Sorceries, Empoysonings, Affaffinations, and all other forts of Crimes, were permitted in such a manner, that all the Laws and good Order seemed to be overthrown. 'Tis not known, whether the King of Navarr took up his former Religion through policy or some Corruption he faw amongst the Catholicks; however he return'd some time after to Calvinism, whereunto he was so obstinately addicted, that having lived several Years in this Sell, he was forced to offer great Violence to himself, to enjoy peaceably the Kingdom of France, and accommodate himself with the Pope of Rome, and to make again publick Pro-

feffion of the Roman Religion.

Never any Prince more loved Women than he did. This Passion prevailed over him all the Days of his Life; and there were Two different Natures observable in his Person, an invincible Garage in the Field; and such a Passion for Women, as made bim be often seen to weep amongst them. He has had greatner Weaknesses than Hercules, and he gloried in them. He challenged the bravest Man in all France, the Duke of Guise, to a single Fight; but the King interposed his Authority to hinder the Combat.

This King performed an Action during his Youth, which our Dervises would have certainly set down in their Registers as greatly remarkable. On a certain Day wherein he was to fight a pitched Battel, being on Hoseback in the midst of his Army, he made publick Reparation to a young Woman whom he had deflowed, and spake in these Terms: I have forced this Woman you see here, and used Threats, when Entreaties would not bring her to my Lust. Let all that hear me, detest the bad Example I have given. And as for your part whom I have thus wronged, chuse an Husband, and receive from me such a Portion, as may seem in some sort, an Amends for the Injury I have done you.

It feems as if this so laudable an Action was approved of by Heaven: For having immediately hereupon given Battel, he overthrew a mighty

Army with a few Troops.

The Ladies who bore Henry no ill will for his Tenderness to their Sex, greatly interested themselves in the Affairs of War, wherein this Prince was always Head of the Hugonor Party: And they gave Occasion to a Proverb, which lasted a great while.

9.1

's

e

e-

5,

re

nd

ot

nis

on

n'd

Nas

VC.

eat

ng-

lom

while. There being some who were for making a Peace, and others War; this War was called The Ladies War. This Prince had been in so many Fights, that I believe one may truly say in this particular, never any Prince came near him: For who ever in one Day was in Two Battels, and came off Victorious ?

King Charles IX. dying during this time, the Queen Mother sent for her other son in great diligence, who had been elected some Moons before King of Poland, by the Death of Sigesman Augustus, Tis said, that Charles's Successor having been advertised of the Death of the King his Brother, sled in the Night from Cracovia, only with Two Persons who were his Confidents, and retired to Venice; and its said, That the Courtisans of this samous City, assured the Crown to our Henry: For having been insected with this Dissemper which the French call the Neapolitan Disease, and other Nations the French Pox; he became incapable of having Children to perpetuate the Crown in the Branch of Valois.

After his Death, which was violent and perpetrated by a Christian Dervise, Henry III, dying without an Heir, and his Throne being sought by different Pretenders: Henry, to whom alone his Birth had given Right, became Master of it by his Patience: His Fatigues in War, and his Courage made him vanquish all Obstacles. He maintained his Right with an unparallell'd Valour, and carried himself with the greatest Prudence; yet, his greatest Successes, are owing to the Greatness of his Heart. He met sometimes with Disadvantage, but oftner came out Conquetor from all Engagements; and 'tis observable, he was the prouder after the Battels won, because he had before appeared extraordinary familiar with the Soldiers who had helped him to win them. He was wont to be often in his Stables to fee his Horfes, and often flept amongst these Creatures whom he termed his most faithful Courtiers. How difficult foever the way was which was to lead him to the Throne. he would not be difficarened; these difficulties ferving only to encrease his Courage. He saw the Spaniards confederated with his Enemies, yet he alone, without any other Affiftance but of fome few faithful Troops; fare down before Paris, which was the most famous Slege fince that of Jerufalem by Titus. He reduced the Inhabitants of this Capital of the Kingdom, to live on the most abject Meats one can imagine, after they had confumed the Rars, Mice, Dogs and Cars; which were for tome time the richelt Delicacles the bell People of the Town could meet with. But he was for all this fafter he had given feveral Affaults) forced to raile the Siege. and accommodate himfelf with the Prince, who commands all the Priefts amongst the Catholicks; and he again renounced Calvinim wherewith he was infected, and which ferged as a Pretence to his Enemies. He was crowned in the fame manner his other Predeceffors had been before him. He began to govern his Kingdom, ruined by fo many wars, Pillages and Concussions made by all forts of People, and to repaired it by his good Government, that he was foon in a Condition to embellish it. He built ieveral magnificent Bridges, raifed ffarely Edifices, and forgot nothing which might re-effablish those good Orders which the Licentiousness. of the times had overthrown.

But what this King defigned against us as foon as he was fetled on the Throne, will appear at the fame time to thee both dreadful and admirable. As foon as ever he had made a general Peace with his Enemies, he laid the Foundations of the most Heroick Delign that ever Man invented, wherein he thewed huntelf not inferior to the first of the Cafors, He nor the Conqueror of Afia.

r

)-

nt

0

He undertook to overthrow all the Monarchies of the World, to give a new Face to all the Affairs of it, and to destroy in a short time, the Empire of the Ortomans. But before he began such a great Enterprize, he was for paying all the Debts of the Crown, and his own in particular; which amounted all together, to near an Hundred Millions, and twas a prodigious thing to find to much Money, without selling the Kingdom, or engaging the People; yet it is true that he got this Money, and paid those Debts with it.

He was for dividing Christendom into Fifteen equal Dominations; Five of which should obey Kings that were so by Succession, and Six to be subject to Kings that were Elective, and the Four remaining should be Republicks.

By this Division, he less the Pope the Countries belonging to the Church, and added thereunto the Kingdom of Naples, with the Homage of Sicily, and the greatest part of Italy modelled into a Republic's; with Obligation to give the Pope every year a golden Crucifix, and Four Thousand Sequint. Only Venice was less in the Condition was in, with its Laws and Customs. But there were allotted to this Republic's, Kingdoms and Isles, which were to be taken from us in the Archipelago, with an Homage to the Roman Prelate, of an Embally to kills his Feet; and at the end of every Twenty Five Years, a small Statue of Gold, representing St. Piter, whom they term God's Vicar on Earth.

Flanders should make a Republick with the rest of the Low-Countries, which would be a loss for the Symiards; and to this Republick, should be added fome of the neighbouring States.

The Franche County, Alfaria, Tiorl and Trante were added to the Democratical State of the Swiffes, with the Homage every Fifteen Years, of an Hunting-Dog, with a golden Collar about his Neck fastned to a Chain of Gold, which this Republick should present to the Emperor of Germany.

his

This Emperor should be obliged to renounce the aggrandizing of his Family, and only dispose of vacant Fiefs, the Investiture of which he should not bestow on any of his Kindred; and there should be a Law inviolably observed in the Empire, That never two Princes of the fame Race should enjoy succeffively the Imperial Crown.

The Durchy of Milan should be added to the other Provinces belonging to the Duke of Savoy, together with the Title of King of Lombardy.

The Kingdom of Hungary should be inlarged with the Principalities of Transylvania, Walachia, and Moldavia: And the King who was to be Elettive should be chosen by the Suffrages of the Pope, the Emperor of Germany, the King of France, England, Spain, Swedeland, Poland, and Denmark; and, Bohemia should be submitted to the same Laws.

France, England, Spain, Poland, Swedeland, and Denmark, should not change their Form of Government; when for the general Affairs, these Kingdoms were to be subject to the Universal Republick of which the Pope was to be the Head.

Things thus established, Henry was to be the Umpire of all Christendom, to decide all Differences which might happen between the aforefaid Princes and States, with Fifteen Persons chosen from amongst the most Famous for Learning and Arms, which could be found among these Fifteen Dominations; and besides these, there was to be established a Great Council, consisting of Sixty other Persons, for all the Differences which might happen in all the Kingdoms and Republicks, between those who governed them; and this Great Allembly, should make their Residence in the Capital City, Rome.

venta in fast

Every State was to be obliged to furnish a certain number of Troops, and Sum of Money to make War against the Turks: And, the Business of Poland and Swedeland should be, to make War together against the Muscovites and Tartars. There were afterwards Three Generals to be chosen by common Consent for the conquering of Asia, One for the Sea, and Two for the Land: And Three Hundred Thousand Foot entertained, with One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Horse, and Four Hundred Pieces of Cannon; and the Naval Army was to consist of an Hundred and Fifty Vessels, and One Hundred Galleys; and a Fund was to be raised for this, of an Hundred Millions of Gold.

This Treasure was to be put into the Pope's Hands; the Isle of Malta was to be the Store-house of all things belonging to the Sea, the Port of Messian the Arsenal of the Galleys, and the City of Metz one of the Principal Magazines for the Land-Forces.

All the Christian Princes, were to be obliged to leffen their ordinary Expences, and to contribute to this great Design according to their Ability.

There were to have been several Spies in Confiantinople in the Habit of Greeks, who were perfectly skilled in the Eastern Languages, to observe the Motions of our Empire: and besides these, Forty resolute Men, who were at a certain Time and Signal, to set Fire to the Seraglio and Arsenal, and several other Quarters of the Town.

There was found in this Hero's Closet after his Death, a Memorial written with his own Hand, wherein he had already mark'd Twelve Embassadors for several places in Christendom, for the negotiating of so great an Affair; and, the Pupe, Republick of Venice, and Duke of Savoy, had been already acquainted with it.

In the mean time, this King had an Army already of Forty Thousand Foot, with Eight Thousand Horse; and he was, under Pretence of visiting the Frontiers of Flanders, thence to begin the Execution of his Project, affirming, That as to his own Part, he had no other Pretention, but the Glory of delivering Christianity from the Tyran-

my of these Barbarians.

Tis said, he applyed himself for Ten Years together, in searching the Means to make his Project take; he gave great Pensions to the Cardinals at Rome, and in Germany to several Officers; and, he had in France, besides the Troops I have already mentioned, Four Thousand Gentlemen, who were so devoted to him, that they were ready to mount on Horseback on the least Order from him.

He had already Fifteen Millions in the Baffile; and he that had the Superintendency of his Treature, promifed to add thereunto in less than three Years, Forty more Millions, without touching the ordinary Revenues.

ly

I have no knowledge of the Manner how he would divide the Estates of the Sultan. But Henry was assassing the Estates of the Sultan. But Henry was assassing to begin so great a Work, being killed in his Coach in the Arms of his most saithful Courtiers: And the satal Scroke which carried him out of the World, delivered the Empire of the true Believers: This Empire whose Throne is so high, that it reaches up to the First Heaven, whence it scares the Insidels, and secures the good Mussulmans from the Insults of the Christians.

One of these old Men I mentioned, has assured me, he heard the King speak these following Words some Days before his Death: I shall never go out of this Town; I know not what with holds me; I shall never accomples what I design, never see the Destruction of Constantinople; for I am rold

H 2

ly Aftrologers, I shall be kill din a Coach. I must then always go on Foot, and never flir out of Paris.

Such was the End of this Prince, so highly venerated by the French. He was really a Man of great Courage and great Penetration; and fo much the greater, in that he regarded the Destruction of the Ottoman Empire, as one of the difficultest things in the World. And truly, no other Prince did that Honour to Mahomet nor his Succesfors. But yet not finding his own Forces fufficient to invade and destroy the Yurkish Empire, he invented a Chymerical Project to find Poffibility in a thing which ever appeared impossible.

In the very Moment I am Writing, I have received certain News of my Ruin. If I be not taken off this time at Paris, I shall be perhaps more fortunate than ever, and more successfully and fully ferve our great Emperor, whose Clemency is equal to his Grandeur, and who is above all the Powers on Earth. Cardinal Richlien has fent for me to come to him; I therefore finish this Lerter in hafte, which perhaps will be the laft I write, being greatly afraid I am discovered. If my Fear be vain, I shall learn thee in another Letter, the most remarkable Events of Henry's Life. In the mean time I am resolved and disposed, to suffer the Martyrdom. If I dye, my dear Egry, we shall fee one another in the other World; if it be true, That we shall have Eyes there, and remember what has past here below. Pray the great God for Mahmut, and take care of thy Health.

Paris, 25th of the 1ft Moon, of the Tear 1639.

Word Lone Days oslore last De to our of the formant days are be telest detels replied the Cardnel's

LETTER XV.

To the Invincible Vizir Azem, at the Camp under Babylon.

Ardinal Richlieu made me come in his Prelence, and yet I am alive; he has not atrempted any thing against either Life or Liberty; but has done me the same Honour, as to other soreign charchnen; for he believes I am of Moldavia calling me Titus, not knowing any more of me, than what I told him. It seems on the contrary as if he intended me Kindnesses, supposing me a birter Enemy to the Turks; and perhaps, I shall receive some Present from him: For, having served him already as an Interpreter, I shall tell thee, Invincible Vizir, what has past between him and me, without any sear of being tedious to thee. I serve thee faithfully, and write to thee as oft as my Duty requires.

As foon as I was in his Closet, he thus spoke to me; Titus, What doft thou do in Paris? What Bufiness baft thou in this Town? and what is really thy Country ? I answered him, That I was a pour clerk of Moldavia, and came to fludy Divinity and be a Priefts that I knew no better place to become Wife and Learned, and that I would willingly facrifice all things to render bim Service, He afterwards ask'd me, Whether I was acquainted with any of the Haftern Languages; and, Whether I had ever been at Conftantinople? I have been, replyed I, in this great Town when I was a Child, and that my Father and Mother were then in Slavery. My Father is dead, and my Mother is married again to 4 Chri-Stian Greek; I understand Arabick and Turkish; and am perfectly skill'd in the School-Greek. What do Jou mean by School-Greek? replyed the Cardinal? It is different from the Vulgar Greek, answered 1, which is so corrupted, that learned People will not give themselves the Trouble to understand it. He asterwards bade me go into a little Closer, where I should find one of his Secretaries, who would need my Help; where I had no sooner entred, but the Secretary presented me with a Turkish Manuscript, to turn into Latin or Italian, if I could not do it into French. I immediately translated it into Latin, and will now inform thee (wise Minister, and Governour of the Great Empire of the true Faithful) of the Contents of it.

The Christian Dervises, called in France Cordeliers. keep, as thou knowest, in Ferufalem, the Sepulchre of their Mellias, by a Priviledge which Zelimthe Conqueror of Paleftine granted them. These Religious, have neither Peace nor Truce with the Greek Christians, and they have such Differences together. as are of ill Confequence to all; they perfecute one arether without ceafing, and foread abroad most bitter Satirs against each other. Each Party makes ill Reports to his Superior of that which is opposite, and mixes among some Truth, a great many Eyes and abfurd Stories. Eut it appears to me. That the Greeks, who naturally love Cabals, and have the Reputation of great Romancers, are more dexterous than their adverse Party to do Mischief.

The Christian Dervises, have represented a great many things to this Gardinal, to authorize their Pretentions against the Greeks by means of the French Embassador. They not only reproach the Greeks with several Injustices and Violences, but accuse the Cadi's of Crueky and Tyranny: and the Soldiers which guard Jerusatem, of insupportable Exactions. Thou shouldest be throughly informed, whether these Complaints be on just Grounds: For

they

they affirm, their Patience is beyond the Cruelty of the Officers thou employeft; yet, that they can no longer fuffer the insclencies which are now put on them, and are on the point of hazardine all by a Stroak of Despair. It does not belong to me to be Advocate in the behalf of those who are fubmitted to thy Authority, and especially of those who ought to bear the Yoke of the Mahometans ; but tis the Dury of Mahomet, thy Creature, to inform thee of the true Circumstances of Affairs which come to his Knowledge. Yet, if the Oppression of the Dervifes be fo great as they make it, thou that are the true Light which enlightens the Empire of the Faithful, and featrereft the Darkness of it, thou wilt not permit those that live under the publick Faith to be opprest; and that four wretched Greeks shall be the Cause of such Disorders as may happen in Palestine, the Complaints of which have reached the Ears of the greatest Princes in Europe, and to whom such things may give false Ideas of the Government of those who are chosen by God to command all the World. Invincible Baffa, I have discovered the true Circumstances of this Affair, in the Turbifb Manuscript which Cardinal Richlieu's Secretary has put into my Hands. I have fully discovered the falle Reasonings of the Armenians and Greeks, who by common Consent, have offered several things to the most Venerable Mufti, which I am fure thou wilt not approve of; for they make most wretched Excuses, to colour over their Perfidiouspess. They say the Romanists ought to be ill used, on purpose to get rid of them from Palestine, being like the Jews, bitter Enemies in their Hearts to the Welfare of the Empire: That the time of the Priviledges granted by Zelim and his Successors is expired, and that moreover, 'tis a great Imprudence to fuffer Pilerims to come over from diffant Countries, who H A under under Pretence of vifiting the Holy Sepulcher, and other Places, which Superstition has consecrated in Palestine, come to espy the Actions of the Turks, examine the Form of their Government, vifit their Places, and measure the Roads and Ports which they possess on the Seas, which may prove of dismal confequence to the Honour and Interest of the Ottoman Empire. I cannot inform thee how this Memoir came into Richlien's Hands, but it was either fold or intercepted at Constantinople, where it was addreffed. However I must not forget to tell thee one Remark which this Minister made, whence thou may'ft guess, whether he reasoned like a wife and prudent Man: Were I, fays he, the Sulran's chief Minister, I (bould have added Priviledge to Priviledge, to the Monks Cordeliers, not only because Justice requires it, but by reason of the Advantage which might redound thereby to the Turks. I would make the Ways to Jerusalem easie to all People; I would lessen the Tribute; the Pilgrims (hould be well used; the Christians in general as well as the Cordeliers; and I would severely punish the Officers and Soldiers who guard Palestine, and the Sacred Places, if they did otherwise. And then turning himself towards me, Does it not appear to thee, says he, that the best way to enlarge a Kingdom, is, to procure it an Advantage which encreases the Number of its Subjects? Tis not enough that the Prince shews the Ornaments of his Principality, be must shere also the Prince, otherwise he will be like the Philosopher who was brought into Herod's Presence; I do not see, says the King, any thing else but the Beard and Cloak of a Philosopher. If the Turks do as the Scythians, when they made themselves Masters of Athens, they will do better; for they would not burn the Books which were gathered together in this Kamous Town; alledging, that those who applied themselves to Study, were not wons to do any great burt. If the Christians meditate on Death, in visiting and bonouring the Sepulchers; the Musfulmans should consider, that if they mak: War against them, they have only to do with contrite and penitent Persons, who will therefore be the more easily defeated.

And this is a Faithful and Exact Account of the Conversation I had with this Chief Minister of State. Suffer now that I add, as a Note of the Tuffice of the Christians Pretentions, what tome Particulars of this Kingdom have given me to understand, touching the Justice and Antiquity of the Priviledges of the Religious Christians at Jerusalem. They make appear, that for above Three Hundred Years thefe Places do belong to the Raman Catholicks; That, Robert d' Angou bought them of the Soldan of Agypt, and made thereof a Prefert to the Roman Church, and put them in Possession, not only of the Holy Sepulcher, but of Calvary, of Betblebem, and their Dependencies; which Serglement lasted till Zelim; who therein confirmed the Religious Christians, with an Augmentation of Priviledges, as foon as even he had conquered

Prancis I. King of Prance, having made an Alliance with Solyman II. he inferred in his Treaty an Article, which confirmed the aforefaid Priviledges, which were fince folemnly renewed, cill Amurath's Time; who is now on the Throne of the Muffulmans (an happy Emperor, and Mafter of the Upiverse, for whose take alone the Sun enlightens the Earth and confirms what his Predecessors had done in favour of the Christian Roman Dervises, whom he has maintained, without any regard to the vain Protensions to the Greeks and Armenians, in their lawful Possessions of Calvary, the Grotto of Bethlebers, and the Two little Mountains thereup belonging, and granted to them the keeping of the Stone on which their Saviour Christ was embalmed, as well as that of the Two small Domes covered with Lead, under which is the Holy Sepulcher.

Thy humble Slave Mahmut, has an unpleasant Task imposed on him by this French Minister. He defired me to give him some Memoir in general of what I know, and bade me not wonder at his Curiofity; it being his Maxim, to make Friendship with all Strangers of Merit, whereby he has learne feveral Important Matters, and discovered Secrets of great Importance; and that it lay in my Power, to oblige him greatly in giving him an exact Account of the Forces of the Ottoman Empire, and where they lay most open to be attack'd. I answer'd him very modeftly, That my Business being only to say my Breviary, he could not expect any great Capacity from me in these Matters. He smilingly bade me try what I could do in that Matter; yet however, he would not lay any thing upon me which might make me uneafie; adding, That tho' he were a Cardinal and a Prieft, yet he knew fomething more than Divinity, and that several Roman Prelates had made War with great Success from St. Peter's Chair. In fine, I could not but promife to gratifiehim; and thou fhalt know in due time how I discharged my self; for, I shall rather part with my Life, than act contrary to my Allegiance. However, I must avoid giving him cause to suspect me, and acquaint thee alone with the Conferences I have had with him-

The Holy Propher multiply thy Line, that the Empire may not want Ministers of thy Lineage; and the Great God so affist thy Valour, that thou may'st see the Empire of Amurath without Bounds.

Paris, 25th of the 2d Moon, of the Tear 1639.

h

12

f

s

ł

LETTER XVI.

To the Same.

THE Winter is so far advanced, that the King's Armies lie quiet. It's no Fable, That the Danphin was born with some Teeth, and that no Nurse dare present him the Teat, for sear of being bit with them. 'Tis said also that there being no Woman to be found about the Gourt which can endure the suckling of him, there is a certain Peasant, a very healthful and hardy Woman, that has undertaken that Employment.

Here are four Posts arrived at the same time; one comes from Rome, the rest from the Armies; but what News they bring is not yet known: 'Fis thought that he which comes from Germany, brings News of Alfatia and Brisac. The King of France is very well; here are great Preparations at Court for the Carnival, in which time the Christians play a Thousand mad Pranks.

'Tis commonly said the Queen is with Child again. Here are also many Reports of the Grand Signior's Expedition, both in Prints and News-Letters; and several Prognoficks are made on his Enterprize on Babylon.

I shall inform thee by the first Opportunity, what is said here further of our Ever Victorious Emperor, and of thee also, who art his Chief & - wifter, and the Right Arm of his Empire: And at the same time tell thee what News come from the Northern Parts, of which I suppose the Kaimakam has given thee some Notice, as well as of the most considerable Events of the War of Alsatia. The Immortal Being award thee the taking of Babylon and all Persia, as a Reward of thy Fidelity and Valour.

lour, and Pains thou hast raken in serving faithfully thy Master; and give thee the Good Fortune, of leading triumphantly in Chains the Sovereign of this Empire, that he may be humbled to the kissing of the Stirrup of the Invincible Amurath's Horse.

Paris, 16th of the 2d Moon, of the Year 1639.

in taid and after there becomes

LETTER XVII.

To Bekir Bassa, Chief Treasurer to the Grand Signior.

Liachim the Jew, whom thou thoughtest so L wife and vertuous a Man, concealed his Qualities at Conftantinople, to discover 'em more advantagiously at Paris. It was not his fault, that my Affairs were not intirely ruined. The Villain gave Marks of his Treachery, in the very Moment he faw me receive the Money from Carcoa of Vienna, upon thy Order. I wrote to thee, I thought this man would be faithful in instructing me in the Things which were necessary for me to know, and that I would be upon my Guard in those Things wherein he might do me mischief. Thou maist eafily imagine, how I am vexed at present; for I can neither accuse him, nor draw from him a just Revenge. He made me believe, That a Lawyer's Son at Paris, a young Man of great Hopes, having received forme Displeasure from his Relations; was resolved to be Circumcifed, and embrace the Mabometan Religion; and that he would not lose so happy an Occasion of doing me Service; and therefore had contrived to hide this young Man, in a close

e, of

g

e.

close Cellar, underneath the House where I lodge, without discovering to him the place where he fhould be. He added, he had promifed him Money, and to procure him a confiderable Employ in Constantinople; and that he had, in fine, fill'd him with all the Hopes which are wont to be given to those that through Fickleness, or Temporal Advantages, forfake the Religion of their Fathers, to profefs another. He also affured me, I should have no trouble by this Bufinels, having taken all necessary care, to transport his Convert immediately to Tunis or Algerrs, and from thence to Confrantinople, I yielded to the Reasons he alledged, and this young Man was brought in the Night to the House where I lay, and hid without my feeing him. But, the next Day was not opened, without a strange Scene in the House. I was aftonished to see a Woman in a great Rage fland before me, demanding Satisfaction for violating her Daughter and taking away her Life; charging me with having forcibly carried her away, and then murthered her; and the made me all these Reproaches, in the Company of a great many Officers of Justice.

Think then the Confusion I was in; the more I denied the Crime, the more fiercely they charged it on me. I was threatned with Death, if I did not confess it, and give the Satisfaction required of me; and at the same time, this sly Jezabel gave a Sign to one of the Rogues her Companions, to go down to such a Place, and bring up her Daughter, who was found alive, in Man's Cloaths, and melted into Tears. It fignified nothing, to alledge Reasons, to prove my Innocency; so that I was forced at last to throw out to these hungry Wretches, all the Money I had; and they withdrew uot, till they had abused and reviled me, in a most bitter manner. They got from me about an Hundred and Eighty Four Sequins of Gold, and about an hundred Piasters of Silver. Eliachim has the Confidence to affirm, he knew nothing of the Chear; and thinks to justifie himself in saying, That if he who is a Jew was deceived by this young Man, who pretended to become a Turk, there were a Thousand French People who had been cheated in like manner. I shall not here mention what I alledged to him to make him own his Perfidiouiness, this being fruitless. On the other hand, reflecting on the Employ I had, and my present Circumstances; it appeared to me necessary, to diffemble this truth, and to wait for some favourable Occasion, to fend this Villain out of Paris, and to lay some Snare for him at constantinople. give thee notice of this Event, for Two Reasons; that I may have more Money, and provide for my Safety; believing my felf in great danger, as long as I live where such a fellow comes. I shall not mention the Interests of Mahmut's Life; for I shall ever think it well spent, should it be lost in the Sultan's Service, who is the only prop of the Univerfe.

Thou wilt not want Opportunities, wherein thou maift draw out of Eliachim's Purse the Money he has robbed me of; neither will thou want Means, to remove from me so dangerous a Companion. Thou fhould'ft know, what the Christians, who are always irreconcilable Enemies to the Tews, fay of them. They affirm, That thefe infamous Wretches, are the Slaves of all Nations. excepting Twke; and especially in Constantinople, where they are Mafters, they are at the fame time, carefied and curst in the midst of Abundance, they appear always miserable; and yet they lay Hands on all others Properties. They add, that they be Vagabonds like Ulyffes, yet in whatever Place they are, they find a Country. like Homer .; That they are all Perfidious, and in Publick, affect to appear Religious,

Religious; but live in grievous Disorder and Luxury in their own Houses, sticking at no fort of Crimes; bragging, That the' it be not permitted them to purchase Lands, yet they have found means to get into their Hands, a great part of the Gold in Europe. The Christians also say, their Number must needs be great, seeing they never go to War; and there are none amongst them that do not Marry. They are, fay they, ever Cowards and Paltroons, where there's any Danger or Pains, but bold, when they foresee any certain Gain in the Markets they make. They never speak the Truth, but when 'es to deceive; they are ever Lyars, and there's no Impiety or Sacrilege at which they will scruple; and these same Christians affirm, they will commit one time or other, fome horrid Crime in our great Imperial City; being the Turks concealed Enemies. tho' they put great Confidence in them: And that we are willing to be deceived by them. I have writren to Carcia, to fend me speedily some Affistance ; and I have been forced to borrow Money of this same Eliachim, that Traitor who has brought me into the Condition I am in. He could not deny me, though he pleads (like a Rogue as he is) excream Poverty.

This Trick which has been put upon me, will oblige me henceforward to keep a Vallet, but I will take one so little, that no Man shall reproach me with choosing much of an ill Thing. Abandon not the poor Mahmut, who prays God that he would give thee all forts of Prosperities, and make thee live in perfect Health! and wishes, that all the Monarchs of the Infidel Nations, may become Slaves to the Sultan, who shall be ever Invincible! and that their Riches may increase the Treasure thou guardest.

Paris, 15th. of the 2d. Man, of the Tear 1639.

LETTER XVIII.

Riligions & Day five in refevora Arithmics and Line-

To Carcoa at Vienna.

אם בו כפל, לפוחם ויופן מכוינו

T Have received the Money thou didft fend me, I and immediately loft it; yet without my Fault. Bekir the Treasurer, has been informed by my Letters, of the loss I sustained, and of another Affair which is not necessary for thee to know: I also writ to him, I expected a speedy Supply from thee; for I should demand it of thee. The Grand Signiar's Interest requires, that thou dost not oblige me to give thee any other Reason, and that thou deferreft not to fend me, as foon as may be, a fufficient Sum of Money, I can only inform thee, that in the Attempt which was made on me, I loft only what I can recover. My Life is in Safety, and by a Miracle my Affairs are in the same Condition; for, no Body has, as yer, discovered who I am. If thou writest any thing to Eliachim the Jew, be sure be careful, and do not truft him more than need.

Send without loss of Time to the Port the Packet I address'd to thee, and let me not languish in Paris in the Expectation of Money. Tis true. Gold is a rare Commodity, because every Body desires it. In this great Town of Paris, one may fooner find an bundred Saints, than one Liberal Perfon. The French fay, it belongs only to Sots to be free of their Money; that a Man should succour his Friend with good Council, and there's no need of any thing elfe. Learn, Carooa, to have no need of other Peoples Help, and have a care of being too free. Men that are accustomed to receive good Turns, are generally wone to reckon them as Debrs. TSJ The Vanity of that Philosopher, who died with Misery, is a great Example of Mens Intolency. When Pericles would give him some Succour to prolong his Life, he had the Audaciousness to say to him, Thou carriest Oyl, O Pericles, because thou hast need of a Lamp.

The Sovereign Moderator of all things, keep thee from falling into Necessity: This is the best Wish the poor Mahmut can make for thee, in the low Estate he finds himself.

Paris, 15th of the 1ft Moon, 10 10 bavil 20 114 of the Tear 1639.

LETTER XIX

distant spend and out they wind has been

To Dgnet Oglou.

Dirkabeb's Father was a Rich Man in Arabia, D and his Vertue was equal to his Riches. He had Nineteen Children, who all died of the same Distemper, when they arrived to some Years. Never Family was more united and regular. Birkabeb was naturally of a quiet, foft Temper, but fo holy a Man, and at last died so poor, that a Thief coming into his Chamber one Night to fteal, and finding nothing, he called him to him, whilst he was going away, and gave him his Bed, as not being willing he should depart empry handed, and lose his Labour. Being forced after this to be on the Floor, he received Affiftance from Heaven by the Hands of his Wife; and scarce were Twenty Moons past fince this Adventure, but there happened another more strange than the former; for he became on a suddain very Rich, and at the Same

fame instant ceased to be Wife. He had a Wife of as haughty a Disposition, and noisy Humour, as his was quiet and humble. This Woman kept the Flocks, and with a florid Youthfulness, was endued with great Beauty; and 'tis not known by what Accident, a Prince of the Race of the Sophy of Perfia, who fled from his Sovereign's Displeasure, met with her. 'Tis certain, that having recommended himself to her, and increased her to save his Life, and not discover him, the led him into a very thick Wood, which was never frequented; where the Prince lived for Fourteen Years concealed. Bur. growing at length tired with this fort of Life, he perswaded this Woman to go to Ispahan disgnifed in Man's Apparel, and find Arlamus, who had been his Governor, and was a fairthful and wife Man; who would give her Money and Jewels, and a Water, which would fo disguise his Countenance, that his nearest Friends could not know him; by which means he might hold on his way to Rhodes, as he had determined. This Woman foon arrived at Ispahan, with the Prince's Tokens; which were fome frange Characters, and a Ring, which he usually wore; which Arlamus knowing, he intrusted her with a confiderable Sum, and several Diamonds, rogether with a little Golden Por, wherein was this Water before-mentioned. This Mellenger returning in less than Forty Days Time, found the Prince dead in the Grotto, where he withdrew, with a Paper in his Hand, wherein he intreated the first, which Chance should bring thither, to bury his Body at the foot of a fair Oak near by; and also intreated the Party which had his Ring, to carry it to the Sophy, and beg Pardon for the Offence he had given him. Birkabeb's Wife then discovered to him all that had happened; led him into the Wood; shewed him the dead Prince, the Letter, the Ring, and the precious Stones

Scones; and only reserved to her self the Secret of the Water, which she would not intrust him with. Having after this resolved to go to the Sophy, they went together, by whom they were well received, and laden with Riches. Birkabeb took up his Abode at Ispahan, tarrying there Four Years, and there led a voluptuous and dishonest Life. Whilst his Wife leaving him, ran away with a Young Persian, and made several different Voyages into Asia, under several Figures, and by means of the Water which she had received of Arsamus, the deceived her Husband, and as many Lovers as she pleased.

The unhappy Birkabeb being by his Wife's Lewdness become again Poor, resolved at last to return into his own Country, where he died in his House full of Years, and in such Repute for Holiness, that the common Report is, he wrought divers Miracles. He left Four Sons, of which I knew only Ababar, who is he thou mentionest in thy Letter-And this is all I can tell thee of Birkabeb, of his Son, and Grandson Ababar, whom I look upon as a very honest Man, and in whom I believe thou maift put Confidence; yet, with this Reflection, That he which is hopest now, may cease to be so. Salute this Person from me, and continue to love me. Answer my first Letter, if thou hast not done ir; and this last also, if it be not too troublesome to thee. Farewel

Bourney Hutthand Control of the Deutrell, Land

was called the Bash at the same of the Panille of Sheel colored to lave from paying on the bash bear

Paris, 15th. of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year 1639.

RETTEL CHARGE is but the old in ed lient Red Ten. Six by the Queen, 263 the odiner by Four ed his militaries. She with

Water, XX and home TTER AXX

To Egri Boynon, the White Eunuch.

Am still alive, and in Health; my Fear has proved vain, and I have escaped the Cardinal's Hands without any Danger; which will make the hope the fame good Formne: fhould he ever fend for me again. But thou shalt not know his Business with me, that being a Secret I am obliged to

Thou haft, I hope, received the long Letter I wrote thee, containing feveral Particulars of Henry IV's Life. I fend thee now several of his Sayings, which may be termed Sentences. Read them with Attention, they are as pleafant as profitable for Mustapha's Use; who will find this great King, to have had an Invincible Courage in Advertity, and great Clemency and Generofity, when he was in his Prosperity; he was Valour it felf amongst the Soldiets, Wife and Pleasant amongst his Courviers, Terrible in Battels, Easie and Free amongst the Ladies, full of Hear when any Action offered ofe felf, and Courteous and Affable to all forts of People on con son se al li

Henry dyed in the same Manner as most of our Sulrans, that is to fay, a Violent Death. He had lived Fifty Seven Years and some Months, and reigned about Twenty Years. Several of his Courtiers named him, like the First Cafar, All Women's Husband; because 'cwas believed, he never faw any that he fancied, but he obtained her-He had Fourteen Children, Six by the Queen, and the others by Four of his Mistresses. She who was called the Beautiful Gabrielle, of the Family of Eftree feemed to have more Power on his Heart than

than all others; he often carried her about with him in his Army, and to the Places he befieged in Person. Henry was wont to say, 'Twas as difficult to know how to Love well, to prepare a Feast, and to dance at the same time agreeably, as to draw up an Army for Battel, confishing of several Nations.

And when he was more advanced in Years, he faid he loved Dancing, for it made him appear Young. He loved Play, for it shewed he could be angry; and Ladies, because he said he believed a Man dught to love all the Days of his Life,

He was to imparient at Play when he loft, that he feemed to be as much concerned at the Lofs of an Hundred Crowns, as at the taking of a City from him.

I

c

1,

IS

ft

d

of

ir

d

d

I

6-

r.

d

10

ly

ft

ID

He often disguised himself like a Peasant, to approach his Mistresses, without being known; and he has often carried on this Humour to that Degree, as to drive Asses saden with Fruit, and some times carry a Truss of Hay on his Shoulders.

When he was peaceably fettled in his Kingdom, he faid to those who were his greatest Intimates. That he that grew weary at Difficulties, did not deserve those things which might be acquired without Trouble. I saw my self a King, said be, without having a Kingdom, an Husband without a Wife, a Captain without Soldiers, and Liberal without having any thing to give. I have had in fine, a Kingdom, Children in lawful Marriage, my Troops are numerous, and I can dispose of several Millions.

This Prince has been wounded several times, has received Three, Wounds in the Wars, and Three others on his Throne, in the Calms of Peace. The Adions which have gained him most Glory, have been the winning of Four Battels whence he came out Conqueror, having very few

Troops,

Troops, and his Enemy having very humerous Armies; the general Peace he gave to Europe; the Reconciliation of the Venetians with the Latin Church, which had Excommunicated them; and the great Project I spake to thee about in my foregoing Letter.

The Pope's Nuncio having one Day asked him how long he had made War, his Answer was, All the Days of his Life; and my Armies have never had any other General but my felf. He was feen once for Forty Hours together on Horseback, and he led at that time an unhappy Life, yet he bore up with invincible Gourage, which made his Soldiers call him the King of Iron. At the fame time he held a Morfel of coarfe Bread in one Hand, he would with the other form on the Ground the Defign of an Entrenchment; and when he would thew his Friends the finest Gallery of his Palace, he would at the same time, lead them down into his Stables to fee his Horfes. He was wont to fay, That a King who would reign bappily, must not do all things which he may. He had fuch a Greatness of Mind, and was fo merciful, that he pardoned those who conspired against his Life. He shewed of to those that were about him, a Soldier that was a Scranger, and had wounded him in a Battel; whom he recompenced for doing his Dury, and made him one of his Guards.

Though he was not Lrarned, yethe read Books of his Religion, and took a fingular Pleafure in History, and conversing with learned Men. Hearing one Night the Amals of France, and being almost half asseep in his Bed; he bade his Reader continue his reading, for he would sleep no more that Night.

Having laid Siege to a most important Place, in a most cold Season, he sipt one Night, wrapt up in his Cloak to the Places where the Labourers were 1

ê d

0

f

0

1

n

n

73 in

r-1-

1:

re

in

in

re

at

at work, and heard a Soldier there curfing both God and himfelf; yet without concerning himfelf. any further, he whifper'd in this Soldiers Ear, God hears thee, and the King too, for all thou knowest; if thou canst not Work, bold thy Peace and be gone. The Night following, the King fetting to work himfelf, to excite others; he caused this Soldier to be called to him, and thus fpake to him, Help me to remove this Earth, and do not swear, for now the King hears thee.

To correct the Vices, the Injustices and Violences of others, he did not use Lessons, but gave Examples. And one day, that he heard one of his Captains in a Rage, for that his Creditors had feized on all he had, to his Horie and Sword; he thus fpake to him : I that am thy Souereign bave paid my Debts, and fold all that I am worth for that End; and thou that art my Subject, ought to do the same thing, without murmuring: And then taking him apart, he gave him some Jewels to help him out.

He often shewed the Marshal de Biron to his Friends, and thus spake to them about this Captain; This Man knows to All, as well as Talk; and I have a great Love for him. Yet he sometime after caused him to be put to Death, having Three times pardoned his Difloyalty: This Captain having continued his Plots against his Life, and against the State; yet remembring he had loved him, he would spare one part of the shame of his Funithment, and therefore ordered he should be executed in Prison.

A Scholar, Two Menks, and a Fool, attempted at feveral Times to Kill him, and, as I have already told thee, he was several Times wounded, and at last received a Mortal Stroak. A Woman that had undertaken to Poison him, was burnt alive; and this foolish Creature said at her Death, thinking

thinking to lessen her Crime, That having foreseen. the King was to have been Stabb'd to Death by the Hand of a Ruffian, the would therefore procure bim a more easie and bonowable Death.

Henry extreamly loved Hunting, and one Day being in pursuit of a Stag, and far distant from his Company, a great Spedrum appeared to him with a black and terrible Countenance, with all the Equipage of a Hunter, having a Leash of Dogs, and faid thefe Words to him in a difinal Tone; Expell me, and bear me, repent and amend thy Life; doft thou understand me? Thou maift eafily believe, this Vision did not a little difturb him. was more troubled, at what a Peafant one day rold him, who foske to him with great Freedom; and his Discourse gave him that Disturbance, which he could never get rid of. This Man talk'd to the Prince often with great Familiarity, when he found him in the Field; and one day held this Difcourse to him : We are bere Two Men; thou art a Great King, and I a poor Peafant; yet I am perhaps a better Man, because I am more innocent; I have faid all the Good I can of thy Person to my Friends. being sensible of thy Justice, thy Bounty and Liberality. But all these Vertues are horribly soiled by a grievous Vice, which God will never forgive thee, unless thou leaviest it off; thou committest, Great

Tis cercain this Prince acknowledged to some of his Confidents. That he had that day heard in pacticular a Preacher, who without any skill in Theology and Rossorick; had more moved him, than all the Doctors of the Sorbonne put together could do This Sorbonne is a Colledge at Paris, famous for

Learned Divines

This Prince put a pleasant Trick on his Confessor, who often urged him to forfake his Mistrelles, and content himself with the Embraces of his displicated at her Death.

Wife: He order'd a Cook, who was wont to dress this Dodor's Victuals, to give him nothing every Meal but Partridges; which so greatly tired him, that he could not forbear complaining to the King himself, that this Cook was so wilful and humoursome, that he would let him have nothing but Partridges; so that he grew so weary with that kind of Food, as made him Sick at the Thoughts of it; the Prince only answered him; Always the Queen, always Partridges.

He loved Learned Men, and was a great Patron of them; yet he faid, That Necessity obliged him to follow Arms; but had he been left to his own Inclination, he should have chosen to have been a Scholar.

the had no great Esteem for Physicians, as believing these kind of People wish ill to Men; being of Tiberius's Mind, who thought that a Man of Thirty

Years of Age, needed them not.

e

n

n

n

d

r.

is

But on the contrary, he most esteemed Hiforiums, and gave Penfions to feveral of them in Germany, Italy, and other Places; faying oft, That if any one could find the Books of Titus Livy, which are wanting; and those of Tacitus, that he would willingly bestow on him the same Gift of Three Cities, which Xerxes made to a Greek Captain, the One for Bread, the Second for Wine, and the Third for Cloathing. And therefore there are above Fifty Authors who have written his History. He envied Augustus, by reason of the Happiness of having so many Learned Men in his Reign ; and, that he more esteemed Mecanas, living a peaceable Citizen at Rome, than Alexander, triumphing over all Afia; and, That Mecanas's patronizing and recompensing Illustrious Men that excelled in Rome in all Arts. had rendred his Name Immortal, rogether with that of his Sovereign.

He bewailed the great Pains he had taken, to obtain the Command of others, and for his having learn'd nothing himself; affirming, It had been better for him to have learn'd to command himself. He was also wont to say, That a Wife Prince ought never to resuse a Peace, unless it be found more prejudicial than War.

Being one Day conversing with the Spanish Ambassador, he began to walk very sast; and perceiving the Astonishment of this Minister; Ton see, says he, that I can still mount on Horseback, and march on Foot too, if it be necessary, and that the Gout has not deprived me of the use of my Lego. His Valour was so admirable, that a Grandee of Spain, being at a Ceremony, wherein the Sword of this Prince was carried naked before him, he stopt openly him that carried it, and kiss dir, saying, He did this Honour to the Sword of the First and Chiefest Captain of the World.

A Chymist, one Day, presented him with a Receipt to change Lead into Gold; to whom he answered, in making a great empty Cosser to be brought to him; When thou hast filled this Cosser with the Metal thou talkest of, come to me, and I will give thee as much Lead as thou will have.

Being at Fountain-Blean, a Place famous fince several Ages, and shewing all the Buildings there to a Foreign Prince, who told him, when he had shewed him the Chappel, That he had lodged God in too narrow a compass: He answered, That God was better lodged in the Heart, than in great Edifices of Stone.

When he drew the Defigns against the Musfulmans, which I mentioned in my other Letter, ac

b-

tłe

ht

e-

1

r.

ch

t

11

IL IS

It

1

e

n

he did an Action of Generosity very beneficial to the Moors, who were driven out of Spain; permitring above Fifty Thousand Men, who had past the Pirenees, to embark themselves in the Ports of Provence, and Languedoc, to retire into Africk. I cannot call to Mind that Time, without bewailing the Loss of a Million of Persons, who perished by divers Accidents and Misseries.

After a Battel, wherein Henry ran a great Hazard; he faid, He had often fought for Villory, but at this Time he fought for his Life.

He had used more Boots than Shooes, and he vaunted he had been less Time in Bed, than the Duke of Magenne had been at Table; this latter commanding then the Army of the League.

This King defined to be thought a real Father to his Subjects; he therefore applyed himself in fearthing the Means of redreffing the infamous Abufes of the Bar; but he advanced not much in the Bufinefs, whatever Care be used; it being impossible for him to bridle the Coverouses of the Lawyers, and to hinder the Length of Suits, or correct the Injustice of Judges, to leave nothing to be done by his Succeffors. He feemed to be much troubled many times, when he spake of these kind of Things, in that there were in Paris more Courts and Lawyers, than in all the vast Empire of the Turks; his Defign being, after the Example of the Milfalmans, to make all Sairs, which were everlafting, by the Knavery of the Lawyers, to be decided in Three Days. And he therefore deligned allogo burn the Books of all chose, who had written infinite Commentaries on this Subject; which ferved only to ruin the People, and caused oftentimes amongst Relations, Friends, and Neighbours, fach Broils, as may be faid to do more Mischief than than a Civil War. He affirmed, That in imitating herein the Turks, he should use his Subjects as his real Children , and hinder them from devouring one another; That he would cause sharp Nails and Rafors to be fastned to the Sears where the Judges face, that those who fuffered themselves to be corrupted, might fit thereon, and indeed, in this particular, I cannot but wonder at the Christians Blindnels. where in them's range

We fee oftentimes decided in one only Campaign, the Differences of Two great States; but a Suit in Law for Twenty Sequins shall often last a Mans whole Life, and perhaps be entailed on his Heirs.

theoriginal isea

But hear a remarkable Example of the Sincerity of this Sovereign. There were who would have perswaded him to have apprehended the Duke of Savor, who came to Paris to terminate some Differences he had with him. He anfwered, those that advised him with this , That Francis I. one of bis Predecesfors bad learnt bim. A Prince was more obliged to do what he had promised, than to obtain what he defired; that 'twas in his power to have apprehended a Prince far more confiderable, but would not do it, suffering the Emperor Charles V. to pass out of his Kingdom, who had come therein on his Word; after this, added he, shall Henry give fuch an Example to Princes ! If the Duke of Savoy has often broke his Word with me, it does not therefore follow I must imitate him; Crimes cannever be authorised by Examples. The same Duke of Savoy having asked him, What Revenue he drew from bis Kingdom? He answered him in these Terms, I draw as much as I will, because I make my self beloved; whence it is, that my Subjects count all our Effates are common. par signs of sign of

He answered very pleasantly, to a Prince's En-YOU

Prices.

ing

his

ing

end

ges

-10

ar-

od-

m-

out

1 2

his

e-ild

he ni-

n-

at

A

d, er le,

٧.

in

ve

of 10

.

e

ij

voy, who came with a Complement of Condoleance for the Death of his Son, who had been dead near a Year; That he was no longer grieved at that Loss, seeing God hath given him Two more since.

A Captain of great Reputation having faid, That the Kings Liberalities, the several Times reiterated, could not oblige him to love him; Henry sent him Word, He would heap so many Favours on him, that he would force him at last.

He often used this Proverb, That more Flies are taken with a drop of. Honey, than a Tun of Vinegar.

A Monk entertaining him one Day about Military Affairs; Open your Breviary, Father, faid he, and Thew me where you learn'd these fine Lessons.

One Day a Taylor prefenting him with a Book of Politicks, he faid to the Chancellor, who was there prefent: Monficur Chancellor, cut me out a Suit of Cloaths, here's a Taylor who understands your Trade, and tells me how I shall govern my Kingdom.

One Day when the Pope's Nuncio was at a great Feast, where there were between Twenty and Thirty Ladies of great Beauty, he told this Prelate, He had been in several Battels; but never found himself

in so great danger before. and and mont mont

Nothing seems more agreeable than the Answer he made to the Provost of the Merchants of Paris. who was urgent with him to consent to an Impost, which was to be laid on the Fountains of the Town, to furnish the Expences of Forty Deputies of the Switzers, who came into France to renew their ancient Alliance with this Kingdom; and his Answer was, That this Magistrate should find some other Expedient, than to change Water into Wine; which was a Miraele that never any Body wrought but Jesus Christ, who is, as thou knowest, the Christian's Saviner; and for thy further Instruction, 'tis necessary for thee to know,

The

The Switzers love Wine above all things in the World, and that not without Reason.

This Prince went to the Wars at the Age of Fifteen, and at Sevencen killed an Enemy, and in the Year following, he faved the Life of one of his Captains, and had his Horfe killed under him. He was in Five Battels, and in more than an Hundred Combats, and at the Siege of above Two Hundred Places. He suftained Seven different Wars, in which his Enemies acknowledged, That he had Fifty Five Armies upon him at several Times, and in different Places; and always obtained some considerable Advantage.

Those that have given him the Term of Great, have given him his true Name. He was highly effected by all Nations, and thou knowest very well, that one Sultans, though the mightiest Monarchs in the Universe, have admired this great Prince's For-rune and Valour-

Above Fifty Historians have written his Life; above Five Hundred Poets have published his Praifes.

paring this King with those, whom thou wilt choose from amongst the Hero's.

If Mahomet XI, has not done more than him, he may be compared to him in Warlike Actions, with this Difference. That King Henry Conquered the Gauls who were of his Patrimony, and Mahomet Conquered Twelve Kingdoms and an Empire, because he was perswaded, that all the Earth bedoinged to him. Henry subdued the City of Paris, and Mahomet made himself Master of Constantinople.

Marks behind him of his Grandeur, on Marble, and in the Writings of Famous Authors; and Mahamet left only on his Tomb, those which shewed what he had defigned to execute, but never could do it; which was, to take Rhodes, and subdue proud Italy.

Dewed

ic

F-

15

1-

1-

h

e

e

c

)-

.,

ſ,

f

1

We must also acknowledge, there was never found in any Mahometan Prince, the admirable Clemency of Henry; thewing himself herein greater, than in vanquishing his Enemies. Contrary to Mahomet, who shewed only great Kindness to an Oxe, whom he caused to be carefully fed, because he would never forsake the Tomb of his Mawhom this Prince had killed; abiding always by it, and expressing his Sorrow by horrible Bellowings. In all other Occasions, he was very cruel; far from the Humour of this French King, who heap'd Benefits on those who drew Blood on him. Mahomet, by a barbarous Cruelty, caused the Bellies of Twenty of his innocent Pages to be rip't open, to discover him that had eaten a Melon in his Garden.

Henry was a great Lover of Ladies, and an extreme Admirer of that Sex; and Mahomet, jealous of the too great Beauty of his Mistress, cut off her Head himself in a full Divan. And farther, if Mahomet gave in the East a great Example of Justice, in putting his own Son to Death, for deflowing the Daughter of the Bassa Achmet in a Bath; Henry gave a greater in his own Person, in repairing, at the Head of his Army, the Outrage offered to a young Girl, from whom he could not fear any vexatious Consequences.

Be fure, however, to be filent in these Judgments I make, and shew thy self discreet, if thou intendest to hold any Correspondence with me.

Imitate the Bees; gather from fo many Flowers presented thee, what appears to thee sweetest, and most proper to form Mustapha's Mind, and supple his Spirit like Wax.

I could relate to thee more Things touching this Henry, but there's no Necessity of writing all; that thou may'ft have space to imagine what such a Prince might have done, who had re-established his Fortune by his Valour alone.

Let me know of thy Departure; and when thou fhalt arrive at the Place of thy Retreat, forget not thy faithful Friend, Mahmut, who wishes thou may it prove an happy Tutor to the Son of a Prince, and a faithful Minister of a wife Emperor.

The state of the s

Paris, 18th of the 2d Moon,
of the Tear 1639.

CAMPACTURE TO SERVER

DEFECT I

The End of the Second Book

India citie & 32 educations of a p Flowers and constitution of the constitution of the

I make, and the tring and the city of the current o

rur gog incl. S. al. a. Su Passa. perceela our S. a. o. Desea, "v Lacaliter or the Sula Admir or tions Confequences

ile fare, however, other energy was a supply specific to the property of the property o

laulout event Super of Horiev might, have been it Complemengalaisely and having oblerated in a ewo voore of will on

The state of the s rended with hear hoped Cheminganer, that even the Enemicsof vive Alexan do decest them thin Tekers to their Control with the water of a land Write by a land of least well and with the water of the least of least with the water of the least of least of SPY at PARIS.

BOOK III.

ed alive with this it is refired of good Etimos in

LETTER L

To Muslu Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Octoman Empire.

es co confet you dee at a took of this lampon CARCE had I finished my Letter to Egri of Provence, of to extraordinary and fcanda-lous an Event, that I cannot but inform thee, who are a wife and experienced Person, of it and because I would have thee set it down in the Sacred Register-Books of the Empire, of which thou hast the Charge.

Affam Baffa, a Corfary of Algiers, dyed at the Age of 40 Years, the Relation of whole Death was rended with such horrid Circumstances, that even the Enemies of the Alcoran do detest them.

'Tis faid, That being fensible he was near his End, he caused two young Christian Slaves to be ftrangled, who were nobly descended, and for whose Ranfom great Sums of Money might have been expecied, without alledging any Reason for his Cruelty; ney, after he had confessed he had no cause of Complaint against them, having observed from certain Tokens in their Countenances, that they were of a sweet Disposition, and inclined by Nature to be Faithful. When he was laying out, there was found a kind of fine Scarf about him, with thele words embroidered on it in Letters of Gold; Affam Baffa will have the handsomest of his Slaves to be buried alive with him, being defirous of good Company in bis Voyage into the other World.

The Report of fo terrible an Adventure, has encreased the hatred of the French against us, and that in so excessive a manner, that I am forced to keep my felf concealed, left I should by my Zeal discover my felf, being not able to endure the Blasphemies of our Enemies. There's no question, but this cruel Monster is kept by the Black Angels in the other World.

God grant that fo horrid a Crime may nor corrupt the rest of Africk. However, may I be so free as to counsel you, let the Body of this Impious Wretch Affam be dug up, and burnt, and his Affaes thrown into the Sea, to drown the Memory of him. Mabmur fahres thee from the Town of the Univerfe, the fullest of Noise, and wishes thee at Conthantenople, or wherever elfe thou are along fequel of happy Years, and after Death the enjoyment of the Biss of our hundred twenty four thousand Prophets.

Parks, 18th of the 2d Moon, swof the Teur 1639. OH LA SHE TEN Y ON TO SEA bsbasus

the second to LETTER ! Had been been

To the Invincible Vizir Azem, at the Camp under Babylon.

Bafore I give thee an Account, Great and Magnanimous Vizir, of whatever I have done to fatisfie the Curiofity of Cardinal Richlies, I am obliged to tell thee how I spent my leifure Hours.

Tis impossible I should observe exactly the Motions of this Court, without following it, and holding a Correspondence with People of all forts, as Tradesmen, Soldiers, Scholars, Scamen, Politicians, and even Musicians.

n

15

(e

K-

of

r-

re

0.

is le

m.

i-

13

d

o

c

n,

n

re

us

es

n.

i-

n-

el

of

The Court confifts of all these Professions, and there are some particular Persons who are Masters of all these Sciences, of which number is Cardinal Richlien. He is not content with this his Knowledge, but seeks still for further Light in the Commerce of all Persons of Merit who arrive here; neglecting nothing which may enrich this kingdom with new Discoveries in Arts and Sciences, our of love to his Country, and desire to render his Ministry more Famous.

Thou seeft by this, invincible Bassa, that to keep company with Coursiers, who have so many different Qualities, a Man must have some for his share, that he may say something in his Turn, and not be always a bare Hearer of other People's Discourse.

For this purpose, the particular Study to which I applyed my felf, whilft I was a Slave in Sicily, does much help me, though not sufficiently. Twas Books I read in this Island, not Men. Now, knowing my Buliness required much Dissimulation, and Awakened Mind, an especial Prudence, Eloquence, and Learning, to speak properly in Occasions; great Reading.

Reading to obtain the Knowledge of Ancient and Modern Things : a Refined Policy, to discover or conceal one's felf, and to counterfeit sometimes a mighty honest Man; nothing, I say, appeared to me more conducing to this purpose, than the turning over Histories. And therefore I have earnestly applied my felf to this Work. And because few Books are not fufficient, and a great many breed confusion. I have happily gor Admission into the Acquaincance of an Ancient Learned Man, whose Study confists of none but choice Books, and has travelled over most Parts of the World; not like Apollonius, so learn the Language of Birds and Beafts; but to know the Cuftoms, Laws, Vertues, and Defects of Nations. I was first for informing my self of all the Prodigies which the God of the Jews has done, in favour of that ungrateful People. I afterwards enquired into the Life and Doctrine of the Mellias whom the Christians Worship. I also look'd into what had been done confiderable at Athens and Sparta, Thebes, Rome, and Carthage, and carefully remark'd what Divinities were adored in those for famous Places, and found that the great Philosophers and Captains, who made such a noise about their Religions had at bottom none at all. Having run over what the Christians call the Old and New Teffament, the Histories of Josephus, Kenophon, Pobis, Thucydides, Livins, and Tacitus; my greateft Application has been, and fhall be for the future, to read and meditate on the Works of the Great Plutarch, especially his Lives of Illustrious Greeks and Romans, related by him with fo great Exactness. And thus far I have arrived in this fhore space, and here thave ftopt. I have learn'd, by the reading of Plutarch, to amuse the Cardinal Richlien, to whom I offered my felf two Days ago; and have put into his Hands the following Discourse, made after the manner of Chriflians.

ftians, and have stript my self, if a Man may so speak, of the Manner and Style of the Turks, as I have done of their Habits, the better to disguise Titus, the Faithful Slave of the Great Amurath.

Great Cardinal, and most Sage Minister of the Greatest of Christian Kings,

Titus of Moldavia is come to wait on you according to your Commands, not to entertain you with the Riches of Alia, nor in what manner, by the Wisdom of your Counfels, and Forces of the King your Sovereign, you may destroy the mighty Turkish Empire, of whom you have no reason to complain; but, to tell you what seems most agreeable to the Greatness of your Genius. Know then, Sage Moderatar of the French Monarch, that I shall not offer any thing which may make you bate me, and repent of believing me, seeing, what I propose, is an easie Enterprize, and full of Glory. Thy King bas a Son, who will one day inherit the Greatnels and Authority of his Father; you know not the Temper and Dispositions which this Heir may bave, being as yet so much a Child, that a Man cannot gather any thing certain of this matter. But, a Prince that has been fo long look'd for, requires extraordinary Designs to be laid for bim, and great Preparations made betimes, to raife a Palace that may be worthy to entertain him.

I would propose to you a Palace, I say, of mireculous Architecture, the like was never feen or imagined, and which you may with your own Hands rear up in Paris, which must be of a square Form, whose Corners shall regard Europe, Alia, Africa, and America, and whose Richness shall draw all Nations to it. You will not need Stone, Sand, Wood ner Iron for this Work. The Architests which you shall employ, shall have the Secret, with their Pen, Ink, and Paper, to raise this Edifice, which shall be of a more lasting Durance than the Pancteon of Agrippa, and whereon, as on the Temple of Solomon, there should be no noise of Hammers.

Think not, Wise Minister, they are Chimera's which Titus has in his Head. Hear then the Design of this Majestical Palace, whose Foundations are already said by Psutarch, with Materials more precious than Gold or Rubies. Thou knowest the Happiness this Philosopher had, of rendring Immortal the Actions of so many great Men, of whom, perhaps, there might have been no mention, had Plutarch the sight have been no mention, had Plutarch the sight filent. Men now read in the most remote Provinces of the Indies, written on Lender and Barks of Irees, the Lives of Alexander, Caesar, Scipio, Pornpey and Xerxes. Amongst the Solitary's of the most defart Parts of Arabia, and amongst the Derviles, who dwell at Medina, are found written in Arabian Characters, the Histories of Numa. Aristides, Cato, Lycurgus, and Epaminondas. The Spaniards and Portugueles. bave rendred this Author fo famous in China and Japan, that thefe Barbarians, not contented with baving translated into their Languages all the Lives of the Greeks and Romans, they have ordered (if Imiftake not) that every Five Years new Copies be made, to. the end they may be eternally preserved. I have feen my felf ar Constantinople above an hundred Volumes in Silken Paper, wherein the Works of this famous Greek are read with Veneration by the greatest Captains, Lawvers and Divines; and thefe Works are enriched with most Curious Notes in Arabick, in Persian and the Turkish Language, bythe express Orders of the Sultans, who make them be preserved as Instrious Monuments of the Ancient Greek Eloquence. You are not ignorant of the Esteem which Solyman the Great bad of Pompey, Calar, Pyrthus, and Alexander; and that be never undertook any Military Enterprize; till be bad confulted thefe great Masters in the Art of War, being wont to fay, be knew not whether Alexander ander or Pyrrhus, bad hewed more Valour in Engagements, than Plutarch had shewed Wit and Judgment in describing them. But in a Voyage I made into Germany, what did not an old Rabin tell me, in shewing me the Lives of Illustrious Men of this Incomparable Author, translated into Hebrew, which be carried ever about with him? He affured me, that the Curious of his Religion fet such a value on them, that there are above Ten Thousand Manuscript Copies dispersed in the Synagogues, both in the Eastern and Western Parts.

Men, Women, and Children know of what Account this Famous Author is, in all our Europe. He now speaks all Languages: The English, the Spaniards, Italians, Germans, Polanders and Hollanders bave naturalized bim among them. And you know very well, Sir, that in this Kingdom of France, the Learned not content with having him Translated into their Idiom, they carefully adorn their Libraries with this Author in bis own natural Tongue, and bave collected the Latin, Italian, and Spanish Versions of bim. when a way of sair he

But eis now Sixteen Hundred Years fince Plutarch keeps filence; fo many Men famous for their Knowledge, and so many great Captains who have lived fince, are unknown to the World, because they have met with no Plutarch to know them. And this is the stately Building which I offer you to finish, who are so great a Lover of Glory: for God bas given you a Mind, with a neces-Sary Power, to finish what Plutarch bas so profitably begun. Raise up immediately, by your Authority, on the precious Foundation, which this Incomparable Philosopher has laid, the Walls and Roof of this wast Building. Order Lodgings to be made ready for all the Hero's, who could not enter into this first Edifice ; I mean, those Illustrious Dead, whose Lives have not been carefully Collected; and who (hould bonour Europe, Afra, and Africa, where they were born, and the New World will yield you wherewith to fill this Palace with Arabalippa's and Montezuma'r.

Hereby wilt thou be the Restorer of those Ruines which Time has made; and in raising the Statutes of so many Excellent Persons in Civil Administrations, in War and in good Letters, you will raise up an insince Number throughout the World, as the first Emperor of the Romans did. Tis to no purpose to say, there are a great many Authors that have written, since Plutarch, the Actions of several Great Commanders, Kings and Great Ministers, whose Vertues were eminently eminently conspicuous both in Peace and War. I bope I shall not give just Offence, in Saying, That few of thefe Writers have observed Plutarch's excellent Method, for, either they appear obscure; by reason of their great Conciseness, or the Facts are ordinarily confounded in General Histories, or written by intereffed or passionate Pens, who disquise the Truth, and impose Fabulous Relations on the World. For a Proof of thus, be pleased to examine particular Events related in the Lives of Francis I. King of France, and of the Emperor Charles V. and you will find there are those who affure m, that Charles died a Saint, and that scarcely was he expired, when Flower-de-Luces were feen to fpring up in his Chamber, which yielded a most admirable Scent : Whilft others affirm, That this Hero died an Heretick, by the Affiftance of his Confessor, who had embraced the Lutheran Doctrine. And, how many Romanses are made of Francis I? Has it not been Said, That be fought a Duel with this Emperur; and that this Prince possing through France, the King, by a Motive of Generofity (beyond any Precedent) offered bim his Kingdom? That Charles had one day fat on France's Throne, and condemned a Malefactor, and afterwards reprieved bim, as a Mark of his Authority? And has it not been more.

moreover faid, That Francis took Charles in a Battel? How many false Relations have been made of Andrew Doria, and Barbarossa, Two Famous Sea-Captains, the one a Chriftian, and the other a Muffulman, and both of them Chief Admirals of Two. mighty Emperors, Charles V. and Solyman? Has it not been confidently affirmed, That Barbarossa being in the Archipelago, gave a Visit in the Disquise of a Monk to Doria? That in an Island where this Interview was made, they had sworn, one on the Gospel, the other on the Alcoran, to belp one another to conserve their Authority which their Employs gave them at Sea; and, to make themselves more necessary to their Sovereigns, they were always to avoid a decisive Combat, that they might not ruin one another: That they bad moreover both figned this Treaty with their own Blood: Has there not been added to this Fable, That the Turkish Admiral fent to Doria a Moor, who pretended to be a Fugitive from the Octoman Army, and wore two Pearls of an inestimable Price in bis Ears, and ibat in Exchange, Doria bad offured Barbaroffanot to interrupt bim, whenever be pleased to invade any of the Coasts of Italy.

It is time, that under thy Auspicious Conduct, the Lives of great Personages be clear-

t

73:

ed from those false Relations which corrupt them, and be orderly inserted into the Books of the most excellent Plutarch, with such a kind of Title :

Here's the Rest of the Lives of Mufirious Den, trom the Emperor Trajan, to Lewisthe Juft; of those that have excelled in Arms, Learning, Affairs of State, and of those who have held the first Kank in the Church in all Parts of the World; and thele Diftogies have been Colleges by a College of the Learnevelt Den in Europe, confitting of Spaniards, French, Italians, and Germans, under the Aufpicious Conduct of his Eminency, Carvinal Richlieu.

I would have three Persons of each Nation to attend this Work, and who should make their Abode in Paris, as being the principal City in France. And, I propose Spaniards, Italians, Germans, and French, as the most polished Nations, and who have farnished the World with the most able Men. Now, every Nation having its particular Way of Speaking and Asting, the Edifice will be the more agreeable, and each Architest will have greater Room to shew bis Skill. Those who shall read these Works, will find in the Softness of the French Style wberewherewithal to mollifie the too severe Gravity of the Spanish Eloquence. The Sincerity of the Germans, ever attended with some kind of Driness, will appear without Rudeness with the Flowers and good Sense of the Italian Writers. And, as all the World will be interessed in this Magnificent Design; so we must not doubt but the wisest of all these States will take care in the choice of the Subjects which they will propose. And, in fine, if thou will have the chief Men in the World, thou needest not want the Secret of raising up Plutarch's. Be not weary of giving Marks of thy Liberality; far, if thou wilt have Titus Livy's, become Mecanas.

Is doth not belong to me, to say in what manner its necessary on this occasion to separate them of several Nations, and to distribute these Employs: Thou art equitable and prudent, so that this Work being begun, the End will have a Success answerable to its Beginning. I shall only put thee in Mind, that thou wilt not a little contribute to render thy Immortality were Glorious, if thou remembrest the Turks thy sworn Enemies; being persuaded thou may st find among st the Octoman Emperors, Bassa's and Vizir's wherewithal to emich the New Plutarch. Let not the Greatness of the Work discourage thee; how great sever it be, thy Wit and Con-

rape are above it, and thou will not want Ancient and Modern Authors to affift thee. Sueconius will furnish thee with the Lives of the Calars, which may be left entire as they are. Diogenes Lacrtius gives as good an account of many of the Philosophers. You'll receive Advantage from the Works of Æmilius Probus, Paulus Jovius, and feveral others, who bave acquired immortal Reputation by the Books which they have given the Publick, Yu will find a Draught already made of the Hifory of Two Hundred and Twenty Eight Emperors, from Julius Cafar to Ferdinand III. and Ibrahim I, the one Emperor of Germany, and the other of Turky; which thou fhalt cause to be carefully examined by the College. to clear up such things as are obscure, adding what is wanting, and retrenching Events of which there is no sufficient Proof, and which ferm fabulous; and, in a Word, for drawing up particular Lives which are to be met with in general Histories, which have been the Method of most Writers of late Ages.

I would have also Plutarch's Manner followed, of comparing the Illustrious Men of one Nation with those of another; where the discreet Writer having weighed the Reasons which makes for the one and the other; pronounces a Sentence which does both delight and instruct the Reader.

The most important Instruction then which can be given, being the Secret of knowing Men perfectly, who feek with fo great Care to bide themselves; the true means for this, is the choice of Matter, that the Reader may not lofe bis Time, fludy in vain, but gather the Fruit which all Men of Senfe fearch for. which is, to know what is Good, that they may follow it; and Evil, to avoid it. On this ground you will be easily perswaded, there's greater Pleasure to be bold the Firmness of Scipio, who paffes with one only Galley to find out Sifax, than there is in confidering him, when be gives Battel to Hannibal in the Plains of Rama. We are more edified in feeing this young General a Conqueror, and yet so continent, as to fend the finest Woman in the World, who was bis Prisoner, to Lucius the Spanish Prince, ber Husband, without touching ber; than in the Relation of an hundred Sieges of Places, where, the Fiffetts which the Soldiers Fury produces, Hunger and Thirft, and the Effusion of Human Blood, yields Horrier instead of Diversion. In like manner, Sir, you will acknowledge, That a Prince, or Captain, will be more instructed by feeing Francis, who lived like a King, though in Prifon at Madrid, who careffes and recompenses Learned Men all the World over; and in seeing Fabricius, who refuses and despises the greatest Honours which are offered bim with immense Riches, and who snatches away the Poyson from the Mouth of the greatest Enemy of the Roman People; than all the Combats, and most bloody Battels fought by Pyrrhus, Charles V. and the Great Tamerlane.

I have made you this long Discourse, as a Mark of my Obediense; and Titus of Moldavia, at the Feet of your Eminency, Supplicates you to consider, that when by your Negotiations, Councils and Armies which receive your Orders, you shall have added new Kingdoms to that which your Master holds; when for the benefit of Trade and Navigation, you shall have joined all the Seas together; and when, in a Word, you shall raise Bridges in Paris, Pyramides with more Palaces than were built by the Calars, and all the Kings of Egypt: These Pyles will not be Immortal, but subject to the injuries of Time; whereas on the contrary, if you fend for the Twelve Architects which I mentioned to raise the stately Palace of ore exied, all the World will bless the Name of Armand, Cardinal de Richlieu, Restorer of the Republick of Learning almost ruined; and who; like another Archimedes, bath known by the Examples of of the Vertue of Illustrious Men, snatcht away by Death out of the World, to combat and destroy the Vices and Ignorances of the Living.

If thou approveft not, Magnanimous Vizir, what I offered to the King of France's Minister, punish me not for a Fault which was not designed, having, on the contrary, imagin'd to do thee a very agreeable piece of Service. I thought I could not take a better course to conceal thy Slave Mahmut, and to divert this Cardinal from some Projects, which I am informed he designs against the Turkish Empire. Should he undertake the Great Work I set before him, thou seeft the Sultans will have some Share in its and he will, I say again, have by this means, not to mention any thing else, his Hands so full of Business, that he will not have the least Time or Ability to molest us.

I supplicate thee, prostrate at thy Feet, to call to mind, the general Dislike of what happened to Athens, when 'twas sackt and taken, such prodigious Numbers of Books being burnt, in all Arts and Sciences, which had been a collecting several Ages, and preserved with such great Care; and so much the more, inasmuch as one may be assured, there's nothing to be seared from those that make Learning their whole Business, who are always averse to War, as finding their reckoning only in the Tranqui try

of a well established Peace.

Thou shak receive, by the first Opportunity, whatever I can discover of Importance for thee to know, either for the Good of the Empire in which thou holdest so great a Rank, or to satisfie thy Curiosity, provided the Frosts hinder not the passage of Couriers, as they will assuredly retard the Progress of the Armies, which are constrained to he still during this rigorous Season.

God give thee an entire Victory over the Enemies of the Mighey Amurath, and make thee the Conqueror of all Nations.

Paris, 28th of the 3d-Moon,
as of the Tear 1639, male on fired age 2002 if

LETTER. III. To and the court of the court o

To Lubano Abusei-Saad, an Egyptian Knight.

him, they feel one School will have lone state.

THE King, some Days ago, was present at a Ball, where there was a great number of Perfons of Quality of both Sexes. Cardinal Richlien. who never loses the fight of this Prince, was there also. 'Twas observed, that at the end of this Divertisement, the Cardinal would have went out before every body, but dared not; and indeed, could not get through the Crowd; which made him fo imparient, as was remark'd by all, even the King himself, who taking him a little apart, very serioully bid him pals on, seeing he was Master. Now, what did this Minister do in this aftonishment, but answer nothing; and taking a Flambeau our of the Hands of one of the Pages, he carried it himlest before the King, with a Countenance that fliewed neither Despite nor Confusion. Those that took notice of the Name of Master, which the King had given him, interpreted it in his Favour; and there were them who thought, that in abasing himself for low, he plainly shewed the defign he had of raising himself the bigher; bowever, every one thereupon fpake whar he thought most proper.

0. 2000 24 addy 50

I give thee an Account of this Passage, remembring what thou didst in the presence of thy Master, throwing thy self out at a Window, to take up a little Note which Amurath had by chance let sall; which Action of thine, being known in this Country, this of the Cardinal was compared with it; yet with this difference, That the Cardinal without rising from the Ground, has made a greater leap than thou. God preserve thee from salling into a Precipice, if thou beest Fool enough, to leap a second time.

Paris, 28th. of the 3d Moon, of the Fear 1639.

d

r.

e i-

it d,

v,

4

éd

ok

d

re

fo rig

ve

LETTERIV

To Mehemet, Page Bunneber sin

I expect one. I have had for fome Days, a Faintness, which does extreamly depreisme, but by the Grace of God, I need not yet the Phytician. The Letter which I received from the this Moin, has given the some ease in my Indisposed ness, which is no new Thing with me, being needlitated to live so far from my Friends, Country, yea, and Religion too. And though it may feel difficult to be a Saint, in passing ones Days in a Prophane Place; yet think not my Piety grows luke-warm, or my Friendship diminished; seeing I have made a Mosque of my Heart, where Friends are ever present. Be then perswaded, its impossible for Mahmut to become Unfaithful, and sole the Assection he has for his Friends; for he never ceafes to love, where he has once begun. 'Tis true indeed, that I call my felf Titue at prefent, and am cloathed in an odd fort of Drefs; yet that is no Hindrance of my Affections to my Religion, my Country and my Friends.

2

The Ancient Greeks have written a great deal about Friendship, and the Duties of a Friend: but there remains still behind, more than what they have said, as there remains more to do than they have done. The Word Friend is a common Name, and appropriated by most People; but where wilt thou find a Man that gives Proofs of a true and unseigned Friendship? I think I am no Hypocrite; be thou as true to me at Constantinople, and inform me what passes in the Seraglio, and how it goes with our Friends and Relations in all Parts.

I shall give thee no Account of the Transactions of the Infidels, amongst which I live, being tired with writing them to the Grand Vizir and the Kaimakam. Imitate me not herein, for thou aboundest with Leasure; let me then hear from thee every Moon.

I have had several Fits of Laughter, at the pleafant Adventure of the Chamber-Maid to the Old Slave, with the Eunuch Melec Aubi. Bleffings on the Heart of Mahomet, I believe the Holy Prophet will laugh himself in his Paradise, when the Angel his Messenger, who brings him News from this World, shall give him an account of what these Two Persons have ridiculously done in Honour of him. Could there ever be a greater Simplicity, than ro eat every Night a Versicle of the Alcoran, written on a piece of China Satrin? Whence did this Eunuch, thy Comrade, learn this strange Superstition; and by what Spirit did he authorise that of this Slave, in taking the Pains to write these Versicles with his own Hand? And when could they imagine both of them, they should make an end of this Feast, seeing the whole Altoran could not be eaten in less than Six Thousand Forty Three Days, the Book containing so many Versicles? Pray let me know what is done to them. They deserve not, in my poor Judgment, an over rigorous Punishment, their Crime being only a ridiculous Devotion. The Great and Venerable Musici will soon decide the Business; yet I would fain know the manner.

١,

C

n

e

n

I shall now impart to thee an Account of a Visit which I gave a Solitary in my Travels into Germany, who spent his Days far from the Commerce of the World, in a little Hermitage, about Fifteen Miles distance from Vienna. This Man, who is now very Old, has paft Forcy years of his Life in great Austerity, doing every thing our Famous Santons are celebrated for and thou shalt know what moved him to this severe Penance, and to retire after this manner. 'Tis faid, That in his Youth, having been threatned for some Mildemeanour with Imprisonment, he hid himself in the House of a Faithful Friend, lying in a Barrel covered over with Straw, where was brought him privately his Diet. Whilft he thus lay concealed in the Veffel, -2 certain Person went up into the Garret his Prifon, with his Hofts Sifter; when these Two Persons thinking themselves alone, came to such Familiarities as much scandaliz'd this new Diogenes, who faw all that paft, through the Crevices of this Tub; and being nor able to contain his Referements, he thus passionately brake out, God feer you, you Wretches, and Man too. In a Word, his Indignation was fo great, that the Tub or Barrel was overthrown; with the Noise of which, and his scrambling up, the Two Lovers were fo affrighted, that the Gallant for haft broke his Neck down Stairs, and the Nymph lay dead in a Swoon on the place. This strange Surprize to all, especially the Sight of so filthy Filthy and Tragical a Spectacle, to affected this young Man, as made him recire from the World into the Solitude, where he now remains. He lives only on Bread and Water; and the Aversion which he has conceived on this occasion, to Women, is fo great, that there is none dares appear before him. There were Two who had the Curiofity of feeing this Hermit, in Mens Glodths, but they foon repented of their Vifit; for this Solitar), full of Rage and Indignation, thus welcomed them; Get you gone, you Damons, fallen from Heaven for Mens Deftrustion . I know very well what you are, and cannot behold you without Horror. He makes excellent Exhorcarriers to young Men who vife him, and having showed them the Care they ought to take to live with Parity and rule their Paffions, to which corrupe Narare tenders them lubicet; he also exhorts them to hold a Glass before their Faces when seized with Anger, or when carried forth to the Commiffion of any Brutish or unscemly Action.

My Letter is longer than I intended I receive of Mark of my Friendship, the long time That entertained my felf with thee, when I thought in first to their allin ewo Words a Give this Lench. directed to thee, into Zelim's own Hands ; h contains things which concern his Life. As to what remains, Love ever thy faithful Mahmut, whilft I theff pray the Sovereign of the Greatest Monarchs. as well as other Men, that he would, wher this Life, give as eternal Felicity and the Grace to appear Althorem before its dreathir Tribunifour which

Paris, 28th of the 3d Moon, of the Tear 1639. off there are see

Target day dead in a Swoon on the place. This trange Surprize to all, especially the Sight of fo filchy

To would a book to goth ado not in tust to be beyond LETTER V.

To Zelim of Rhodes, Captain of a Galley.

MEbemer, Page of the Seraglio, will deliver, or cause to be delivered to thee, this Letter, which is written to thee by Mahmut, Slave and faithful Minister of the Great Sulvan, the Invincible and Happy Amurath, who commands me to serve him in these Parts. There is no necessary of my sending the Picture of a Man, who sets forth from Leghorn for Constantinople, with a design to kill thee. Thou may ft easily know him, seeing he has been Six Years a Slave in thy Galley. Adona the Jew sent me this Advice from Genta, so important for thy Life; adding, he set out with his Brother, being resolved to perish, or be revenged of a great Injury which thou haft done him.

He has filled traly with Discourses of the Cruelties. He affirms. That having tried all Ways to make him a Turk, Reing heither Prefents nor Promiles could perfivade him, thou half made him fuffer the most cruel Torments a Man can undergo; and, that being laid faff affeep, by a Potion which thou caused'ft him to take, thou hast made him be castrated. The Weapons he bears to rid himest of thee, will firike thee without Noise, so that thou needeft be much on thy Guard. The hides that which is to do thy Bufiness, in a fittle Prayer-Book. Revenge, which does usually make Men industrious, has pur him upon concealing in this Manual, a little poisoned Steel Dart, which is enclosed with such great Art in the Leather that covers it, that the shot thence as from a Bow, and strikes with such Violence and Swiftness, that the Stroke can't be avoided, nor scarcely felt by him that receives ir, it causing not one drop of Blood to follow, nor Wound to be seen; so delicately tempered is the Mortal Weapon, that the Man must unavoidably die, whom it hirs.

K 4

I do not doubt but this revengeful Spirit will cunningly conceal himself, so that 'twill be hard to discover him. But having had this Advice, it belongs to thee to take care of thy felf. And, in the mean time, correct this cruel and severe Temper of thine. Thou commandest a Galley mann'd with Slaves, who live at thy Charge; thou reckoneft amongst thy Riches Three Hundred Christians, who dress thy Gardens, and serve thee at Sea; and thou hast never remembred, they are Men which may Give, or take away thy Life; and that ranging the Seas as thou do'ft, 'tis possible thou may'ft meet with the same Forcune, and be made a Slave thy felf. Thou haft never confidered, that Death is more supportable than Slavery; and that those that despile their own Lives are Masters of thine: God preserve thee, and encline thine Heart to use gently thy Slaves, who are so useful to thee. Follow my Advice; thou hast Three Hundred Enemies in thine Honfe,do what in thee lies to gain their Love. Learn this of a Famous Roman, who made his Slaves, born in his House, to be purft with the same Milk his Children were. If thou art not for such an Indulgence, at least cease to be Cruel, otherwise thou wilt be more a Slave than those that ferve thee. If thou wilt not spare these People in Love to them, picy their Condition, and spare them in Love to thy self; whereby thou wilt live in so great Tranquillity, as cannot be imagined, The Holy Prophet guard thee from the Danger threatned thee, and destroy this rafh Christian who would affassinate thee.

Paris, 28th of the 3d Moon, of the Tear 1639.

LETTER VI.

To the Invincible Vizit Azim at the Camp before Babylon.

Here are various Discourses here of the Grand Seignior's War-like Preparations. common for People to confound here, the Ancient Babylon, with Sufa and Bagdat; but this is no great 'Tis certain, all the Infidels Wifhes are in thy Favour; for they defire to fee thee Conqueror, not only of Babylon, but all the East; that Amurath may be the longer in his Return to Greece, and chuse a Place far diftant from the Seat of his Empire. "Tis discoursed in this Court, as if the Invincible Sultan carries along with him to this War, Four Hundred Thousand Foot, an Hundred and Fifty Thousand Horse, and Two Hundred Bassa's, and moreover Twelve Princes Tributary to the Port. Tis also faid, Bagdat is a Place not to be won by Force; that a River, the swiftest in the World, runs through the midft of it; and, that the Place has an Hundred Gares of Brafs, and its Walls, which are very high, be defended by Three Hundred Pieces of Cannon; That the Perfian Forces are great enough to tire out the Ottoman Army, and that the Example of Cha Abbas, Father to the Sophy, who now reigns over the Perfians, will encrease their Valour and Obstinacy, to fuffer the greatest Extremnies, rather than to think of a Surrender. The rafh Resolution of this King Abbas, in the last Siege of this great City, is so cried up and magnified here, that scarce is there any Room left for the Praises of Amurath. This Prince's passing and re-passing more than once, in a Bark, in the Sight of Two Hundred Thousand Turks, to advertize

n

u

vertize, in Person, the besieged of the Condition of Affairs, and to give them a fresh Courage, assuring them they should be soon succoured, and having at the same time about him wherewith to hinder him from falling alive or dead into the Hands of his Enemies; was an Action which they think is above all Elogium's, and appears to them greater than Story could ever parallel. 'Tis faid, That abis King carried in his Bark Two great Stones fastned to one and the same Cord, to put them on his Neck to link himfelf into the River, which was of an uniathomable Depth, in case he was discove-To which they add, That Amurath, who can never have his Fill of Blood, will recompence thy Services in the same manner he did thy Predecellors.

These Infidels hold moreover other Discourses, which are very impertinent, confounding such things as are true, with falle; as they do the Justice and Liberality of the Generous and ever Invincible Sulreproach him. Tis faid likewife, That the Sequins which he distributed the Day whereon he was proclaimed Emperour, were not by one half of the Value which was fet upon them; That he caused Mehemet, Balla of Cairo to be ftrangled, for no other Realon but so become Mafter of his Wealth. 'Tis tuether added, That this Prince having had advice that a Gally was taken, having Seventy Five confiderable Officers, belonging to the Port on Board whilft he was diverting himfelf in a Pleafure-House at the entrance into Asia, he said by way of Jeft, Let's drink the Health of thele Stout Blades, Tis moreover faid, That having given his Word, and promile a feeure Pallage to the brave Facordin, an Arabian Prince, he caused him to be stabb'd in a Thousand places in his Sight. But what do not they say of his destroying the Mufti, and Cyril, the Greek

n

-

1-

1-

s

is 7

It

25

- 0 -

y

el

r

200

fsi

Greek Patriarch? In fine, they fer forth Amurath as a Sacrilegious Wretch, that despises his own Religion, an Hererick and Enemy to our Boly Brophet. They reface the Parriculars of Cyril's Death, which makes me doubt there be Traytors at the Part, who advertise the Infidels of the most Secret Marters which pass there. Some fay, his Eloquence rendred him suspected to Amurath, and that he faid these Words, when he was led to the Castle of Seven Towers, Could I fpeak but once to our Great Emperor, he will be forced to love me, or repent. And tis faid, That having voyaged into England, he had learn'd Magick there. Many People believed he would incroduce Novelties in Religion, and for this End held ftrict Correspondences with the Latinised Monks; and 'tis known here, that when his Sentence was pronounc'd, he said, He would rife again, to torment the Emperor, and perplex bis Affairs. The French having blamed what I now mentioned, do extremely praise the Moderation of Amurath, when he took the Persian Spy, who slid into his Camp in Tarkish Habit, and crouded amongst the True Faithful; for he carefied him, and fent him back with rich Prefents. They also admire the Patience of this Prince, in only condemning to the Gallies the Thirty Indian Pilgrims, who occasioned his Fall from his Horse in the Capital City of his Kingdom: For the Horse was affrighted at the Apparel of these Men, and the ftrange Figure they made, when they threw themselves on the Ground to beg Money of him; but they at the same time charge this Emperor with Brutishness, for killing with his own Hand immediately the Horse that threw him down. The Discourses of this Nature, however injurious they are, be not of great Importance. But if I be not militaker, there is fomething carrying on against us wish the Republike of Venice. I observe, is Embassador fince the Loss we have made of Fifteen Gallies at Valentia, has frequent and secret Conserences with the King, and Cardinal de Richlies. As 'tis not doubted but that the Ottoman Empire will be revenged of so deep an Injury; so 'tis also judged, that the Venetians will use their utmost Endeavours to unite into a Confederacy the Christian Princes; and 'tis to be seared, left they take the Time, when the Emperor is employed in the Siege of Babylon, to form some Enterprize, or put themselves into a Condition wherein they cannot be attacked. I shall carefully observe all the Motions of the Venetian Ambassador; and, if need requires, dispatch an express Messenger to the Kaimakam. I adore thy Grandure, buried in the Dust of thy Feet.

Paris 10th of the 4th Moonsof the Year 1639.

LETTER VII.

To the Same.

THE Courier not parting till the Morrow, I make use of this short Time to write again to thee. Brizac, as I have already given Advice, was taken by the Forces of France and Swedeland; and the Duke of Wimar, who commands the Army, brags, that being become Master of this Place, which has always been besieged in vain, he shall take several others, there being none which henceforward can resist him.

The Mareschal de Bannier, one of the Generals of the Swedish Armies, wearied out the Imperialists in Pomerania with continual Alarms. He took Gratz, a considerable Place, and has beaten Galas, one of the

Empe-

Emperor of Germany's Generals. But Fortune has ving chang'd her Countenance, has favoured the Emperor against the Troops of the Palatine, who is taken Prisoner, with Prince Rupert his Brother. having been like to be drowned in the River of Wezer, whereinto he was drawn in his Coach by his Horses, who took Fright at the Noise of the Cannon: And these unfortunate Princes have lost in this Occasion, with their Liberty, whatever was most precious to them. The Swedes have, in the mean time, encreased their Strength, by the Conjunction of New Troops. They made frequent Incurfions on the Imperialists, and tis thought this War will laft a confiderable Time, by the great Preparations which are made on all Hands, and especially by the French, to whom is feems important that is should not end speedily.

d

.

is

al

n

of-

0

10

There is News from Italy, That a Discovery has been made in Piemont, of new Cabals of the Princes of the House of Savoy, who designed to put by the Dutchess from her Regency, and make themselves Mafters of the Government, during the Minority of the Young Duke. There is a Cardinal of this Name, an Ambitious Man, a great Lover of War, and given to Liberality. He would fain have the Chief Share in the Government, and be the Mafter of his Nephew's Fortune. This Cardinal lay concealed in the State of Genoa, being cloathed in an Habit little becoming his Character, and whence he fent his Orders, for the Execution of whatever he had concerted with his Partifans; but the Confpiracy got Wind, and proved a Bloody Tragedy to his Accomplices. 'Tis faid, that this Prince having Twice disguised himself in the Habit of a Peasant, had entred with a Bag of Fruit on his Back, into one of the most considerable Towns of Piemont, to give by his Presence more Heat to his Party; and that with a greater Boldness he had entred into Turin, Turin, in the Habit of a Capuchin, with a long thick Beard, and abode there Two Days; not with design of ridding himself of the Prince, or his Mother, but to become Master both of one and the other, to govern the State alone. But the Conspiracy having been discovered, and the Accomplices seized; Four-score of them were pat to Death by the Common Hangman, and he escaped by a new Stratagem. A Secretary of State of Savoyis to be reckoned amongst this Number. Another Cardinal, who commands the Army of France, sent to the Assistance of the Duke and Dutchess, had also put to Death the Governor of Cazal, accused of Treason, though he was not fully convicted of it. The shatshings s

Tis written from Rome, That Two Embaffadors from the King of Hungary, who is lately Elected Emperor of Germany, had made a magnificent Butrance into that great City, clad after the Hangarian Manner with Vefts, oalled here a la barbarefque; That they had above an hundred Horfe, whose Harness were of Gold, and their Shoes of Silvers and 'twas especially observed, that all the Foreign Ministers in that Court, had sent their Berinue to accompany them in their Entrance, that it might appear more Magnificent; and that these Two Embaffadors of the New Emperor, being arrived in the Presence of the Infidels Mussi, whom they call the Pope, they told him, their Prince would continue to render him the Obedience which his Father Ferdinand now deceased, paid him; and that he recommended to his Holiness his Person, his House, and his State, as a New Emperor elected by the Suffrages of the Princes Blectors of the Empire, and and

Observe, Magnanimous Vivir, the Auchority of this Mustic: Those who are is midecious, as to resist the Mussumen, will yet abuse themselves at his very which they really kiss before they open their Mouths to speak to him. The greatest Christian

Princes

Princes are wont to chuse from amongst the most confiderable Persons of their State, the Embaffindors which they fead with great Expence to pay their Homage to this Supream Head of their Church. Moreover, these Embassadors of the New Celar. have affored the Pope, as from him, that he will never cesse to make War with the Enemies of the christian Faith; and 'tis faid, they received this Anfwer:

That, He ever respected the King of Hungary, the late Eleded Emperor, as his Son, to whom be would never be wanting in Counsel, and all other necessary rious Arms against the Enemies of the Crofs; and that, on bis fide, be would employ the Succours of bis Prayers, that the Church fhontd open her Treasures by granting Indulgences; and that, he would besides this.

give Supplies of Men and Money.

People who are idle, amuse themselves with Difcouries on future Events, and those that consultable Stars to penetrate into what is to come, have made a Marriage between the Dauphin of France, a Prince born fome Months fince, and the Infanta of Spain, lately come into the World, 'Tis true, that at the Moment this Princess saw the Light the King of Spain, and the Grandees of the Kingdom. tried who should out-do one another in Feattings, to folemnize this Birth: And the like was done in France, for that of the Dauphin; both being accompanied with extraordinary Magnificence, and prodigious Liberalities.

The Catholick King has given the Quality of Grandee rothe Duke of Modena, who was Godfather to the Infanta, and has declared him Generaliffimo of the four Seas, with a Penfion of Twenty Thousand Sequins of Gold. He has moreover made magnificent Prefents to the Dutchess his Wife. effectived at an Hundred Thousand Crowns; and

belides

befides, made Knights of the Order of St. James, feveral Gentlemen of this Prince's Cours.

The Elector of Brundenburg, has also given several folendid Entertainments in his House and State. for the Marriage confummated with the Duke of Saxony's Son; and whilft I am writing, I am told. there is a Son born to this King of Hungary, now Emperor of Germany: But whilft these Rejoycings are in feveral Parts of Europe, an unforescen Tempest has ruined whole Countries in Germany; the Damage done thereby in Franconia, and near Francfort, is incredible: And it lackt but little, but this same King of Hungary, now mentioned, being at the hunting of a Boar, had been flain through a Whirlwind; which having pulled up a great Oak by the Roots, of prodigious Greatness, fell fo near this Prince, that he received some slight Hurt by a Branch of it.

I pray Heavens, that all the Wisdom of our Holy Prophet, and the Blessing of the Great God be always upon thee, and in thee, and ever augment thy Strength and good Fortune, to the Ruine of these Persian Hereticks, whose Country I hope will be subjected by thy Sword to our Dread Emperor.

Paris, 10th of the 4th Moon, of the Year 1639.

LETTER VIII.

To Breredin, Superiour of the Dervises, in the Convent of Cogni in Natolia:

Thou are happy in living long and holily too;
I cannot chuse but reflect with regret on thy great Age, considering how infirm I am. After Fisteen

Fifteen Days Illness, my Strength quite failed me, fo that necessitated I was to look out for a Physician; for I cannot eafily commit my felf to the Hands of those of this Countrey, who kill such as trust them, in the same manner as if they were their Enemies. When I discourse these Doctors about the State of my Health, they tell me I am in imminent Danger. and that my Cure is hazardous. In writing thus, think not I rave, for I speak the pure Truth. They will certainly kill me, should I discover to them under what Climat I was born; whereas if I tell them I am of Moldavia, they may chance to do me good; though that Countrey Air is very different from that of Arabia, where I first drew my Breath. To how many Miseries is the Life of Man subject. especially mine, when I cannot speak the Truth, though it be to fave my Life ? Pray for me, Holy Dervis; and if you hear no more from me, believe Mahmut is dead. Pardon likewise the Offences I have given thee, which yet have been against my Will. Adjeu; we shall see one another in God, with God, and in the Bolom of God,

Paris, 12th of the 5th Moon, of the Tear 1639.

LETTER IX.

To Ocumiche, bis Mother, at Scios.

Pardon me, my dear Mother, if I write last to thee: Pardon me, moreover, if I have not written to thee, to pay thee the Marks of my Duty, whilst I was in my Health; and let me seek after thee, when perhaps in seeking for me, thou wilt no longer find me. I am ready to die; afflict not thy felf, if God calls me to him; though I am amongst Infidels, yet Death holds his Empire here. as in other places. The worst News I can tell thee is, That commonly those who defire to live longest, are foonest taken away; and I am not ashamed to rell thee, I am one of that Number. I cannot willingly, as yet, leave this Lower World. O unhappy Life! O unwelcome Death! What Apprehensions have I not? And with what Terrors am I not ftruck, fince I have lived among the Christians? They preach against our Alcoran, and we declaim against their Gospel. They affirm that Mahomet was a great Impostor; and we worship him. They believe they only know the Truth, that they be the only Saints, the Elect and Chosen of Gods what then will become of us, if we be wedded to Errors, and our Alcoran be only a parcel of Lyes?

DOL

I have neither good nor bad News of thee, no more than of thy new Spoule : God grant the merry Greek thon art married to, have the Vices of thy first Husband, my Father. Thou knowest my meaning. He called himself Vicious, because he hated the Vertues of the Vulgar.

on solute offer aline I thank thee not for my Life; for that is what thou least thought of, when thou becamest big with me. But if thou expedeft some Recompence for fuckling me at thy own Breafts, expect only Words of Thanks from a poor Slave who possesses nothing. Love and Hate, all the Time of thy Life; this is the greatest inheritance can be expedied from a Son who is just a dying. Engrave these Words in thy Heert; Love ever what is bonest, and bate always what is contrary to it. Thus will these different Passions be setled on their Proper Objects.

If my Brother Peffeli be still alive, give him my Love with an innocent Kiss, and a Touch in the Hand. Our Great Prophet protect and fustain thy Age with the Staff of Mount Liben, and obtain for thee from the Mercy of the most High, That thou may it enjoy thy Senses to the last Hour of thy Life, Adien.

Paris, 12th of the 5th Moon,
of the 16ar 1639. or the sequence 20 121

if I die, next RET TER Tori final be

To Pestelihali, bis Brother.

D Elieving my Life is near its End, I therefore, D with alkimaginable Eagerness write to thee, in the third place, although indeed thou holdest the fuft in my Heart. We shall fee one another, dear Peffeli, in that World, where every one receives according to his Deferts. When I arrived in this great Town, I was aftonished at the Confusion I met there, but I received no other Hurt. Although the Weather be very inconstant, yet the Air is good, and Provisions are wholfome, and agreeable to the Tafte; the Water of the Seine is sweet and clear; the Men are good Company, and the Women have done me no harm; the King has not ill used me: Cardinal Richtien, his Chief Minister, does not hinder me from living after my own Fashion; our Great Emperor is not displeased with me, yet my Distemper is impernous; a sad Faintness has seized my Heart, and I begin to fall into fuch a languishing Condition, as makes me defpair of Health. If thou Hill conferveft any Affection for me, read this Letter with Compassion. Forget the ill Offices I may have done thee; and if I parted without discovering to thee the Occasion, give God Thanks for the Ability he has given me, of facrificing the tenderness which'I have for so good a Brother, to the

1

Obedience which I owe to the Emperor's Com-

Our Mother will salute thee as from me, in giving thee a Kis; receive it as coming from me. Keep thy Gravity, and be honest in Asia as well as Europe; and if thou goest to Africa, suffer not thy self to be corrupted by ill Examples. The not without Tears I write thee this Letter: but lament not if I die, neither rejoice if I escape; for I shall be thereby no less Mortal; and that Tribute which I do not pay to day, we both shall pay, with all other Men, on a certain time. Prepare to part willingly; study more how thou shalt die, than how thou shalt thue; and if thou would'st live till thou art Old, live as if thou were to die when thou art Toung.

The Great God preferve thee in the perfect Use of thy Understanding, and guide thee into all Truth; and if thou defirest to be the best Captain and Commander in the World, learn to conquer thy felf. Adien.

Paris, 12th of the 5th Moon, of the Year 1639.

LETTER XI.

To Dgnet Oglou-

Should I tell thee I am in Health, I shall write an Untruth; for I am really out of Order, and expect a Fit of Sickness, which I wish twere in my Power to avoid, though it, may prove short, and Mortal. An Hectick Fever puts me oft in mind, how frail and brittle a thing is Man; and that he ought in Multiplicity of Buliness, in Times of Prosperity

e d

iy

w

as well as Adverfity, to think of diflodging hence, The Bread I eat has no relish; Solitude appears dismal to me, and Company wearies me; for I cannot attend to what's discoursed, and yet I do nor like they fhould fay nothing; there's nothing pleases me but Drink, yet all the Sea will not quench my Thirst. I am reftless in Bed, and find my felf more tired thereby, than if I fat up; and that which I loved Yesterday, I hate to day. Thou knowest how I loved Books, this Humour is quite changed. If the Sun Thines into my Chamber, I as foon flut my Windows, being not able to endure it; and having remained a Minute in Obscurity, I am impatient for the Light. Paris, where one may fay Strangers come from all Parts, to fee the Varieties and Diversions there to be mer with. appears to me now an Hospital of Fools: I long for nothing more than Conftantinople, and to be with my Friends, imagining I shall find ease in their Company. And this is the unhappy Condition of thy Friend, without hope of feeing any more Turbans and Muffulmen. I loath as much the fight of an ignorant Physician, as the Emperor Severus did a corrupt Judge, and I look on a little Valer that serves me, as a necessary Evil: Yet I'd a little divert thee, maugre the Illness which has feized me. 'Tis not above Six Months fince I enterrained this Enemy in my House, which is a French Valet, who makes himfelf a Fool; of a Pigmies Stature, yet a Giant in Roguery; he is clad like the Graces, being half naked, and wears Buskins like the Poetical Divinities; his ordinary Function is to sweep every day my Chamber, which yer is as nafty as Augic his Stable; when I am awake he is affeep, and he's always awake when I am affeep; for this Thirteen Years that he has feen the Light, he cannot remember he has been. Two Hours without eating : When he cans not openly and before Folks, left he should shame me, he will ver be fure to keep his Chaps a going, on something in Corners. When I went abroad. I was forced to follow him seand now that I keep my Bed. 'ris hard to judge which of us two is the Mafters for he never pares with his Har from his Head. He's more ready to pull of my Cloaths, than to pur them on; which makes me chiefly careful of him at fuch times, that he leaves me not frank naked. He's moreover a Politician as much as pov Florentin: When he's to do any good Office, he falls incomhe Spanish Pace, but to perfect a bad one he's as nimble at Cafer was in the quickeft of his Expeditions whence in is that I am a Debtor to my own Arm and Hand for the Service I draw from him, being like certain Drugs which never yield an Odor till well beaten : as to his Religion, a Man would imagine he held the Metemplychofis, fo carefully does he preferve the Lice that ear him, left in killing them. he aft contrary co the Precepts of Pythagoras. He is moreover befides, an irreconcileable Enemy to all Neathers to Water and to Truth's and he is more ftinking than a Synagogue: drunker chan a Swife, and a greater Lyer than any Oracle. In the mean time my Illness encreases, and my Domestick Encmy it so well, that he affuredly waits my Death, to live more honourably on my Spoils. I differ much this Day from what I was Yefterday, and know not whether I shall not to morrow go to my long Home: Pray the Immortal for me, and remember we were once in Slavery together. Should I escape, I shall have the Joy of never seeing thee in the fad Condition I am; and if I cannot escape Death at this sime, I shall have the fatisfaction of fuffering ichlefore thes. Alowever: believe I do not delpair, chough I much complain. I ceafe writing to thee bus if it mever cente loving thee. Mahmut embraces three in this Goodery of Infidels, having having thee always in his Heart, and praying for thee continually.

Paris, 12th of the 4th Moon, of the Tear 1639.

LETTER XII

To the Kaimakam.

THE King of France has a Dwarf called Ofmin born in a Village of the Morea, and carried away in his Infancy into Italy by Pyrates. He was bought by a Spanish Lord, who afterwards made a Present of him to this King, with such a bosn Grace, as entitles Magnisseence to the smallest things, after the manner of that Nation. The Spaniard having presented his Dwarf, said so more, the Dwarf making this following Discourse.

W

d

ne of

lo

fe

é.

U,

ng

Sir, I am a Christian, although eny Parents be Turks, If thou willingly receiveft me for thy Slave, I receive thee yet more willingly for my Master, being a Just and Merciful Prince: But I am obliged to tell thee. Thou wilt behave thy felf like a Mafter, whose Liberality is guided by Frudence, thou will never do me any Hart, or ever do me any great Good. Should'ff thou give me Opportunities of acquiving Riches, and throw open the Gate of Honours to me; I hall thereby, perhaps, become vicious and infolent. Bestow only one thing on me, which will not be afterwards in the Power to take away: Give me good Education, and let a Man of Learning take the Charge of me ; by which means ! hall be revenged of Nature, in making me but in store of a Man; and perhaps make thy Courtiers; one day, repent of their prefent Laughter at me,

O/min

Osmin has behaved himself so well, and gained such Credit by the Subtilty of his Wit, and Readiness of his Answers, that he is, at present, one of the Courts choicest Entertainments, and the Scourge of debauched People, Coming one day to divert and comfort me in my Illness, he told me, That being in private Discourse with one of the Women belonging to a Lady of the first Rank; he was forced to conceal himself speedily behind the Hangings, to prevent being surprized in the Chamber, where this Lady unexpectedly entred with the Venetian Ambassador, who ordinarily resides in this Court, and where he heard the following Discourse from this

Minister's own Mouth :

Madam, I (hall willingly discover to you, now that we are alone, the Intentions of the Republick Iserve, touching the Turkish Affairs, provided you promise me to do me Two different good Turns. 'Tu absolutely neceffary, we make War with thefe Barbarians, before they declare it against us. The Octoman Family is like the Mathematical Compass, which enlarges its self the more 'tis pressed. You are not to be informed of the famous Victory gained by our General, Capello. who has led in Triumph, all the Gallies of Africk ; but though Amurach be employ'd on the Frontiers of Perfia, in the Siege of a most important Place, yet does be already threaten to be revenged for the Defeat of these Barbarians. The Ministers of the Port do also press bim to shew his Resentment; and we certainly know by secret Relations from the Turkish Camp, lying before Babylon, that the Grand Signior has faid in full Council. That he will bimself throw the first Fireball into our Arfenal. That, Madam, which lies in your Power, is, to perswade the King to engage in the Common Cause; and for this end, make up a Peace with his Enemies, that he may joyn his Naval Forces with ours. On the other Hand, we could wish you would offer the contrary to the Cardinal Richlieu; becaufe

1

canse this Minister usually slighting Womens Counsels, will come to our purpose, through his obstinate Hamour of contradicting you: And I do not doubt but this Artisce will succeed, if you persuade him, the King is residued not to give us any Assistance. There runs a Report, as if our Bailio has been laid hold on at Constantinople, and retained Prisoner in the Castle of Seven Towers, by the Order of the Kaimakan. And 'the added, That the Grand Signior offers a Peace to the Persians, to return speedily into Europe; that having no Diversion on that side, he may turn all his Forces against the Republick.

The Pope promises much, and we need not fear but he will keep his Word, being the Person most interessed in our Affairs. He will furnish Money, joyn bis Galleys to those of the Republick; and moreover, fend us feveral flout Men. The King of Spain promifes us Forty Galleys, with all Necessaries, together with Fifty Veffels of War. The Great Duke of Tuscany will affist us with Eight Veffels well fet out, and Six Gallers well anned. The King of Poland promises to fend into the Infidels Country, an Army of Fifty Tooufand Coffacks; and other shall cruise about the Levantine Seas with their Brigantines, and effectally the Archipelago. As to what respects the Republick, the chief Families in Venice have already proffered to fet out, and entertain at their own Charge, a Veffel, till the War be ended; and all the great Caffles and Towns on the firm Land, freely offer to furnish the Republick with Fifty Thousand Duckats a Month. Thu Kingdom Twhich is fo full of Meb, among it which there are fo many good Officers, which are tich in More, and at present so considerable at Sea) must not only not trouble so noble and necessary a Project, in continuing a War with Spain; but also gives irs Affistance, by Sufplies of Men, Money and Vessels. It you can, Madam, oblige the King to enter into this League, you will merit an Everlasting Remembrance, and have an Hundred ThouThousand Crowns, which lye ready for you at Venice,

to be paid when and where you please.

This is God's Caule, the Occasion is favourable, and all things seem in a readiness. You may immortalize your Name, and with your Beauty, your Credit and Eloquence give good Grounds of Hope to Christendom of Success, by obtaining the Assistance of the most puissant of the Christian Monarchs.

This is what the Dwarf heard, and what he enrrusted me with since; were I in a Condition, Illufirious Kaimakam, to relate particularly the Life of Osmin, I am perswaded thou would'st give intire

Credit to the Discourse he made me.

Osinin is born a Turk, he loves me dearly, and has a certain Sympathy with me; which obliges him to seek me often, and entrust me with all the Adventures of his Life, treating me not only as a Friend, but living with me, as if I were his Brother.

There being some days, since I larguished in Bed, tormented with a Distemper, which at its Beginning threatned me with vexatious Consequences, and which causes me to droop and languish; thou wilt pardon me, if I reason not much on an Adventure so extraordinary. Should God restore me to my Health, I shall double my Care and Diligence, in observing the Measures of this Court. Order by thy Prudence and Valour, that the Preparations of these Insides against the formidable Monarchy of the true Believers, may vanish into Smoak: And, the great Sovereign of the Lower and Upper World, grant thee perfect Health; which is sought in vain by his Highnesses Slave, and thy Servant, Mahmut.

but of Mir. Mine and be field. It you can a dam,

Paris, 12th of the 4th. Moon, Those has sittle of the Tear 1639.

01

he

VIE

as 0

n-d,

d,

n-

es,

OU

d

ne

by of

the

ld.

ain

. .

LETTER XIII.

To Ifouf his Kinfman.

Totwithstanding my Weakness, I force my self to write thee this Letter, to thee with whom I am engaged by Interest, as well as by Blood. My Distemper lies so heavy upon me, that there remains only the time to speak Two Words of Devotion to thee. Houf thou oughteft towards the End of the Mon in May, to go to Metha; carry me along with thee, though I am at this diftance. I entreac thee, when thou shalt arrive with the Caravan of Pilgrims, at the Mount of Arafat, to offer there a Sacrifice in my Name; immolate a Sheep in commemoration of Abraham: And, if thou arriveit in Health at the Holy Mosque, and in fuil strength, offer devoutly my Prayers to our Great Prophet. I ask not Honours of Mahomet, no more than Riches; I only beg, that Heaven would restore me what I have lost; 'tis Health I defire, whereby I may ferve our Great Emperor, and live more Holy than I have done. But before thy Departure, diffribute a good Dole to the Poor, and if thou wantest Money, go and find Dgnet Oglou; aborrow of him in my Name Seven hundred and fifty Aspers, which show shale immediately deal out to those that have most need.

Thou knowest how greatly the Works of Charity are recommended to us; they multiply the Benetions of Heaven, and encrease our Weath, I peither do nor can do this in the injust. Country, thou knowest my Inability; speedily succour me, in the Necessity I am of doing Good, and let mothing hinder thee, no Argument of good Hulbondry nor Superstition. If thou neglect my Prayer, the shame of the Fault will lie at thy Door; and thou alone shalt bear the Iniquity, if thou executeft not the Will of a dying Man, especially having the Power. I forgot what I had of greatest Importance to tell thee, and which is the most Holy, and aimed at to obtain with the greatest Earnestness. Endeavour to get for me a little Piece of the Cloth, wherewith the Temple of Mecha is every Year hung, and which the Pilgrims tear in pieces to have each of them a part; and fend, as foon as thou canft, this Holy Relick, in a little Silver Box, to Carcoa at Vienna, who will take care I receive it. If thou beeft a good Mussulman, give speedy Help to a Disciple of the same Law; and if thou beeft a real Kinfman, affift me, love me, and take on thee my Defence when necessary. I embrace thee with all my Heart, and Strength; and though I believe my felf very near Death, yet I wish thee along and happy Life.

Paris, 12th of the 4th Moon, of the Year 1639.

. VIX . A B T T B Le Poor! and

To the Invincible Vizir Azem, at Con-

If thou beeft the same that commanded the Army of the true Believers before Babylon, I write to thee without congratulating thy Resurrection. The People at Park, have kill'd thee by their Diffeoirs, because they wish'd thy Death, and his generally said thou wast strangled by Four Mares. But II write to another, railed to the chief Dignity of the Empire, I pray the Great God, who will one day

judge

17

e-

of

ne

ft

ce

is

in

as er.

eve

nd

nd

m-

nd

: 1

n.

ny

to

he.

es,

lly

he lay

judge all Men, that he will long continue thee in Amurath's Service, ever happy, and alway attended with Victory; and give thee better Fortune than all the other Victors, who have governed in the vast Empire of the Mussialmen.

I have been fick during the space of Eighteen Moons, and my health is not yet fully restored: I have lived all that time, in continual Expectation of Death, and so many odd things have hapned in my Sickness, that I should fall into it again, should sthou oblige me to make the Recital of them.

The Charity of the Christian Dervises has been very great towards me, having neglected nothing which might be any ways serviceable to my happy Departure. The gravest of them have often attended me with Discourses of the Immortality of the Soul, of Hell, their Purgarory, Paradile, and the Merits and Indulgences of the Church, Several Physicians have come to see me, and used their urmost Skill to keep me alive, and imagine I owe my Life to them; but if it be fo, they have paid themselves for their Care, by drawing so much Blood out of me, having, I think, quite emptied my Veins, to refift, said they, the several Diftempers which affaulted me, and to take from me the Turkish Fever which I nourished; for I assuredly brought it from Constantinople.

The greatest Sin I committed during the Course of so long a Sickness, was the pretending to confess my self to a Captain Dervis, as the Christians do in the Principal Feasts, and when they are ready to die. I used this Ceremony but once, and I do not think I have committed Sacrilege, for I have told no Truth; and if I may speak freely to thee, Invincible Vizir, hear what a pleasant Penance was enjoyned me, for an imaginary Crime of which I accused my self. I confessed I hindred, by an Apology I had made, a Mehometan from embracing

L

the

the Law of Jesus; and the Dervis faid to me in a Passion, Ton are not then a Catholick : I am, answered I, and only dissipaded this Barbarian on Account, I had observed it seldom bappened, That a Turk, who changed bis Law, came to a good End; and that those who ceased to be Muslulmen, seldom prove any others but bad Christians. Your Reasoning is also as false, replyed sharply the Monk, as the Defign you have had is bad; for you never ought to hinder any thing rebich is good, for the fear you may have that in the End it may cease to be so. And I enjoyn you for Pe-nance, to scrape out with such Exactness, all the Characters of your Apology, that there remain no Mark of it, so that the Paper become as clean, and fair, as if there had been nothing written on it, that so black and detestable a Discourse be entirely defaced by the Pains which you shall take to binder the remaining of any Trace or Mark: After which, you shall pray to God as long as you live, that he would destroy the Temple at Mecha, fo famous by the Impieties committed there, and enlighten the Eyes of the blind Mahometans. Bur I am constrained to stop here, being so seeble, and indisposed, that I have not the Strength to write that I am now recovering.

The Mars which has made Germany Tremble, I mean the Dake of Wimar, is in fine dead at 36 Kears of Age, and buried in the fame Field wherein he gathered his last Lawrels, that is to say, at Brizac. I shall distinctly inform the Kaimakam of whatever has hapned during my Sickness, that I may not give thee the Trouble to read the Relation of several Adventures, which have been already published in the World, whilst thou are employed in the great Assairs of the Empire. As soon as I amable, I shall, if possible, do with greater Diligence the Offices of my Place, and henceforward punctually advertise thee of the Cabals, Intrigues and Designs of the Nazarenes, that thou may st not be unprovided against all the Attempts of the Infidels.

or se - fift syde oude

ľ

y

I

d

t

Lentreat the Being of Beings to accompany thy Life with all the Happiness thou can'st defire on Earth; and that thou may'st never undertake any, thing for the Good of the Empire, and its Religion, without Success.

Paris, 15th of the 10th Moon, of the Year 1640.

LETTER XV.

To the Kaimakam.

Thoughtest I was dead. I have been so near the Grave, that I may have received four of thy Letters, without being able to read them; so far was I from the power of Answering them. I have been sick a whole Year and fix Months, out of the Commerce of the Living, and without receiving any Consolation from any one; abandoned to Physick, and become the Prey of the Physicians; and in shore, out of hope of ever recovering; but the Day wherein I am to be judged, is not yet come: I am in fine, still alive, and shall soon, I hope, be well again, if thou, to o'erwhelm me, chargest not my long Malady, as a Crime upon me, and suspected me nor guilty of Insidelity.

I have informed my felf, within these sew Days, of several events which have hapned during the Course of several Moons, which I shall relate to thee, if I can, in this Letter, to make amends for the time I have lost. But in so sew Words, as will oncasion thee to think I am still sick; for which thou must not blame me, seeing thou lovest

Brevity.

France, during the time I have not writ to thee, has given me Marks of its Power and Policy. Four places have been belieged in the Year 1620, whose Success have not been equal. The French have met with Disadvantage before Thionville, by the Valour and Conduct of Picolomini, one of the Emperor's Generals, who was boroin Italy, and brought up from a Child in the Trade of Arms. 'Pis faid, he has attack'd and varquish'd his Master's Enemies. with such speed, that one may compare his Action with that of Claudius Nero, when he defeated Afdrubal who had enter'd Italy: He has broken the Enemies Army, routed the Horfe, took the Cannon, kill'd the French General, and immediately rais'd the Siege; but in revenge, the same French, who were bewen before Thiomville, have made themfelves Mafters of Hedin, Salins, and Salfe; which last was taken by the Young Prince of Conde, who gives the Marks of an extraordinary Valour; but the Spaniards have re-taken thefe Places, which have coff them dear. 'Tis faid that the Governour left by the Prince of Conse there, being presi'd by the Spaniards to furrender the Place, threw out to 'em an hor White-Loaf, faying, That those who eat of this Bread, would not surrender themselves, before the Enemies came to the time wherein they might eat di foon, I hope, be Ice.

Yet the Place was furrender'd, before the Springtime was come to change the Face of the Earth; for far were they from holding out till it was cover'd with Snow or Ice.

This King immediately appealed the Insurrections which were made in Normandy. But what wile thou say of Casimir, the King of Poland's Brother, who being return'd a Second Time into France alone and difguis'd, was discovered and carried Prisoner to the Castle in the Wood of Vincennes near Paris,

where he is carefully guarded.

The War has been very cruel in Italy between the Three Parties, who are extreamly animated against one another. Prince Thomas of the House of Savoy, drove out by surprize the French from Turin; but thou wilt foon understand that our Capital Enemies the Spaniards, have been beaten and entirely defeated under Cazal, by the Count Harcourt, of the House of Lorrain.

The Spaniards and Durch have made a great Noise in the Ocean with their Fleets; the former came with Fourscore Vessels of War, to land Fifteen Thousand Men in Flanders; but having been mer by Van Tromp, a Commander of great Courage and Experience, there was a bloody Battel fought, which lasted long, but at length ended in the Defeat of the Spaniards.

The Dutch have taken Thirteen Ships, and about Twenty of them have been driven by the Weather on the Coasts of England, where they are loft, and Eight others have had the good Fortune to get into Dunkirk.

The Victory of the Dutch is compleat, having loft but one Ship in the whole Engagement, against so puissant an Enemy, and whose Subjects they were formerly.

Bear with me, Illustrious and Happy Kaimakan, wanting Strength to continue on writing, though it were the Victories of Amurath which I were to relate.

I shall make known to thee, on the first Opportunity, whatever shall come to my Knowledge In the mean time, the Creator of all things, direct thee in all thy Ways, and prosper all thy Undertakings.

Paris, 15th. of the 1cth. A. Don,

of the Tear 1640.

To Denet Oglou.

Am in a manner raised from the Dead, by reading thy Letter, there is not a Line or Syllable, but frews the Marks of a true Heart, and a tender and real Sympathy with my Condition: I pray Heaven, we may do nothing either of us to leffen

this Affection.

Thou informest me in thy Letter of the Departure of Ifouf for Mecha: I give thee a Thousand Thanks for the Money thou hast given him, for the offering of a Sacrifice in my Name on the Sacred Mountain, and to distribute here below the Alms which I enjoyned him. I admire thy Bounty, and the Charitable Care thou hast had of the Salvation of thy Friend Mahmut, in sending one of our Devotes to Medina, to go the Pilgrimage, and fay the Prayers for me. In a Word, I fee thy Kindness makes thee foresee and provide against all my Wants, there is no Place or Time, wherein I receive not Marks of thy Favour.

Seeing Iam so dear to thee, and loving thee so greatly as I do, let not distance of Place, Poverty, Difgrace, Imprisonment, or any other Misfortune, extinguish, or so much as damp our murual Af-fed on.

I have, in a manner, stole the time I write to thee: for I have nothing which is truly mine, and I make thee a Present of a thing which I owed the Kaimakam, for whom I ought to employ more time in writing. But let us lay afide all these troublesome Affairs, and entertain one another with an entire Confidence and Familiarity. Thou wantest not Wir, employ it in the Study of History, after sufficient

ficient Instruction in the Matters which concern Religion. If thou wilt be a Prince among other Men, separate thy felf from the Crowd / thy Application to good Authors; read much, and ver read little; read ever good Books, there being few of them, and thus thou wilt read much. If thou can'ff attain to the knowledge of whatever is known of Men, thou wilt be a kind of God amongst them; whereas thou wilt be of the Number of Beafts, if thou faileft of acquiring the Notices thou oughteft to have. I wish thou would'st mind more for thy Friends fake, what passes in the Seragito, in the Divan, and in the Prince's most secret Councils. to know what is faid there against me, and for me: Good and feafonable Advice does oftentimes hinder much Mischief, and does a great deal of good. Friendship makes those things which are otherwise hard, very easie: "He that is not ready (fays an " Holv Man amongst the Christians) to suffer all things, and to lofe all, and his very Will too. for the fake of him that he loves, deferves nor the Name of a Friend.

Let us ever forget the words Mine and Thine; Thy Good Fortune is mine, even as thy Difgraces are: If we thus establish our friendship, why may we not, though Modern Turks, compare our felves to those Ancient Greeks, who have given such glorious Marks to the World of their Friendship; Why may we not be the Imirators of Pelopidas and Epaminondas, who contracted fo ftrict an Union, that nothing could change it? Although we were not born the same Day, in the same Climate, and in the same Town as Polistratus and Hypoclides, who were born in the same House, at the same Hour, and lived always together, and fell fick at the fame Time, and loved equally; yet let us furpals them in Affection. Love we one another more than Thefeus and Pirithous; more than Damon and Pithios ;

d

e

c

e

e

30

ac.

Pithias; the former of which contracted in Arms, and the other in Studies, that strict Amity that has rendred them so recommendable to Posterity. If thou knowest any Secret whereby to restore my Appetite which I have lost, send it me. I am here Spectator of a Million of Mouths, who ear four times a Day, and consume 15000 Oxen every Week, and 15000 other Pieces of Animals, besides Mutton, Veal, Hogs, not to reckon all forts of Fowl, and Fruits produced by the Earth, and the Fishes from the Seas and Rivers.

I am forced to die with Hunger with my Meat in my Hands; and in a Town where there is an Abundance of all forts of things, I want all things. Bread, which is so pleasant to the Eye, and so savoury in the Taste, to all other People, is nausered by me. Wine only, because its forbidden by our Law, rejoices the fight of me, and stirs up a desire of drinking. Let me hear oft from thee; let thy Letters be instructive, and be levelled against my melancholy Temper. The God of Mahmur keep thee ever in Health, and make thee love me, as thou do'st, continually.

Piris, 15th of the 10th. Moon, of the Tear, 1640.

LETTER XVII.

To Adonai the Jew at Genoa.

Thou are as Lazy in Writing, as Inconsiderable in thy Judgment of Things. Thou hast written to the Grand Vizir, That this Republich is disposed to join its Forces to that of Venice, for its Assistance in the War against the Port; but what Ground Ground hast thou for this Advice? And if the Grand Vizir should oblige thee to give a Reason for this, how can'ft thou satisfie his Curiosity, and hinder him from accusing thee of great Lightness?

I now received a Copy of the Letter thou didft write to Constantinople, for which I thank thee: 'I would have been better I had received the Original; for I would not have fent it. There's no likelihood that a Republick, so desirous of establishing a Peace in her Dominions, will disturb her own Quiet, for the Service of a State, with which she is always at War.

Had the Genoeses any Cause of Complaint against Amurath, they would want neither Soldiers, nor Arms, nor Vessels, nor Money, to raise Enemies against him. But at present, whilst their Assairs are in a full Calm, both abroad and at home, they make (with greater Prudence that the Venetians) War in the Spanish Indies with their Registers, and Arithmetick; and they have always the Advantage in this kind of Combat, wherein there is no Example they ever lost: Let this Nation alone in Peace: Write rather to the Port, That the Genoeses, condemned by Nature to dwell in the Rocks and Desart Mountains, have found the means of making these the most delicious Abodes in Europe.

Tell the Grand Vizir, That so many extravagant Philosophers, who continually search for what they will never find, have at length shewed, That there is no other Place where are more perfect Chymiss to be found, having coverted into Gold almost all the Stones of the Country, changed the Horror of their Disarts into most pleasant Gardens; and the Cottages of the ancient Ligurians are transformed into Palaces, enriched with Marble and Porphyry, with so great Magnissience and Propriety, that no Houses are comparable to theirs. To which thou mayst add, That the Inheritance of the poorest

Genoefe,

Genoefe, does at this time much surpass those of their Predecessors. Shew him, they have begun to give considerable Succours to great and puissant Monarchs, by immense Sums; and that, in fine, in the Registers of particular Traders, one may see the Names of the greatest Monarchs on Eatth, to whom they are become Creditors.

Be more eareful of what thou writest for the fature; and when thou givest Advice, set down what thou knowest without Exaggeratings, and be reserved in what's doubtful: Never write Falsehoods in thy Dispatches. Be also never the Author of vulgar Rumours, and Stories made by People at leisure, who abound with Extravagancies. God help thy Understanding, and healthy Distempers, if thou hast any.

Paris, 10th of the 11th Moon,

LETTER XVIII.

To the Kaimakam.

THE Christians are become Magicians; or, to speak better, the Spaniards who make War in Piemont, have filed the World with Astonishment by an extraordinary and new Enchantment. I wrote to thee, there were two great Armies before Turin, one to take it, and the other to succourit; but I have not yet made known to thee, that the Cannon of the Spaniards are become Couriers, who carry their Dispatches in the Air, into the befieged Cities; and moreover, Ammunicion, Powder, Salt-Petre, and Money, a marvellous Invention, which fills me with Admiration in writing

ic. There is a Man in the Camp of General Leganer, who makes Brass Bullets so artificially, that having thor them into the Ditch of the Place, they have for a long time succoured the Besieged. Tis faid, that being made in a Vice, and hollowed within, they have served for Two Uses, to convey into Turin what was wanting, and to bring back into the Spaniards Camp the things they most needed. But this Industry proved in the end useless; for after several Conflicts, Turin has faln again into the Hands of King Lewis, who has therein re-established the Dutchels of Savoy, to the great Sacisfaction of her People, who have thereupon shewed the Signs of the greatest Joy. This Re-effablishment is owing to the Valour and Conduct of Count Harcourt, who has fuftained and repelled the Affaults of Two Armies, ftronger in Number than his own. This Captain has made his Name as famous in Italy, as were heretofore those of the Hero's of Rome and Athens. The Marquis of Leganez undertook the Siege of Cazal, an important Place belonging to the Duke of Mantoa, fituated on the famous River of Po in Italy. Count Harcourt not being able with all his Army to put Succours into the Place, he took the Parcy of forcing himself the Besieged, entring on Horseback into the Lines with his Sword in his Hand, where he was followed by some of his Gentlemen. The Spanjards being surpriz'd and aftonish'd, found no Safety but in Retreat, which they made difordedly; and the French, under such a Captain, bore away that day, the greatest and most glorious Victory they ever won in Italy.

If thou requirest an Account of me of what has past in Germany, I can tell thee, that the War has been carried on there this Year with equal Success and Losses to both Parties, to whom Fortune has been sometimes favourable, and other whiles contra-

But I am informed, there's a defign of making a great Affembly at Cologne, to re-establish a Peace between all the Christian Princes; and that the King of France has named for his Plenipotentiary there, the Cardinal Julius Mazarin, an Italian by Nation, a Man of great Parts and Experience in Business.

Prince Casimir is set at Liberty, at the Intreaty of the King of Poland his Brother, and has been since well received by the King, who made him dine at his Table, and presented him with a rich Diamond. The Town of Arras which the French have taken in the Spanish Netherlands, is of great Importance, and is a considerable Loss to the Catholick King, who will give great Reputation to his Enemies, that have taken the place in the fight of a great Army, commanded by the Cardinal Instant, Governour of the Low-Countries; which Conquest has mightily raised the French Courage, and enereased the Glory of their Prince.

The Queen is brought to Bed of a Second Son, who was born the 21st of September, and he is named the Duke of Anjou.

The Spaniards are as unfortunate on the Sea, as at Land. Their Fleet which returned from the West Indies, richly laden with Commodities of all sorts, have been most of them dispersed by the French Naval Army, commanded by the Duke of Breze. The Spaniards truly fought with much Valour, but Fifteen Thousand of their Men were slain, and Two Hundred taken Prisoners, together with Five great Vessels richly laden. One of their great Gallions was burnt, and it is said, the other Ships were saved, having first thrown the best part of their Lading overboard, which they had brought with such great Care and Pains from the other world.

That which has past on the Ocean, has not hindred the Archbithop of Bourdeaux from shewing the Strength of the King his Master on the Mediterranean; where he has sought an Occasion of fighting the Spaniards with a lighter Army, confisting for the most part of Galleys. He had sent a Defiance to the Duke de Ferrandine, General of the Spanish Galleys; who being unwilling to accept of the Challenge, this Prelate advanced towards the Coast of Naples; where he did some Mischief.

One may say, that the Missortunes of Philip King of Spain, are as great this Year, as is Power is. But it is faid, these Losses are not comparable to what he is threatned with, if Portugal and Catalonia shake off the Yoke of his Domination, as the common report runs.

I have heard much talk in general, on these confiderable Affairs, without being however informed of any certain Particulars. But henceforward, when I shall be able to leave my Chamber, to go into the Churches, Walks, and Gardens about the City and the Court, I shall let nothing pass without a strict Enquiry, and give a faithful Account of whatever deserves thy Notice; and should'st thou desire any particular thing of thy Slave Mahmut, 'tis but mentioning it, and thou shale not want an exact and humble Answer.

Is makes me tremble in teiling thee, that a Report runs here, of the Death of the Invincible Prop of the World, the Mighty of Mighties; in fine, of the Glorious Amurath. 'Tis false News, I hope, yet however afferted with great Confidence. The Arbiter of Heaven and Earth confound all our Enemies, and give the Grand Signior, and thy self, a Life which knows no end, and attended with a Happiness which cannot be encreased.

Paris, 7th of the last Moon, * of the Tear 1640.

LETTER XIX.

To Dgnet Oglou.

THE Lovely Greek, after whom thou enquireft fo earneftly, is long fince recired into France, and has been married Eighty Moons to a great French Merchant, with whom I am not acquainted, but am informed is very Rich, and Fortunate in his Dealings: but infinitely more Fortunate, in being the Husband of Daria Lena Maani, by whom he has several fine Children.

This charming Greek does now profess the Roman Religion, which is the only Fault I find in her. I never knew Woman, whole whole Carriage is fo graceful, who does all things with fuch a careless Exactness, and whose Vertue is less morose, Meer Shance brought me acquainted with her; whom [be fooner faw, bur was firnck with Admiration. Site came to Paris the lafe Year, to follicie a Law-Suit against a Stranger about an Estate. It was at Court, and in the Prefence of the King himfelf. that I first saw Daria: She spake to him so sweetly, that the foon obtained what the defired; and acthe fame inftance I felt fuch inexpreffible Paffions and Longings after her Acquaintence Suffer me, my dear Dgnet, so sell thee, That never any Creasure made fuch deep Impressions in the Heart of a Man, as this charming Greek did in mine.

I drew near to her as soon as I could i I spake to her in her own Language, telling her, I was an Arabian; and she answered me with as great Modesty as Benigoicy. I went the day following to give her Visit in her own Lodgings; where this adorable Person received me with the greatest Civility, not forbidding me a Return; being pleafed

fed perhaps to meet with one that could speak her own Language, which is very rare in these Parts.

Since then, I could not for my Life forget her; I have served her with the greatest Diligence, and so doted on her, that I forgor my self and thee, and if I may dare to say so, the Grand Signior too. Pardon this Insidelity on the account of a Passion, which knows no Moderation, being not able to withstand the Force of so invincible an Enemy.

Daria is young, of a generous Temper, and in whose wbole Deportment, there's no Grace wanting. Her Vertue is far above Lucreria's for this Roman Lady killed her felf, having first endured the Violences of a Tyrant; whereas the would die before the would come to fuch a Tryal. If you have feen her at Conftantinople, you must have known her Perfections: It for my part, who only knew her at Pariso have remark'd four Beauties in her Person which I believe is nor to be found in any of thole Ladies kept in the Sevantion Her Eyes, her Mouth, her Teerho and her Hands, feem to have been made only to furnish the God of Love with Darts. She is fure to fir ike where the will with her fine black Eyes full of Fire: and the lias also the Secret of healing the Wounds flie makes, when the pleafes. As foon as even the opens her Mouth, the three Graces are feen to the foorning in her Countenance; and her Body is moreover for proportion d in all its Paris, that had the lived in the time of Phidias, he had certainly taken her for the Model of his Venus, which was the Admiration of all the Worldn and sold a rabios of

I have plyed this fair Greek with Vifits, loved her even to Idolamy; my Refpect has been ever equal to her Virtue; and the greatest Favour I obtained from her, was to suffer me thus to speak to her; I love you, Daria; Daria, I adore you; but she would

would never suffer the least Expression which might make her understand any thing elfe.

This Incomparable Beauty often faid to me, Mahmut, I have a great Respect for thee, because thou art Discreet and Vertuous, and should also love thee wert thou not a Man. Live on still as thou hast done, and theu wilt thereby oblige me to respect thee yet more; but think not to obtain from Daria any more than an innocent Affection; I owe all to my Husband, and I will never be unfaithful to him. If I ever attempted to snatch any small Favour, it was always in vain, having ever repelled me in such a manner, as made me lose all Hope, and at the same time feel a new increase of Passion. Consider, dear Oglou, what past then in my Heart, and what a War I was to sustain.

In my great Inquietudes, and sharpest and cruelleft Pains, Philosophy supplied me with no other Remedies but Patience; the fet before me the Examples of the Esteem which the Ancients had for Pudicity; but the hindred me not from allo remembring that we find in Hiftory almost all the Philosophers more transported with Venereal Pleafures, than retained by the Precepts of Wildom: Diogenes and Ariffotle, became they not Fools hereby ; And Seneca, whose Morals are the Rules of the Wifest, was not he driven out of Rome for his Adulteries? I tell thee plainly, the Precepts of Philosophy have influenced me not a whit; I derided them, and was refolved to love on, and that more excellively than all the Philosophers together. Daria's fost Severity has laid on me stronger Laws than all the Dogms of the Stoicks; fo that nothing can make me change my Resolution of loving her eternally. If it be true that Love is a Weakness, only Men, who are noble Creatures, are thereunto fubject; it being certain, that mean Souls cannot love, because they have no Heart : Natures Original

.3

9 20 -9

20

. .

nal is far higher than Reasons; One is the Work of God, whereas the other comes from Man. Be not then astonish, if Reason does so oft yield to Nature.

Daria had a mind to learn Italian, which the thought a better Language than others. I taught her a great deal of it in a little time; but bufiness quickly deprived an unhappy Master of the most perfect of Scholars. She faid once to me. Mahmut. ler us have a perperual Amicy for one another but let us love and efteem Vertue far before Friendship. Teach me Hiftory and Geography, to the end that knowing Kingdoms, Towns, and Provinces, and those that govern them, I may know into how many Paris, this Earth which appears to admirable, is divided; I may now learn the Forces, Methods of Government, Manners, Religions of Nations, the Difference of Seas and of Mountains, of Lakes and Rivers, of inhabited Places, Islands and Defarts chat I may not confound the Barbarous with the civilized Nations, and Republicks with Monarchies. Fyrantal & main van orland ampridadel to calling

My worthy Friend, fo noble an Inclination joined with a fingular Grace, and attended with fo many rare Qualities, as well Spiritual as Corporal, - have reduced the poor Mahmur to a Slavery, more rigorous than that which he suffered with thee in Sidly. How many nights have I paft in horrible Reftlefres; and how many times have I vainly believed I was with David, whom I fought in my Chamber; when Sleep succeeding long Watchings, prepresented her to me in a Dream more complaiofantithan ordinary of na Word, Daris to filled my Thoughts, that Torgor my Books, and avoiding stafferthe Company of my Priends; the alore was my daily Study, and Frenbutteed all other Divertilements & the finest Ladies were nauleous to me ; The finest Gardens seemed horrible Forests which Horofcope ;

15

g

5, 0

ot

1

ferve for a Retreat to Savage Beafts. In fine, my Passion (Friend Oglow) comes to that Excels, that I can find no Remedy. My Tears were of none effect to foscen Daria, and I have cast my felf a Thousand times in vain at her Feen; all my Cares and Respects have served only to give me Proofs of her Virtue. Receive as thou ougheeft the Confidence I put in thee, and if thou haft not an Heart that can love to ardently, at least have some Complacency towards a Man whole Passion has no bounds, and reproach me nor with having had too much Weakness for having been vanquishe by a Woman. 'Jis Women that have always won the greatest Victories; it is their Trade to conquer, and even those too who subdue all things. It is impossible for me to comprehend, how I could love fo ftrongly without dying; neither can I imagine how I shall live if I be long deprived of the Sight of ber I love. Duria has left Paris, and is diffant thence above Three hundred Miles; confider then the condition it am in, I reckon my felf in a folitary Place, although there be above a Million of Inhabitants in the Town where I dwell. I flir not out of my Chamber; and as to my Books, they will yield me no Comfort. My only Care is to nourish my Distemper; whereby I flusty to make my felf more miferable, because it is not in my Power, for much as to feek the way to the only Happinels I with for. Mahmut may be faid to be the Son of Sorrow tomy Beard is naity and overgrown ; Lam out of love with my felf, comfortless, avoiding all Society, and am become invisible to all People I have no hope amongst to many Gaules of Despein , but the Affurance which Davishes given me, that I poles a place in ber Heart , and I believe it because the fays to. Heaven has given her a frankand genergus Soul, and promites her great things in the course of her Life. I have fenterly drawn her Horolcope;

Horoscope; as far as I could find, all the Planets are favourable to her; she is to live a great while; Fortune will second her Intentions; she will enjoy an uninterrupted Health; and this lovely Person will ever gain the Advantage on all that shall oppose her. Happy is he that shall be of the number of her Friends, but more happy is he that shall be beloved of her, for he may assure himself of being beloved of the handsomest and most deserving Lady in the World.

Read my Follies with some Indulgence, and be not angry with me when thou knowest I was ready to renounce my Religion for that of Daria's ; The began to convince me, and I began to believe, that the Religion of the most perfect and most vertuous of Women was the best. If thou hast Interest enough in the Grand Vizir, or the Kaimakam, obrain for me the Permission of leaving Paris for Six Moons only, but by no means let them know the Occasion. I love much, absent from Daria; but it feems to me I do not yet love enough : I would have more violent Transports, during her absence, than those I suffer whilft I see her; to the end I may fay, that all times, and in all places, never any body loved to much. I have discovered to thee my whole Heart; excuse my Passion, if thou wilt not excuse thy Friend so horridly tormented with it; and remember what the beautiful Roxalana faid to the Great Solyman: That the Pleasure of Commanding, and making one's felf Obeyed, is to rechoned but in the Second Rank of Pleasures; whereas that of loving. and being beloved, is the fift.

Henry IV. was one of the greatest Rings of Frances than whom no Man ever more greatly loved. When he reproached the Duke de Biron with the love he had for a Lady, mark what this Caviller told him; Great King, bow is it possible thou shouldest not be industrated to Lovers, who hast so often

e

e

n

h

e

1-10

n-

e-

to

or.

By

ve

nd

pe

he

of-nic

ge-

her be faid when thou wast in-love, thou forgettest thy self, thy Kingdom and Subjects? And this, dear Oglou, is what has hapned to me at Paris, with this admirable Person whom thou could'st no longer find at Constantinople. But alas, I should be an unhappy Friend, if with such a Love as mine I should prove thy Rival. I will not imagine it; yet I must tell thee, that rather than yield thee Daria, I will sacrifice to thee all the time I have to live. I have given my Picture to this Charming Greek, who has received it very courteously, yet rather as the Work of an excellent Painter, than the Picture of a Lover.

But being full of Goodness, and perfectly Discreet, the faid thus to me, when I gave it her: Mahmut, thank Heaven thou art not Handsome; such fort of Men bave not ordinarily all the Success they pretend to in their Amours. Wife Ladies think thefe kind of People doat too much on themselves, and those that are disdainful, find them not submissive enough and respectful; and such as fear evil Tongues, dare not look on them; and also these Gentlemen imagine -Ladies Favours are granted them, because they cannot withfland them, and they expell oftentimes to be entreated to receive them : Whereas those to whom Nature has not been fo liberal of her Favours do more than bare love; they adore their Miftreffer, they are always humble, and know how to gain the chyeft Beauty by their Respectfulness. As to the part, who are none of the fairest, thou wilt be happy, if thou changeft not thy manner of living with me.

It is impossible for me to fay, whether Daria has any considerable imperfections, being too greatly preposselled by my Passon, to discover Defects in a Person whom I regard as an angel. Time and her Promises, will one day shew me, whether she has the Vices usual to those of her Nation, which are commonly an insidenty, covered over with the most specious Pretences, and a

However, fend me a Gask of the white Balm of Mecha, and of the best Sort for Scent thou can'ff get; and at the same time, send me also some of that precious Eastern Wood, whose Scent is admirable to personne the Body. I have promised the fair Duria this Present, set me soon have it, so the end I may accustom Daria to the Neatness and Delicacies of the Mahometans. Preserve also thy Health; and if thou enviest me, love as much as I do; but love with Continency, if thou wilt love long, and be long beloved.

The Great God preserve thee from loving however lo excessively as thy Friend Mahmut does; the Dolors being therein always certain, and the Francion uncertain.

c

,

e

ne

ot

1-

re

14

00

2-1

e,

er

ed

Peris, 10th of the 1st Moon,

and a modern to the state of th

out To the Invincible Vizir Azem.

THE chiaus arrived here this same Mon in which I write to thee, and is in perfect Health, with all his Attendants.

The not tell thee in what manner he was received by the People at Park, it being of finall importance; feeing they have no other part in the Government of the Kingdom, than that of Obeying.

The Populacy curiously observed his Habit, his Beard, and his Gate, all as extraordinary. Tis certain (Invincible Leader of his Armies, in whom God has placed his Authority of governing the Earth,) our Envoys are not effected where ever they come, unless amongst the most Rational and Honest part of Mankind; which are always the least Number.

Not only the Common Sort run to fee our Amballadors, for the Veftments they wear, to which their Eves are not accustomed; but, even confiderable Perfors have the fame Gurioficy. Some filently approve, others lift up their Hands, to note their Aftonifament; and others, by an infolent Murmur, discover their Contempt, not understanding the Justice due to Strangers, whose Manners and Fashions ought never to be blamed; it being impossible, but whole Nations must have good Reafons for their Customs and Practices fince fo many Ages.

But he was not thus received at Court, where the King and his Ministers do all things with great Prodence: being respected as a Man that brought good News, and fent by the Greatest and most Puissane Emperor in the World. As to the Subject of his coming, every body speaks diversly. The Ministers of Foreign Princes are fearful, left the New Sultan should attempt the entire Ruine of Christendom, and prove more terrible than Amurath. In the mean time, this Heathenish People shew Incredible Joy at the burning of the Imperial City of Constantimple. Bur, the King has no part in the Sentiments of his Subjects.

Many fay, That the King of Red Hoods will renew the Wer with the Empire, and is perswaded to this by the Great Megoh; and there are fome who affirm he has already laid Siege 40 Babylon, But those who speak with more Sense, and less Hatred, affirm, That all the Port's Enemies are like Reeds exposed to the Wind, which will be easily everthrown, if the French take not park with them;

and it is the Folly of this Nation, (who believes her felf superiour to all others, and the Arbiter of the World) to think too well of it self, because she is respected as a Friend to the faithful Mussulmans.

The Jews (Invincible Vizir, Principal Minister of the Empire, favoured of God) are the cursed of Race of all Nations; the Christians accused them of having set Constantinople on Fire; and greatly praise the Greeks for quenching it, to which, say they, they have no less contributed by their Hands, than by the Fervency of their Prayers; and that Heaven has preserved it from a total Ruin, because of the Sacred Relicks of so many Christians, whose Bodies lie buried in our Mosques.

The News which come from Foreign Countries, does every day denote the Diforder there is in all Parts; there being nothing heard from the fide of Spain, but Secret Conspiracies, and Publick Revolts.

The People of Catalonia are in a continual Commotion, and so irritated, that they give no farther Quarter to the Spaniards. And, from Postugal, there comes more furprizing News.

London is as full of Disquier, new Pareies every day forming themselves against their Sovereign Charles, Master of those Three so famous Islands; whence it appears, that the God of the Nazarenes, is angry with these unbelieving People.

I shall not fail to inform thee in due time, of such Events as deserve thy Knowledge. For if things do not soon change their Posture, these Countries, forfaken of Heaven, (seeing the true Law, established by our Prophet, is not received here,) will soon change their Masters, their Manners, and Religion.

I adore with the profoundest Humility, and with my Head lying at thy invincible Feet, the Authority which the Sultan has intrusted thee with;

M 2

and which thou deservest, as well for thy Faithfulness, as the greatness of thy Actions.

Paris, 20th of the 1st Moon, of the Year 1641.

LETTER XXI.

To Cara Haly the Physician at Constantinople.

OInce I received thy Letter, and the Marks of thy Remembrance, I imagine my felf much better. I make Two Meals a Day, I walk about in the Morning, my Appetite increases, I have no more of thole nauseous Belches, I can read longer, and I fleep a nights more foundly: Yet I cannot fay I am in perfect Health; fo long an Illness has deprived me of that which I do not find return. There's wanting to my Intellectual Faculties a certain kind of Vivacity, and Readiness, in their Operations, which is extreamly abated; but I know not whether this be an Effect of the Pain I fuffered, or whether it comes not from Nature weakned; as fast as our Life advances to throw it felf, as it were, into the Arms of Death, which is what is most certain for me. I would willingly entertain thee on the Condition wherein I find my felf, could I overcome the Weakness of my Disposition, and the Coldness of the Seafon, which pierces me, maugre all my care to prevent it in this ley Climate. The lak I write with freezes on my Pen, and a Body may fay, the Fire freezes too, wanting, as it does, its usual activity, the Cold being fo sharp, that it extinguishes the Natural Heat. The City where I dwell, appears on a fudden transformed into Chrystal : the Northern Wind Wind has in one night frozen the River; and all the Fountains, which were wont to quench the Thirst of a Million of People, are dried up. All Trade feems to have ceased; the Rich are retired to their Fires, and the Poor are creeping about the Streets; where, notwithstanding the Exercises they ale to oppose the Cold, they seem already starved. The Bread is become like Marble, or an hard Stone; all things are frozen, and ancient People affirm, never the like has happened in their Days, or in the Times of their Fathers. There has been found fome few Miles from Paris; in the great Road, Two Men clad in very course Stuff, without Shifts, their Legs naked. Heads shaved, and Cords about their middle, dead with Cold. They were found embracing one another, thinking thereby to communicate mutual Heat, to keep off, or at least retard their Deaths. These People are Dervises of the Latin Church, which are called Capucins; whose Life is a continual Penance. They rife in the Night to their Devotions, and spend their time in Contemplation. They live upon Alms which they receive of the Christians, which confift of Bread, Roots, and Herbs; and if the Charity of these Nazarenes extends to the giving any thing more, they use it with Sobriety. They fleep on Straw, and are obliged to wear the Habit Night and Day, which is dreadful to look on, and in which they are buried when they die. When their Occasions require them to travel, they are not permirred to go on Horseback, in a Coach or Chair, but only in Vessels when they go by Sea, or on Rivers; so that they have only that granted them, which Cato was so afraid of, and every body else, but Fools; which is, To Travel by Water.

r-

of

I

n

d

d

15 0

7

1-

e

h

,

In fine, their Life is accounted a continual Hell; and they will be finely choused, if they find not a

M 2

Heaven, when ftripp'd of their Mortafity.

These Religious are under the direction of one General; observe a long Silence, which is a great Vertue among them; and with this are so exactly obedient to their Head, that they have no Will left.

They have very obscure Prisons under Ground, wherein they thrust those who scandalize their order by their Crimes : For notwithstanding the Holiness of their Rule, and the Vigilancy of their Superiours, to make it observed; there's never wanting some who wander from the right way, and often make use of the Esteem which Men have of their Piety, to commit such Enormities as would be foundly punished by the Men of the World. These kind of Dervises, cannot handle Mony without being guilty of a mortal Sin. Notwithstanding this Profession of Poverty, I have feen these Derviles dreft up with greater Magnificence than our Mufti, in the time when they celebrate their Maffes, ascending up to the Great Altar, covered with the finest Linnen, and thereon Vests embroidered with Gold, the most delicately wrought as can be imagined, and oft enriched with Pearls and precious Stones. In their Sacrifice they eat the confecrated Bread, which they call the Messias bis Body; which they are wont to place on a Plate of fine Gold; and they also put into Cups of the same Metal a Liquor, which they fay is changed into the Blood of their God, as the Bread into the Body, as foon as they have pronounced certain Words, which they fecretly mutter.

The Sacrifice is offered every day, and not only the People are present at it, but the greatest of the Kingdom, with their Monarch on his Knees, and in a supplicating posture. There stand about the Altar several stately Candlesticks, wherein burn white Wax Candles, which renders the Sacrifice ftill more folemn.

I relate to thee what I have often feen ; for I chuse to be frequently in these Infidels Churches, and at their folemn Festivals, the better to conceal who I am.

Yet happy is he that lives fatisfied with himfelf. affured he ferves God in the manner he will be ferved. Thou haft this good Fortune, and that of being in thine House at thine Ease; when thou goest out, thou wearest a long Vest down to thy Heels, lined with foft and warm Furrs, whil'ft I am obliged to cover my felf barely with a black short Cloak, which scarcely reaches below my Knees, and is roo thin to refult the piercing Northern Blafts; and is, in cruch, a very ridiculous Habit; yer which I am obliged to wear, for the service of him whose Slave I am, which cannot cover my Bandy-Legs, and Ill-shap'd Body. I expect, with great impatience, the Seafon which o'erforeads the Gardens with Flowers, the Fields with Grafs, and crowns the Trees with Bloffoms, and brings back the pretry Birds, who publish the joyful News of the Spring's approach; that being the Time wherein I may expect my Health.

As to what remains, thou wile oblige me in making Trial of my Friendship, that thou may'ft know, there's not in all the Empire of the true Believers, a more faithful Friend, and one that loves thee more while ferry lane had a flag and were quartered in the W. sooch And exputity, has he long con-cordially. Adieu.

tralega

Paris, 10th of the 2d Moon, 100 311 rachest under her Domin of the Tear 1641.

Caled Found I State of French State

LETTER XXII.

Manual day To the Kaimakam. vqqud 19 1.

THE Court of France is an Assembly of Politicians, who discover or hide themselves according to their Interests; and are more wont to hold their peace, than to talk. They explain themselves in more than one manner, on the things which they cannot conceal; and, I draw from them what is necessary for my Instruction, and thy Information. There have happened such sudden and surprizing Motions in Spain, as cause considerable Advantages to be hoped for by France, which seems to have had a great hand in them, on which thou may'st make what Reslections thou thinkest convenient.

The Mountains which divide France from Spain, are called the Pirenees. Catalonia is a Province watered on one hand by the Mediterranean Sea, and bounded by Navarr; it lies fituated at the Foot of these Mountains: The People have taken up Arms, and vigorously opposed the Catbolick King's Ministers; and the Portugueses have done the same thing, but with different Success. This Kingdom is comprised within the States of Spain, and the richest under her Dominion. Her Situation is advantageous, lying between Galicia and Castile, and watered with the Ocean, which brings her immense Riches.

The Principal Town of Catalonia, is Barcelona; and Lisbon is the Chief Town of Portugal. The first has taken for the precence of its Insurrection, The Insolencies committed by the Protestant Troops, which served the Catholick King, and were quartered in this Province. And the other, having long concealed

cealed its Design, thas at length shaken off the Spanish Yoke; and see up a King of their own Royal Race.

'Tis said, That Count Olivarez, the King of Spain's Chief Minister and Favourite, designing to mortisse the Catalonians, horribly charged that Country with Soldiers, and sent thither the most licentious Troops to Quarter; imagining to chassise the Pride of this People in this manner, withour any Form of Process.

This Minister's Design has had so far its End, the Province being full of Divisions and Slaughters, there wanting nothing to compleat their Miseries. The Soldiers exercise unheard of Cruelties, they shed indifferently the Blood of Infants, Old Men, and Women; overthrowing Altars, and ruining Temples. The most couragious Peasants gather together to repel Force with Force, and revenge themselves most cruelly on as many of the Castilians as they can light of, without sparing the King's Ministers; killing all they meet, seeking those who are hid, to punish them with the greatest rigour, running after those who seek their Safety by flight, not pardoning the very Priests, if never so little suspected.

The Count of St. Colomme, commanded not long fince in Catalonia, with the Title of Vice-Roy; which poor Man is now before God, where he receives the Recompences or Chastisements he has deserved, being the first Victim sacrificed to the Peasants Fury. His Blood was the Prologue of a dismal Tragedy, which will not end without more dismal Events to the Spanish Monarchy, and the Catalonians themselves.

The Vice-Roy withdrew himself into the Arsenal of Barcellona at the first Insurrection of the Peasants, where he was besieged by a great Multitude of these Seditious People; and seeing he could not make these Seditions People; and seeing he could not make these Seditions People in the second necessary in the second n

Femain there in Safety, he went out to go on board the Gallies ; but the Grossness of his Body hindring him from haftning as faft as those who accompanied him in his Flight, he remained alone; and being rired fell into a Swoon, and lay dead for some time on the Sand between the Rocks which lie upon the Sea. His Servant, the only one that remained with him, brought him again to himfelf by cafting the Sea-Water on his Face; but he opened his eyes, only to see his own departure more nearly. was fee upon in this Condition, wherein he could not flir himfelf, by a crew of Blood hounds, who first shot at him, and then hack'd him in pieces, having first stabb'd him in a Thousand places. His Servant defended him as well as he could, in covering him with his Body, but his Zeal was fruitless and all the Wounds he received, saved not one from his Master. He was an African, and had been his Slave. The Courage and Fidelity of a Man of To mean a Birth, deserves, at least, that it should be faid of him, That he died in imitating the Vertues of those Ancient Romans, which are at this day praifed and admired by all the World.

The Vice-Roy's Death stope not the Peasants; they proceeded to excesses scarcely imaginable; and their Barbarity made them commit such horrible, rogether with such ridiculous Actions, as can hardly be expres'd.

These Wretches went to the Palace of the Marquis de Ville Franche, General of the Gallies; where having out the Throats of as many as they met with, they burne and barrered all the Houshold-Stuff, and carried in Procession on the top of a Pike, a little Brass-Figure, which they thought a black Angel; which Figure was only that of a Man, wherein a Clock was included, whose ingenious Springs made him move his Eyes; which Sight so surprized these Peasants, who had never seen

h

d

b

5

Ú.

d

feen or heard of fuch a Machine, that they remained in fuch a Scupidity, as recarded for some time the Effects of chele Fury. But there was one more shold than the reft, who approaching to the Piece, cried one. Twas the Familiar Spirit of the Marquis de Ville Franche, and ought to be seized on. and thrown into Prilon, to take away its Power. Which he had no fooner faid, but laid Hands on and ried and bound it fast on the top of a Spear, and with great Shours, walked it about the Town. The ignorant People, capable of any ridiculous Imprefions, as well as the Women, who are not hard to be deluded, followed them, convinced that the Marquis's Devil was carried triumphantly along the Streets. Having ran through all the Town of Barcellona, this Rabble gave the Clock into the Hands of the Bilhop and Inquifitors to exorcife it, and drive out the Devil, whom they thought capable of destroying their whole Province.

Affairs are carried on more feriously in Portugal, at a more moderate rate; the Inhabitants of Lisbon, as well as the Nobility, have treated the Caftilians with more Humanity: They immediately elected a King, who reigns peaceably, as Heir of the Crown, and thereby alcertain'd of being maintained by the Affection and Fidelity of the People. There is already News of his Coronation; the Ceremony of which was performed with great Pomp and Magnificence. The People, as a Mark of their Affection, have presented a Million of Gold to their new Lord; the Clergy Sixty Thousand Crowns, and the Nobility Four Hundred; and the new King has taken on him the Name of John IV. King of Porrugal, instead of that of Don John, Duke de Braganza.

Never any Plot better succeeded: The Portugueses have driven out from them a puissant and politick

thiggolds

politick Nation without Blood-shed, saving that of a Villain; but of that thou shalt hear more the next opportunity; for I shall carefully inform my self of the Particulars of so extraordinary an Event, to give an exact Account to the Virin. Tis said, King Philip is the most unfortunate Prince that ever ascended the Throne, committing his Affairs to the Management of another; so that it may be said, the Duke who reigns as Sovereign in Madrid, has chosen Philip IV, for his Favourite. The Minister Commands, and the King Obeys; the Masser's Weakness authorizes the Servant's Power; the Consusting of that Nation being so great, that those made by Heaven to receive Orders, are the only Persons who give them.

I kis the Hem of thy Garment, with all the Submission possible to a poor and humble Slave.

Paris, 10th of the 2d. Moon, of the Year 1642.

1511161

LETTER XXIII.

To Dgner Oglou.

To what purpose do'st thou bewail the Ruines which the Fire has caused in Constantinople, if there be no Remedy for the Losses thou hast suffered? Not all the Vizirs together, nor the Prince himself, whose Authority knows no bounds, could resist the Fury of this Element. What then can we do, Wretches as we are, liable to all Injuries and Disgraces? Are thou the first honest Man that has been ruined? 'Tis true, Heaven had entiched thee; thy Chambers were hung with the finest finest Persian Tapestry; thou hast a great number of Slaves, fine Gardens, and Bathing places, befet with delicate Fountains; must thou despair for the Loss of the greatest part of these? Comfort thy self, seeing thou are not in a Fault; nor hast contribared to thine own Misfortune.

Thou tellest me, that the burning of the Chief City of the Universe, has deprived thee in one day of all the Commodities and Conveniencies thou hast laboured for many Years: And, I answer thee, That he which gave thee these Goods, expects Thanks from thee, in that having enriched thee with what thou had it not, he did not take from thee thy Life at the same time.

Hast thou so soon forgotten Seneca's Demetrius? Hast thou lost any thing, which thou did'st not receive from the Liberality of Fortune? And, if whatever thou had'st was given thee, wherefore do'st thou afflist thy self, as if thou could'st not obtain again as much? Stretch out thy Hand towards Heaven; pray and besech? He that has given thee once, is not impoverished by the Liberalities he has shewed; but, rather ask of him Spiritual, than these Temporal Gifts, which do all wither and die.

If thou livest, thou wilt see thy self in the same Condition again; I cannot give thee a better Consolation, I will not lament with thee, it seeming to me a fruitless thing. If thou beest defirous to forget the Loss thou hast suffered, consider the great Damages the same Fire has caused to so many Believers, in the same City where thou bewailest thy Missortunes. How many People that had less than thee, have soft more? And, how many better People than thy self, as more submitting to the Will of Heaven, have suffered Miseries infinitely greater than thine?

So great a Conflagration, wherein the Chief City of the World faw it felf near reduced to Afhes. mult needs have been a very difmal Speciacle. When I read the Relation which thou half made me. I tremble with Horror to fee fo many magnificent Houses, and stately Mosques, devoured by the Flames, and reduced to nothing; with fuch Riches, Goods, Houshold-stuff, and inestimable Merchandizes, publick Registers, and choice Manuscripes, whose Loss can never be repaired, being become the Prey of this Element which devours all things. But thou and I are not the first, neither shall be the laft, who bewail the Ruins of our Country. How many Towns in Afia, how many in Greece, have been swallowed up in an instant by dreadful Earthquakes? And how many Ruines are to be found in the famous Cities of Spria and Macedonia? And, how many times have the Illes of Cyprus and Paphos been entirely depopulated? We see not only the most solid Edifices perish. which are the Works of Men, but even Mountains annihilated. There are whole Countries which have (as it were) vanished; the Sea has covered fuch spaces of Land as might have made whole Provinces, and which were extreme Populous. How many Promontories do we fee, which were heretofore certain Guides to Pilors, but are now buried in the Sands, and caule often times Ship-Wrecks? And, if the Works of Nature be expoled to fuch great Ruines, what may not Mortal Men expect to fuffer? But I spend time in relating ordipary Accidents, when I might remember thee of greater Ruines, which the Fire made in the fame Imperial City, after it had been built by the Great Conflantiue, to whom the owed all her Splendor, before the Mighty and Successful Emperors of the Mussumans had therein established the Seat of their Empire.

Under

Under the Reign of the Emperor Lee, if I be nor miftaken, the whole Continent lying along the Bofshorus, between both the Seas, was entirely ruined by Fire, And Twelve Years after, under the Reign of Bafil, the famous Library, fo carefully collected. and with that extream Charge and Trouble, and which confifted of above Two hundred thousand Manuscripts: with the Skin of a Serpent 220 Foot long, whereon were written the entire Works of Homer, was confumed. The Fire which happened in the time of Justinian, might make one forget others; the famous Temple of St. Sophia, which is, at this day, our chief Mofue, could not be preferved from the fury of the Flames, being almost wholly confumed by it. I shall not mention the Ruines which have happened by Earthquakes, under the Reign of the Emperor Zeno Izoria. There was a far greater under Bazjazet II. for,in Pruzia, an entire City, with its Houses, Walls, and Three thoufand Inhabitants, were buried in the Entrails of the Earth: Which muft convince us, there have been in all Ages fuch Events, as may instruct us to bear our Misfortunes with Patience, and to believe a Providence, and submit our selves wholly to it.

Let us (my dear Friend) for once rejoyce, in an Occasion wherein all others mourn; in that we are able to persuade our selves, There's nothing here below deserves our Care. I do not say, we should laugh like Nero, when he saw Rome burning, which he himself had fired, and sang the Passes of Homer, wherein the Constagration of Troy is discribed: Rather do as Eneas, who having saved from the Flames, which devoured his Country and Estate, his Tutelar Gods, his Father Anchises, his Family and himself, became an Hero that served for an Example to Posterity. He did not spend his time in bewailing the Goods he had lost, but always kept an undaunted Courage in the midst of the Tempest which threatned to overwhelm him, as soon as he was on the Sea, and which forced him to wander from Port to Port, void of all Help, persecuted by a Goddess, and other Gods who were of her Parey, and having gallantly endured so many Disgraces, he became the Founder of the bravest and samousest Nation of the Universe. Aneas, in saving his Gods and his Father, who were the Companions of his Fortune, drew down the Graces of Heaven, which put an end to his Miseries, in setting him in a Country, where he laid the first Foundations of an Empire; which since has given Laws to all the World.

Our fins have kindled the Fire at Constantinople; the Debaucheries, Impieties, Hypocrisies, and continual Rapines which remain unpunished, are the Causes of the Destruction of the samous City of the Universe.

Can we imagine, when God sends his Judgments down upon us, that we can be able to resist them? Amend thy Life, if thou desirest to be revenged of Fortune, and be Proof against all her Darts. Encrease in Vertue, if thou wouldest be invulnerable; be as good in Prosperity as in Adversity. Nothing but good Works can make thee happy in this World, and live when this World shall be no more.

If Reason cannot stop our Tears, Fortune I am sure will never do it. We seem herein very unreasonable; for when we first see the Light, we weep;

and when we leave it, we groan.

Live ever with me more nearly than an intimate Friend, and imitate (if a Man may so express himself) the Fire, which (according to what appears to us) consumes all things, and converts them into its own proper Substance; but which yet, according to the Rules prescribed by its Creator, burns not the Air, nor the other Elements; but keeps them

them united, warms and conferves them. God has endued them with an Instinct which ought to do the same thing; he has fastned them one to another, with such Bonds as nothing can break, I mean, the Interest and mutual Needs which they have of one another. There being no body that can be happy, and become rich of himself; there must be Dependencies and Commerce, without which its impossible to have what is most necessary. There is also a more refined Commerce, to wit, the Marks of Esteem which Mengive one another; Succors in cases of Need, whether of Money or good Counsel; the latter of which, is all that can be expected from thy faithful Mahmut.

Paris, 10th of the 2d Moon, of the Year 1641.

tendrol o L E T T E R XXIV. 10 and 1

To the Baffa of the Sea.

THE Vessels of Africk have again been worsted by the Insidels, the Particulars of which must needs be known to thee, before they could come here; where there is much Discourse of the Accident at Goulette, and the Battel of Caraoge, to the great Disadvantage and Prejudice of the Mahometan Name. These Heathenish People make Publick Rejoycings for the Victories obtained by another Nation. 'Tis said, that of Five Gallies, and Three other great Vessels, only One Ship saved it self by Flight; several being sunk to the Bottom, together with the Admiral of Caraoge, the rese having been brought into Malta; and that there were Six Hundred Mussels is and the Poeter whose Death, our only Confolation is, that they died Martyrs, and their Blood will cry for Vengeance against the Infidels that have shed it.

Tis bard to find the Isle of Males in the Chart, and yet harder in the Sea; it being a meer Atom of invisible Earth: But 'tis not so with the Knights, who are the Masters of it, they being a Hundred,

often feen and felt by us.

Malta is a Seminary wherein are brought up the bravest Sparks in Christendom, picked out from amongst the most Illustrious Families. These Perfons know not what Fear is; they have imposed on themselves the necessary of Vanquishing, or Dying; and therefore they get the Mastery of whatever they attempt; and with those few Velicla they have, they make the Ottoman Fleets tremble. They wear a Golden Cross on their Stomachs, which is always dip'd in the Blood of the faithful Muffulmen. Ecliple this Impious Order, by opposing the Sacred Silver of the Ottoman Moon against the Force of so small a Number of Knights. My Zeal obliges me to fay fuch things as may be troublesome to thee; and which, perhaps, thou knowest as well as I; which is, That I am persuaded thou wile be the Conqueror of these Pirates, provided thou once resolves to draw out in good earnest thy Cymiter, and cast its Sheath away.

The King here is very well; he faid publickly, when he heard the Victory of the Malteles, That if he were not a King, he should chuse to be one of the Knights of that Place. Thou will gain greater Honour, and more Trophies will be raised to thee, than was to Ariademus and Cigala, if thou undertakest effectually the Destruction of this People. Thou hast my Prayers, That our Holy Prophet would strengthen thy Arm; and, That God would give thee still Favour in the Sight of our

Vol. I. a Spy at PARIS.

275 most puissant Emperor, chosen to be the chief Commander of the World.

Paris, toth of the 3d Moon, of the Tear 1641.

LETTER XXV.

To the Invincible Vizir Azem.

A N Illustrious Woman of the House of Savor. 1 governed not long fince in Portugal, in the Name of Philip IV. King of Spain: Her Name is Margarita, and commonly refides at Lisbon; but this Princels, with the Title of Vice-Queen, had not the Credit or Authority necessary to sustain the Dignity; though the had otherwise all the Prudence, and Courage requifite thereunto-

Michael Vasconcelli, her chief Secretary, having usurped all the Authority, carried all things with a high hand; to which he added a most griping Coverouspess, which was no less disadvantagious to his Mistress's Reputation. And, the Marquis de la Puebla, a castilian Minister, an Accomplice of Vasconcelli, had established himself in this Court, as a rigid Cenfurer of all the Vice-Queen's Actions.

The Christians call these two Men two Pedants, fer over the Princess, as if the had been still in her Minority, to correct and regulate her Actions.

r

c

II

d

h

0 ts

y,

at ae

ID d u is

of

The too great Authority of these two Ministers, became at length a kind of Tyranny. The Nobility complained for the tofs of their Privileges and the People at their being oppress'd with Taxes; which made the Ministry of Vasconcelli seem insup. portable.

portable, in which 'twas feen the Vice-Queen had no part. This Princess not having the Power to ftop the Course of the Mischiefs, which began to foring up, gave Advice of it to the Court of Spain, and expected thence the remedy: But, whether the King was not in a Condition to give any, or his Ministers concealed from him the state of things; the Mischiefs encreased, and Vasconcelli's Friends, by excufing him, made it almost impossible to avoid them.

When Margarita represented the Danger wherein Portugal lay, the was heard as a weak and credulous Woman, and was often accused of being over-timorous; which caused a general Revolt in this Kingdom, which was few Days in contriving, and as few Hours in executing.

If thou wilt hear thy humble Slave, I'll relate to thee all the Circumstances of so great an Event; which will feem a Fable, should we refer our felves to only Reason; but which however is a real Hiftory, as is now well known throughout all Europe.

Never was there a greater Hatred between Two Nations, than that which was between the Spaniards, and the Portugueses: And, though they had one and the same Religion, and almost the same Humour, yet 'tis not to be imagined, how far their murual Aversions carried them.

The Portugueses have a Common Proverb, which fays, That a Man is obliged to treat and love another Man as his Brother, whether he be a Turk, a Tem, a Pagan, or a Moor, without excepting the most Barbarous of Mankind; yea, though he were a Spamard.

They have lived with great Patience, under the Domination of Philip II. and his Successors, (fince the Death of their King D. Sebastian, who was fall'd in Africa in a Battel against the Moors,) whilst they were suffered to enjoy the Priviledges which were granted them, Moreover they still expected the Return of their Sovereign; who was faid not to have dyed in the Field, but having long wandred about in strange Countries, was in fine about to return. But the Example of the Catalonians, made them at length resolve upon what they now executed. The Nobility were the first that began the Revolc, and paft over those Bounds, which Respect does ordinarily place between the Sovereign and his Subjects. They alledged feveral Pretences for their Rebellion; but the most specious was their unwillingness to be facrificed in unjust Wars wherein the most dangerous Posts were committed to them, as they feveral times reproached the Duke, Favourite and Minister of King Philip IV.

They immediately carried on their Intelligences with great Secrecy; and when they came to declare themselves, the greatest Persons consented to the Conspiracy, and the boldest amongst them have executed it with great Valour.

n

te

; ur

all

NO

ni-

ad

ne

far ich

101 oft

p2-

the nce

was

hey

Dom Luan, Buke of Braganza, is the greatest Nobleman in this Kingdom, and perhaps in all Spain, and already of the Age wherein Men are wont to have Wisdom, together with Strength of Body. He wants not for Ingenuity and Sweetness of Temper. He received the Crown, after long Pressings and Refusals; and indeed is the more worthy of ir, as being the lawful Heir to it.

The Favourite Duke was well enough informed of the Reputation and Authority of the Duke of Braganga; and confidering him as a Prince who might lawfully pretend to the Crown. he made use of several Arrifices to drive him out of Portugal, or seize him Prisoner. But having always tryed this in vain, whether by reason of the extraordinary Watchfulness of Dom Juan, or that the Heavens, on which depend the Things here below, and otherwise therwise ordered it, 'cwas impossible for this Mini-

fler to ger fo good a Prey into his Hands.

This crafty Minister has tryed all Ways, and fomerimes made use of the Fox's Skin, and otherwhiles of the Lyon's Voice, to bring about his Ends. Sometimes he tryed to draw him to Court, offering him the most honourable Employs there, perfuading him to accompany the Catholisk King in his Voyage into Catalonia. But, the Duke knew how to detend himself against the Spare, and timely withdrew to Villa Viciofa, the ordinary place of his Abode: and whence he excused himself from going to Madrid fometimes; for that he had not sufficieut to bear his Charges according to his Quality in fuch a Journey; and otherwhiles, on other Pretences, with which the Favourire Duke was obliged to feem contented. Though he was not, yet he feigned himself to be sarisfied, to put in practice the most exquisite piece of Policy he ever made use of.

He sent him Forty Thousand Pistols, to buy Necessaries, and at the same time sent him also the General Command of the Troops in Portugal; with Order to come to Lisbon, and as High Conflable of the Kingdom, to observe the Motions of the United Provinces, which threatned Spain and Portugal with a powerful Fleet. But he had sent the following Order, to D. Lopes d'Osso: Thou hast the Command of the Naval Army, get immediately before Lisbon. Dom Juan de Braganza has Orders to visit the Vessels; as soon as he shall enter the first Gally, clap him in Ivons, and immediately depart with this Prisoner to Cadiz, where I have appointed People to convey bim to Madrid.

Don Lopes could not execute his Commission; his Army was lost in the English Seas, and twas written in Heaven, That Don Juan should live, and be a King. This Artifice having fail'd, the Duke had recourse to another; which was to fend an order to the Dube of Braganza, to visit all the flores on the Frontiers, where there were first Injunctions to detain him! But he perceiving the Project of this Spanish Minister, knew to well to exouse himself from undertaking this Business, that he made the design of his Enemy to vanish this time also, and got leave to retire to Villa Viciosa. Those who penetrated not the Artifices of the Court of Spain, were altonished arthe Accumulation of so many Favours and Honours on the Person of the Duke; affirming, the Court had Intentions of raising him to the Throne, or bringing him to the Scaffold; in which last they were not mistaken.

Order

Olivarez, who let slip no Occasion of laying snaves for Braganza, grew the more obstinate by the Dissipations he met with. He sent him a new Order to raise Troops, and to lead them himself into Catalonia, for the Chastisement of the Rebels; this being of absolute Necessity, said he in his Letters, for the upholding of the Spanish Monarchy, to which the Revolt of this Province caused great

Whom haven thehely wounded, knowed medw

n

O

e

1-ć

ŀ

e

e.

-6

ît

les ta

19 18

d

C

n

The Duke obeyed in part; he valled a confiderable number of Troops at his own Charge; but he took care of his own Person He wrote to the Court, to excuse him from that Voyage, and addedito his Excuses most carnell Prayers; reprefenting, That being fick of the World, he had retired to his own Efface, to lead there a quiet Life, free from the Vexations of Bufiness; which bblided him to entrest his Catholick Majeffy, to grant aim that Rell, which was the only thing he defiche The Duko de Brigman's Lever drew no Anfwer from the spanish Minister & but his Defigns were discovered; and the Nobility foresceing how tikely they were to be brought under a more firid Subjection, began to murmur, faying, 'T was their Ducy to rich themselves of those Oppressors, who

4

3

m

lo

fo

fo

had for long peeled them; and fet up a new Born of Government. The Poir, who fuffered moft by the Taxes, were the boldeft, and encourage the reft Some were for ferting up an Eledive King; Others proposed the raising to this Honour, the Family of Bragan za, who alone feem'd worthy of it Some there were who were for putting themselves under the Domination of Frances and other Persons of credir among the People, were for a Demoratical Goverment; and others again, were for surning the Kingdom into a Republick, to animalis a stud arts

The Nobility were in great Perplexity in the Choice they should make, for 'twas not known whether the Duke of Brazanza would receive the Crown, in case 'swas offered him again; for the moft qualified Persons of the Kingdom had proposed is to

Order to raile Troops, and to lead them in mid There was none but D. Gafton Cattique, a Gentleman as eloquent as flout, whom Heaven defign'd for the perswading of this Prince, that could accomplish it. He pretended to fight a Duel with a Nephew he had; whom having flightly wounded, he left Lisbon, as a Man that had brought himfelf into Danger; and wandring about from thence, uncertain, as k were, of the place of Retreat he would chuse, he went at length to Villa Viciofa; where having found Braganza in his Solitude, he thus foake to him cabba

I bring this day a Crown, which the Nobility of Portugal presents thee; and if thou hast the Courage to receive it, we are ready to put, it on thine Head. This Kingdom belongs to thee, as the undoubted Heir of our Natural and Lawful Princes. If thou accepteft of the Crown, the Kingdom juffly belongs to thee; and if thou darest not receive it, we will chuse another Sovel reign of greater Resolution, and who is willing to command us. The Scepter Shakes in King Philip's Hand, by reason of the Wars made against bim from A Parts. Confider of thou received not at prefet what what Fortune presents thee, thou wilt be obliged against thy will to obey another: Neither the Nobility, the Clergy, nor the People, will any longer suffer the Arrogance of the Castilians. It belongs to thee, at present, to declare, whether thou wilt reign, and be a happy Prince. All the faithful Portugueles breath after thee, and desire thee for their Sovereign. Resolve to accept of what is so advantageous, and let us alone for the executing of our parts.

Don Juan answered coldly to such a bold Propofition; more affrighted at the Peril there was in such an Enterprize, than flattered with the Hopes of pos-fessing a Kingdom.

ıf

ié

T

Š.

3

ie

1 é

rà

ne

A

0 ei

10

n

W

ñ.

r.

B

he

nd

20

of

ige

ad.

inf inf inf ver

phat

But in another Conference, wherein the Duke was told, the Confpirators were refolved to raise on the Throne another King, if he came not to a speedy Resolution; the Dutchess his Wife, who has a Man's Heart, and is more courageous than her Hisband, coming into the Conversation, thus spake to him with great Assurance:

My Lord, the Catholick King has fent for thee again to Court; at Madrid thou wilt certainly meet with thy Death, and in receiving the Crown which is offered thee, thou art still in danger of it: but if thou must pevish, which way societ thou entrest thy felf, is it not more honourable to die a King in thine own Cunty, than to die with Chains in a Prison by the hands of thine Enemy.

So couragious a Discourse brought Don Juan to a Resolution; wherefore he sent word to the Nobili-

ry of his readiness to comply with them.

The Configurators were ready at the hour appointed for the Execution of their Defign. Being well armed, and each of them accompanied with a good number of young Men, who were to follow them, although they knew not the Defign. As foon as ever the Signal was given, they all fet forth from the Places where they were affembled;

m .

and

ſ

P

I

S

21

th

mi

th

di ve

101

and those that were farthest distant, joyned the nearest, and altogether soon possessed themselves of the Palace of the Vice-Queen; they immediately made themselves Masters of the Guard, stinding no resonance from them, and this without spilling a Drop of Blood, or doing any Violence. They afterwards cried out altogether, Long live the New King, D. Juan de Braganza, and let them die that govern ill. They seized on the Vice Queen, and entreated her to retire into an Apartment, where she should be treated with the Respect due to a Princess, but not obeyed as having Authority to command them.

Vasconcelli, who knew himself faulty; and to whom his Conscience reproached his Crimes, in this moment hid himself in a great Press, under an heap of Papers; where, having been discovered by an old Woman, he had immediately his Throat cut, and his Body thrown out at a Window; where he served for some time a May game to the People, who less not one part of his Body free from some Mark of their Indignation.

One of this Minister's Domesticks threw himself out at the same Window his Master was thrown; not in a design of following his Fate, but of saving himself; and he died without its being known whether 'twas by his Fall, or the Musquet-shot which he received.

The Confederates with as little trouble seized on the Galleys and other Vessels in the Ports, whence they drove the Spaniards; they afterwards commanded the Vice-Queen to retire. This Princess thought she ought in this Occasion to insist on the greatness of her Birth, she threatned the Conspirators, and afterwards stattered them, assuring them of the Clemency of King Philip: She set before them the greatness of his Power, and forgat not to speak of the Authority of his Favourite, who must needs be much

II-

he

de fi-

go-

re

-

to

m

10-of old

his

ed ek

of clf or;

ng ne-

ch

OB

ice

the he es we le-

at-

He

he

ch

much offended in this Occasion; exaggerating the Offence committed against her, both as a Princess, and Depository of the Catholick King's Power. But as well her Promises as her Threats were in varing and she her self was at length glad to accept Conditions from them, who a while before, by Connivance from the Prince, might have executed an absolute Power.

In Eight Days time, all the Castilians were subdued, or driven out of the Kingdom. All the Forts were rendred, without any trouble to the new King, except the Castle of St. John; which having made some slight Resistance, was sold for Forty Thousand Crowns by the Governour.

The Duke of Braganza appeared immediately afterwards in the City of Linbon, where the People, foon shewed the Affection they had for him; the Prison Doors were fee open, and all poor Debtors freed, and a great part of the Taxes taken off. Such an aftonishing Success, was attended with whatever might fet forth the Joy of the People who folemnized the Festival with the Sound of Trumpets, and the Noise of the Cannon, and by Shouts and Acclamations, which reached up to Heaven, whom the Portugueses thanked for the Liberry which they believed they had recovered. This event was accompanied with fo many miraculous things, that the Wifeft as well as the Vulgar, were perswaded, 'twas mark'd in Heaven from all Eternity by the Finger of God. The Clergy, the Nobility, the Citizens and Peafants, were profuse in their Liberalities on this Occasion, to give their new Soveraign ample Marks of their Affection, and even the Poor hid their Mifery, that they might not leffon the Publick Joy.

The Spanish Vessels which returned from the New World, which then entered into the Ports of Portugal, remained at the Disposal of the new

Soc

ga

D

P

CI

ri

G

pi

m

MY

W

w

70

he

ef ali

tal hi:

04

King, the Pilots not knowing what had happed: To that the Coffers of the Prince were filled thereby

(as 'ris faid) with fome Millions.

This King was exalted to the Throne in the last Moon of the last Year; and wise People do hope he will reign very happily, all the Planets being too well disposed, not to make him finish his Reign with the same Fortune as he began it.

The vigilant Portugueses have ordered out several Vessels, fill'd with good Soldiers, and necessary Provisions, to seize of Places and Ports, which this Nation possesses in the New World, and in the East Indies; and tis to be supposed, they will meet with good Success, if Fortune prove as favourable to them in America and the Indies, as she was to them in Europe.

As foon is the Duke of Braganya was proclaim'd King, he fent Manifesto's into all Parts, and dispatched Couriers and Ambassadors, to give Advice of his Promotion, in the Courts of France, England, Holland, Swedeland, and Denmark. 'Tis not tobe imagined the Joy which this Adventure gave to the Catalonians. The King imparting to them what had trappened, offered them also his Assistance; and these People answered him with the same Offers. And this is the end of Sixty Three Years of the Desposick Authority, which the Spaniards have exercised on the Portugueses.

The News of fo strange a Revolution having been carried unto Madrid, hear, and consider well the anhappy Condition of the Catholick King, to whom his Favourite declared this News.

Sir (feid he) I come to rejeyce with your Majesty at the good News I bring. Tour Majesty is now become Master of a considerable Dutchy. Dom Juan de Braganza, has had the boldness to make himself he proclaimed King of Portugal; has thereby faln into the

Crim,

· Yo

eby

the

Peo-

all

ake

s he eve-

effanich

the

neet

able rem

m'd

pat-

e of

and.

o be

the

had

and crs.

the (X.

CCI

nn-

101

7

come

Bra-

pre

Crime of Læfæ Majestaris; All his Estate belones to you, and is devolved to the Crown, and his Person will foon be in your Power.

Dom Tuan was Son to Theodofius Duke of Braganza, Grandchild to Donna Catharina, who was the: Daughter of Dom Duarte, Brother to Henry King of Partugal; and Philip II. King of Spain took away the Crown from this Katharine, to whom it is faid it didrightly belong.

The Titles he afformes, are, King of Portugal, of Algraves, Africk on both fides of the Sea, Lord of Gainea, of the Navigation and Commerce of Athioa books we person

pia, Arabia, Perfia, and the Indies.

This new King is not above 27 Years Old ; of a middle Stature, but well proportioned; his Face marked with the Small Pox, his Hair inclining to Yellow, an Aquiline Nofe, high Forehead, lively Eyes, his Mouth indifferent great, and a Masculine. Voice. His Carriage is grave, affects great Modefly in his Cloaths, is temperate in his Dyer, affable wall fores of People, unless Slaves, and such as he believes are Hypocrites; and his common Word is, That mean Cloaths will keep out the Cold, and ordinary Meats fatisfie Hunger.

This Prince is not much verfed in Books, is of anhealthful Conflicucion, loves laborious Exercises, especially honring, wherein he is never tired. He's, also musically given, and so light of Heel, that there are few People can out-walk him. He is wont to go to led late, and rife early, as knowing that Sleep does take off much from Man's Life; and to compleat his Happiness, he has Children of both Sexes. His Wife is a Spanish Lady, of extraordinary Merit, to whose marvellous Courage and good Qualities he owes his Crown.

The Kingdom of Portugal contains 120 Leagues in length, 40 in breadth, and has several Millions of Subjects, comprehending those in the Two Indies.

Indies, It has Three Archbilliopricks, and Eight Bitherricks, keeping ordinarily Forty Veffels, which find Ports in Eight places of the Country. Then can maintain Thirty Thousand Foot, and foveral Regiments of Horses The Revenue of this King dom may amount to Twenty Millions of Gold rock oning in the Riches which come from the Indies

Brafil, Angola, and feveral other Islands.

The French Monarch will hold a good Intelligence with the House of Braganga; England will enter into an Allianco with her; the Pape will concern limfelf on peither fide ; the Emperor united by Blood and Interest to the Spanisted will be an irreconcilable Enemy, but unable to do then any Hurri and the States of Holland will find greater Adventuge than allothers inchis strange Revolus tion. These are the Sentiments of those that pretend to penetrate into the Future, and to know more than others. And if iche true, that this new Sovereign has had, as all Men in his Place would have hade a feerer defire of being Bings he has fo well concealed his Ambition, that 'tis to be suppo fed he will prove a most Judicious Prince, that wi uphold his Authority more by his Wifdom and Prudence, than by Force. The Just Godicut Short the Coarfe of his ill Defigns, should be have the courage and defire of revenging one Day the death of his Predeceffor, Dem Sebaftian, on the Faithful Muffulmen of Africk, and disvous mesol

Thou wife find, invincible Viring the faithful and respectful Mahmuralways ready to execute the On ders which shou shale fend him for the Emperor's Service: and ready to obey the least Signs of the Victorious Hand, to Death, whether Natural of

Fired on or Populate contacts 1" 2 complehending the in the Two

Violent.

the oder that he come whom

I.

ch

cy rai

llie

div

or,

ili

m

ata

lus

10

OW

este ide ide ide ide ide

he

e le

J(

P

hw

01

d

LETTER XXVI

To Enguril Emir Mehemet Cheik, a Men of the Law.

Tell me this once, whether thou beeft alive, and at Liberty; and whether thou dost really love me, or only pretend it. My Friends return to Answers to my Letters, which makes me strangely ignorant of all things; I know only by Conjecture, that which is never so little doubtful; and that which is certain, cannot be known here truly as it falls out, as being related according to Peoples Passons and Interests. There's no body dares write to me freely what he thinks; and there are few that will inform me of what is come to their knowledge, less their Letters should be intercented.

I know very well we have a new Master, but I know not whether he be thought a more able Prince than Amurath, and has the same Courage and Fancy for War. The Chiam that lately arrived in this Court of France, is very reserved to me, and makes a Mystery of every thing.

Amurath is dead: those who say he was Cruel, yet declare him to be the most Dextrous. Valiant, and Complearest Man in his Empire. The Christians are Fools, who, will not hence gather. That our Monarchs most certain Maxim, to reign with Authority and perfect Securicy, is, To make themselves he feared, and not to be fire of silling the Blood of those who serve them ill; who are suspelled by them, or may prove troublesome to them. Those Troops of Mutes, which abide always in the Seraglio, ready to obey the least Sign of those who give them. Orders; maintain, currease, and render Farmidable the Ottoman Power: For, the Empire would never be at Peace, but in continual Trouble, should all the Sons and Nephews of our Sultans be suffered to live: and we should have a whole Nation of Princes, who would be always a biting, and tearing, and ruining one another by Civil Wars, as is often seen to happen among the Christians. Whence this certain Maxim is practised, That it is better it should cost innocent Persons their Lives, than not to destroy those who may be Faulty.

Indeed, I must consess I knew not, that Amurath himself kill'd, with his own Hands, his own Sister. Thou that knowest the secret of this Tragedy, can'st tell whether he was transported to that Excess, because she answered with great Haughtiness to the Sultaness her Mother, who reprehended her on some Secret Love she entertained: If this be the case, she died not innocent, and I have a great Curiofiry to know the Particulars of it.

But do not relate to me the unhappy End of his Two Brothers, Bajazet and Orcan, left thou make an Old Wound bleed afresh. Poor Princes, what Crime have they committed, if their Brother reigns? Cruel King! how great was thy Inhumanity, seeing they obeyed without murmuring?

But Amurath was a dreadful Lover, who tamed his Passions with a Poignard; he stabb'd the most beautiful of his Sultanesser; and for what Reason? The Christians pardon him the Blood of his Brethren, which he spile of his Sister, and of the brave Fracardin, several Vizirs of his Friends, and so many brave Commanders, and illustrious Persons; but they will not pardon him the Death of a Mistress: for, they cannot conceive how a Prince, a Missilusman, can play the Hangman, in such a delicious place, where he has nothing to do, but to think of giving his Love agreeable Marks of his Passion. But you will tell me, perhaps, she was so bold

d

d

d

S

y

t

e

r

ł

bold as to wear in his Sight, Flowers and Perfumes which came from his Brother: It is certainly a great Grime, not to obey those who have all Power to command us; but its a greater Crime to lay on Commands, to have an occasion for Crueky. They say, a man which does such an Action, is a Monster, but I do not say so.

Inform me what the new Sultan Ibrahim does, of his Humour and Inclination. It appears he is still infirm, and stupified with his long Imprisonment. What Alterations has his Entrance into the Empire produced? Will he be Sanguinary as his Brother was, or gracious and merciful?

Speak to me once, my dear Friend, with all Freedom, void of Disguise; Is he amorously enclin'd ? I much value such Princes, for they are generally mild; and this Passion softens them, how cruel foever they may be; makes them liberal, and Strangers to Coverousness, that cruel Monster, which clouds and sullies the brightest Vertues. How many Persons are employed to choose fine Women for the Seraglio, to contribute to Ibrahim's Pleasure? Happy will the handsomest Woman of Aliabe. But the Eyes of this Monarch will be made like other mens, which are not always allured with the greatest Beauties. Hence it is, That we have seen in our Emperor's Seraglio, Ladies which furpaffed in Charms all othors, and yet died Virgin, and neglected by them to whose Pleasures they were confecrated.

The Chiam has only inform'd me, that Ibrahim appears often on Horseback in the City, and seems a just and merciful Prince, and designs to make the Shepherd Hassein, Prime Vizir; he that was so long the Companion of his Prison. 'Tis said, he often made it his Employment to divert Ibrahim in his Consinement, by playing on his Pipe, and making him Discourses without Art and extream innocent, of what he did when he kept Sheep. He told me also, that he often went for his Diverfion on the Black Sea, to take the Air, and enjoy that Liberty of which he was so long deprived;

That he's also much delighted with the reading of Greek Books, especially Xenophon and Phutarch;
That he's very devout, though not superfittious,
according to the Humonr of the Devotess of our Law, who will have our Soveraigns be implacable Enemies to the Christians. If this be necessary to Salvation, to persecute a Religion contrary to Ours, what will become of all those who are dead and never did it? I am of Opinion, That true Holiness consists in doing Good, and living in Charity with all Men.

The Infidels, with whom I live at prefent, for the Emperor's Service, whose Subject I am, do glory in their strict Observance of this Precept which is in their Religion, and they are happy if they keep it. Buttell me, Dost thou think our Emperor is like to have Children, as is already reported, and that he cannot live long? They are not only the idle People that talk at this rate, but those whose Interest obliges them to know, who is to be the Successor; and many of the solidest think, it will be the King of the Tartars, and that those of the Race of Mula Honlytar will be excluded.

This Race is really Illustrious, but every body knows nor the Rife of it. The Head of this Family, descends from Tamerlane; thou knowest the rest, and I will not dispute with thee about General alogies.

Whatever passes here below is so uncertain, that thou may it accuse me of Imprudence in discoursing of things at this distance; for, in Effect, Ibrahim may be a Father by this time. Pray to God, who disposes of Thrones, makes Races endure, or decay; merit from him, by Fastings and Prayers, and beg of him, that he would give me the Grace to live blameless, and die innocenes; that I may enter with thee into Heaven, and these enjoy those unspeakable good things which are reserved for the Faithful.

Love me, though diftant from thee; and let me have Tokens of thy Friendship, by sealing some Moments of Leisure from thy ordinary business to write to me.

Paris, 25th of the 4th Moon, of the Year 1641.

y

o£

6,

ir le

yod fr. e ys

y .

The End of the Third Book.

in March, and dedicated a stempone and reach crap layed apparence. Sin the system with as ment from the sec-

the King and the terrest the service of the King and the service of the service o

to be benedicted and on the control of the and constructed bearing about the second and a second second to the construction of the second secon on the state of the state of to the contribution of hearth learn en in high a section of the state in Print to a vince of the second 7 1, 2 - 5 - 26

LETTERS

the most dexerous and made self

third of the first of the little very letter and the first those haft end of the second like persis as he; no not no the ime when he ict hindelt to remove his Rivais. seyd tin Wiway at Obladelts which imply his obtainer the Sangir. He

SPY at PARIS.

which the Girec sate and to make Neg Le Neg Le has reobject this to necessary all mis or was

LETTER L

To the Venerable Musti, Prince of the Re-

HERE is now found in one Man alone, whatever several Persons of great Ingenuity could acquire by long Experience; and, this Man is Cardinal de Rieblien, to whose Reputation show are no Stranger. He was designed, like thee, for the Affairs of his Church, and dedicated to Religion;
but he is not so much employed about them, but that he applies himself with as great Care to the Affairs of the World; and 'tis he, who under the Authority of the King his Master, governs the Affairs of the French. I obey thee, Venerable Mufti; thou hast enjoyned me to inform thee of the particular Actions of this famous Prelate; but I shall not fay much of him, it being impossible to fathom him. He is the most dexterous and subtle Politician that lives in all the Countries of the Unbelievers. The famous Greek, Lyfander, was pever to cupnings peither did Tiberius flew half fo much Diffimulation at Rome, nor Judgment in Affairs, as he; no not in the time when he fet himfelf to remove his Rivals, and take away all Obstacles, which might hinder his obtaining the Empire. He interprets all the Doubts which arise in his Religion; he's the Arbiter of Rewards and Punishments, and the King, who knows his Zeal and Ability. leaves to him the Direction of his Kingdom and People; which he governs and leads as Jacob led the Flocks of Laban, This Cardinal wants only the Art, which this Great Patriarch had, to make Men be born as he pleased, as this holy Israelite made the Sheep.

There came, some days since, a Person from Germany, who went immediately to the Palace of this Minister, and sent him word by his Captain of the Guards, that the Letter B was come. The Officer was unwilling to deliver this kind of Meliage to his Master, and therefore desired the German to explain this Riddle; but he only told him, laughing. That the Cardinal's Alphaber was like the samous Knife of Delph, which served to all purposes; so that he useded only to mencion the Arrival of the Letter B, and he would be understood; which was no some done, but the German was privately introduced into this Minister's Closer, where he had a long Conference; but I could never hear the Subject of it.

He that by his Word Created all things, encrease thy Health; and make thy Authority ever adored, and feared even in Rome it felf.

Paris, 25th of the 4th Moon, of the Fear 1641.

LETTER II.

To the Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Octoman Empire.

Come but now from learning an Adventure, which yet happened some days since; but all things are carried on with such Secrecy in France, that it is almost impossible to know any thing before its made publick.

There were apprehended here, in the last Moon of January, certain Russians, in the Habit of Hermits, who were to affassiante Cardinal Richlieu.

These Wretches confessed before the Judges, as foon as they were put on the Rack, their Intention of killing the King's Favourite, because he was no Friend to the Duke de Vandome, who is Natural Son to the deceafed King, Henry the Great, This Adventure has greatly surprized the Court; each Man speaking of it according as his Interest or Affection inclines him. The Duke of Vandome's Friends have declared themselves against the Cardinal: And this Minister's Creatures have much aggravated this Attempt, to render this Prince's Family more odious, and heighten the Cardinal's Reputation: But, the Duke de Mercour, the Duke of Vandome's Son, rode immediately to Paris, with the Duke de Beaufort his Brother : the first, incognito, to consult his Friends, and the other, to prefent himself to the Cardinal, to obtain that their Hather Father might justifie himself before the King, from the Accusation laid against him.

The Grand-child of Henry the Great, has fince defired to be confronted with the Hermits, and has obtained it; but his Departure at the same time into England, has wrought much amazement.

Some fay, he has taken an unwife Courfe; and others fay no; because he could not prudently expole himself to the Testimony of such Wretches.

who would not matter what they faid.

However, these Hermits were publickly executed. and their Accomplices are not yet discovered; neither is it yet known, whether any persons of Quality have had a part in the Conspiracy; which is not the first that has been carried on against this Favonrice, and it's believed will not be the laft. He has a great many Enemies; and the absolute Authority with which he governs, by the favour of his Prince, will always raife him fuch Adversaries, as will either ruine his Fortune, or take away his Life.

If I write not oftner to thee, thou oughtest not to think my Affection ever the less. Set down in thy Register what I inform thee. Let me have thy Friendship, and Protection in things which are just, and change not thy Opinion of me, till I am changed my felf.

and the clienter's Groundes have colore degravated the Attender to render this Prince's Finally more odious, and heighter the Cardinal's Remarked: But, the Duly se Mercker, the Dake

engler ratio selt bes lamant and dumos in fear bingest to the Caratastata obtain that their

or Brandwicker Browner . the first increase

Paris, 15th of the 5th Moon, of the Tear 1641.

State of the state

laderse's Scu, 10de immediately to Park, wish

LETTER III.

To the Kaimakam.

TUlim Mazarine, a Man about Forty five Years of Age, of a folid Judgment, and incredible Perspicacity; of whose Family I know no more, but that he is originally from Sicily, and born in Italy, in the chief Giry of it. Rome ; is larely incroduced into this Court. He has, by his ingenious Carriage, gained the Favour and Confidence of Cardinal Richlien; and he begins already to be employed, in the most important Bufiness. Those who make Reflections on the Affairs of the World, and carefully examine the extraordinary Talents of this Italian, are perswaded one may expect great things from him; yet however, the best way is not to be hastly in judging of the good or bad Qualities of a Man. He has already been employed in Quality of Plenipotentiary for the King of France in Piemont, to negotiare an Accommodation between all the Princes of the House of Savoy. And he has laboured fo fortunately, that every body is aftonish'd that his first Undertaking should meet with such happy Success; especially confidering the Hatreds and Pretentions between the Dutchess of Sawy and her Brothers in-Law. Thou may'll remember that I wrote to thee, that the Differences of this Family were like to laft, and unlikely to be determined withour great Blood flied, both of the French and Spaniards. But Mazarine, who is a most expert Courtier, and dexterous Agirant, has ended this Affair, much to his Mafter's Honour, to the Satiffaction of the Parties interessed, and the Cardinal who procured him this Commission. He established the Peace in Piemone, and an Union betwixt the Parties. Parties by bringing over to the French Interest Two Men who were Enemies to it; who were, Prince Thomas, a Captain of great Reputation; and the Cardinal of Savoy his Brother, a Person of a confurmate Policy, and an excellent Soldier, though a Church-man.

It is mentioned in the Treaty, That these Two Princes shall be received into the King of France's Protection: That if the Young Duke dies without Children, and the Cardinal Marries, his Children shall be the Heirs, of the Estares of Savoy; and in defect of thole, Prince Thomas's.

Tis moreover declared in the fame Treaty, That the King of Spain thall be fought to touching the Liberty of the Wife and Children of Prince Thomas, who are derained, Prisoners at Madrid: And he shall be also sollicized to surrender the places he holds belonging to the Duke of Savoy. And in case the Catholich King shall not restore them. and fer at Liberry the Wife and Children, of this Prince, he shall be obliged to serve against the said King in the Army of France. Tis moreover inferted among these Arricles. That the Most Christian King shall procure a Marriage to be made between one of the Children of the faid Prince, with the Duke of, Languevil's Daughtor, who is a rich Heirels; and that France shall never make any Treaty with Spain, without comprehending the Liberty of the Princels and the forelaid Princes

Sing Thomas is now expected here; and it is faid, he will command the Army of France in Italy. against the Spaniards, it being certain they will never reflore what they have once taken, neither will they fer their Prisoners at liberty.

The Prince entertaining himself, some Days past, with the Amballador of a Foreign Prince, laid to him, those words: When the Spaniards shall restore to the Duke of Savoy, the Places they keep from him, I (ball willingly discharge my self of the Burthen of the Government of those I keep. And the Cardinal has publickly express'd himself to this purpose : That his Mafter's Defren was only to humble the Pride of the House of Austria, and reduce it to such a Condition, as that its Neighbours might baus no fuch greatcause of fear from them; seeing the least Motion of theirs, raised Alarms among them, That his Endeayours were not laid out in aggrandizing the Dominion of France, Seeing the Bounds of it mene-large enough already; his Intentions being only to give his Sovereign the last Proof of his Zeal and Affection, by leaving the Kingdom in a profound Peace, which might make his Majesty beloved of his Neighbours, and feared by those who are jealous of bis Greatness and Power; be being hereby the Arbiter of Europe, and reigning more absotutely by this means, than if all the Estates belonged unto bim. What I have written to thee, happened fome time fince; but what I am now to inform thee of, is quite new.

We have an Account, Than the Princes of Savey have not kept their Word with the King, Cardinal Richlien, and Mararine; and Deligns are now taking in hand, to punish so great an Affrone; and these are busied, in thoughts of revenging a Widow-Princess, who has been so long forced to behold bloody Tragedies in her House, by the Wars which the Princes of the Blood make continually; wherein Strangers do interest themselves, who ruine the Estates, and keep them up in perpetual Discord.

ł

a

K

n

n,

2

g

C

.

10

4

d

n n e

h

S

.

i

0

e

This Business will cause new Troubles in Italy, and thou shalt therefore not fail of Intelligence of the Particulars. However, the Peinces of Savan are blamed by all the World, and charged with want of Sincerity. But, this being almost a Role amongst the Christians, To observe their Word no langer than they find their Advantage in it; thou needest not therefore much wonder at what these Princes have done: Whereby thou wilt know, That a mean Interest being the Motive that sets them at work, and which is all their Reason of State; he that will one day equally judge all the World, and can overturn all the Universe in less time than he created it, will destroy the little Powers of these weak Politicians, who acknowledge the Law of the Nazarite, to the immortal Glory of the Venerable and Holy Name of the faithful Mussumans.

Paris, 15th of the 5th. Moon,
of the Tear, 1641.

LETTER IV.

To Dgnet Oglou.

I Must forget my solf, if I forget thee; but thinking often on my self; I cannot forget thee; because thou are my second self. Be persuaded I speak my Heart, and that I have no other design, but that of loving thee, that thou may'st answer me with the same Affection: for, I desire thy Happiness as I do my own.

m loller

I am endeavouring to procure thee the Confidence of the Invincible Vizir Azem, without his perceiving my D figo; and this is the best manner I could device of doing it. Thou shalt pretend to receive from some Friend which thou shalt leave at Palermo, the Memoirs which I send thee with this Letter; and it will not be difficult to make it be believed, thou holdest a Correspondency in this Town of Sleity, considering the time we have lived there together, during our Slavery.

The August Vicir, who rules and governs the Empire, under the Orders of the Most Mighty and Dreadful Potentates of the Earth, will receive by this Ordinary, an ample Information of extraordinary Events which have happened in Portugal: And I have also inform'd him of the strange Revolutions of Catalonia, which do much weaken the Scrength of Spain, and notably mortifie the Pride of this haughty Nation. I have made known to him, that Portugal has already made choice of a King, and that Catalonia is departing from her Allegiance. But, I have given him no Account of the choice Memoirs, which I fend thee; with which thou may'ft make Advantage, if thereby thou canft find the way of introducing thy felf to the Grand Vizir-

Thou may'ft then say to this great Minister, That thou hast received the Memoirs thou presentest him with, and assure him, thou hast translated them out of the Italian into Arabick; and thou must transcribe them with thine own Hand, that they may not appear to come from me.

The Ring of Spain, Philip II. died of a shameful Disease, which happens only to base People, which appeared a Chastisement from Heaven, for having like David, numbred the People which dwell in the Countries subject to him, to make known to all Nations the Greatness of his Power.

'Tis certain, this Monarch reckoned as far as 750 Cities, erected into Bishopricks; therein comprehending 60 Archbishopricks: that he had Abbies 11400, Chapters 9230, as many Collegiate Cathedrals; Parish-Churches 127000, Hospitals 4000. Confraternities 23000, Congregations of Seculars 2300, Houses of Entertainment for Pilgrims 3000, 46000 Convents of Religious People; and of Virgins 13500 with 15200 Chapels, wherein Mass is said, as well as in publick Churches, as particular Houses and Prisons.

And after an exact learch, this king found, that to ferve to great a sumber of Churches, Monafteries, Coments, Mopitals and Chappels, there were 12900 Religious Monks, Priefts or Clerks; amongst whom there might be found 12400 Priefts, which celebrate what the Christians call the Mass. And, to maintain to many People, 'twas computed that the Revenue for this amounted to 3000000 of Roman Growns, without reckoning the Alms which were distributed every they, which amount to the Summ of 2000000 of Gold.

The outlofity of this Prince went farther; he would know the Number of all his Royal Officers, Governours of Provinces, Towns, Gaftles, and Gittadels; and, Judges, Justiciaries of all kinds, and offall those who had Patents from him or his Viceroys. And he found they were 83000 who were employed under Letters sealed with his Hand, and 360000 who had them signed under his principal Ministers.

He would not know the Number of Persons that lived in his States, lest he should become too proud; and to prevent his fall, said he, into the Sin of David. Which he yercould not avoid in his own Person, as I have already said; God having spared his Subjects, who had otherwise sufficiently suffered.

One may now fay, that this putsant Monarchy begins to be dismembred by the loss of so many Provinces, Kingdoms, and Places; and that Philip II. knew not the full Extent of his Power: Philip III. knew not the Greatness of his Forces, nor the Riches which he possesses, because his Ministers governed him: and Philip IV. not seeing when he might see, could not see at last when he would.

I think I have faid enough to thee to be underflood. Do now what thou can't, to make thy felf understood by Persons to whom these Advices may be agreeable or profitable: And if thou believest, the Knowledge of these things may be acceptable to the Invincible Vizir, who is one of the Lights of the World. Endeavour to procure the Favour of this Great Man, who governs all the Faithful, and to whom the Divine Aleman serves for a Law. I embrace thee, and cordially kills thee with the Lips of my Soul, it a Man may so express himself. Adien.

Paris, 4th of the 7th Moon, of the Tear 1641.

ĉ

LETTER V.

To the Invincible Vizir Azem!

HE Pofts which came fome few Days paft here. 1 have brought ill News. One of the King's Armies has been defeated by an Army composed of Foreigners; at the Head of whom was a Prince of France, and feveral Malecentent Lords, who follow-This Lofs has much affricted the Court, ed him. and Paris feems to be Thunder-fruck. ple discourse and argue hereupon according to their different Humours, most making the Loss greater than twas. But those who have lost their Rinsfolks, threaten Revenge; and only those that have heard of the Death of their Friends, are filent, because their Grief is above Expression. But all in general appear in fuch a Conflernation, as would make's Man imagine this Stroak is irreparable ; To true is it. That Loffes are infuferable to those that are nor necufromed to lofe.

one would think, to hear the French talk, that the Spaniards are directly at the Walls of Paris, and that these rebellious Princes are ready to give an Allault to this great Town. They have retired into a place which they fay is impregnable, and which belongs to a French Lord; which Place is called Sedan, and 'ris not far hence where this bloody Battel was fought, wherein the King's Party were worsted; but the Malecontents are much afflicted at the loss of their General, who was kill'd in the heat of the Fight. Some say, he died by Treachery; Others, by the Enemy: and there are who affirm, That Cardinal Richlieu got rid of him by means of an Assassin, whom he entertained in his Troops: Others also say, he killed himself, by lifting up the Vizor of his Helmet with his Pistol, which discharged it self; however, there is dead in the Person of this Prince, a Prince of great Valour.

I shall make thee a Recital of this Adventure; I shall learn thee the Motives of this War; inform thee who were the Malecontents; and their Qualities; and, in sine, by what Cabals this Tempest is raised; that thou mayest know, Great and Principal Prop of the Ottoman Empire, that Ambition and Jealousie cause Disorders in France, as well as in other Countries Countries

Lewis de Bourbon, Count de Soissons, was a Prince of the Blood; he had such a fierceness in his Youth, as drove away all from him, who once came near him; but having got over this Humour, which disobliged every body, he became popular, and so Courteons, that he was now followed as much as he was shunn'd before. He used the Nobility as became their Quality; had acquired the Friendship of other Princes, and those of inferiour Bank could not enough admire him. He was adored by the Soldiery, beloved and esteemed by the People; and he had, in a word, so behaved himself, that he had gotten the general Applause.

Cardinal Richlieu has a Niece named Madam de

ì

D

2

tr

bo

di

ti

fr

N

ci

man, aspired to an higher March, seeing all things to give place, and humble themselves before her Unkle

The Cardinal defigned by the Marriage of this Niece, to procure himfelf fuch a puiffant Prop that nothing should be able to overthrow his Fortune, or oppose his Authority: He pretended also his Life would be more in fafery; and that fuch an Alkiance, with those he already had, would put him our of a Capacity of being ever attack'd by any Enemies, secret or declared, whose number energased as fast as his Authority.

Several affirm, this Priest had Ambition enough to give an Heir, who might one Day afcend the Throne; when it appeared by the Queen's Barrenness, the King could have no Child to succeed SOURCE INC. A STATE OF THE PARTY OF THE PAR him.

d

5 S

h

LS

d

t

d

h

e

of

m

i-

is

al

d

in

of 1.

1

h

d

h

15

-

k

y

e

le

100 D,

But the State of Affairs being changed, he took other Measures; and thinking of having the Count in his Alliance, he caused the Proposals of this Marriage of his Niece to be offered the Prince, by one of his most intimate Confidents; who offered him at the same time considerable Sums of Money, and Dignicies, to make him Heir of all his vaft Estares, and to procure him the greatest Office in the Kingdom, which is that of Conftable?

The Count of Soiffens Answer to him that made the Propof I; was a Box on the Ear; being in an extreme Passion, at any one's daring to offer him a Metch fo greatly beneath him, when Madam de Combalet was the Widow of a Gentleman of a mean Condirion, and Niece to'a Cardinal whom he hated, and himself a Prince of the Blood.

The Cardinai's Mellenger, defirous his Negotiation should succeed, was not repelled by this Affron. He infifted on the Vertue of the Cardinal's Niece, saying she would be courted by the Greatest of France: and added farther in Commenda-

they

tion of this Lady, that the was a Virgin, although married; because her Husband, out of respect, dared not approach her; and that Heaven had so ors' dered it, that this Adventure should be found written in the Anagram of her Name.

This Minister could not dissemble his Vexation at the Refusal; his Choler became excessive, and he resolved to practice his usual Maxim, of violentily persecuting those, whose Friendship he had fought with most cogerness. He therefore whosly set himself against this Prince, spake all the Ill he could of him, publickly threatned his Enemy; but he valued him not, looking on the Cardinal as beneath his Notice.

In the mean time, the Cardinal plotted to put his Threats into Execution, and brought the King in to Countenance him by his Authority; which obliged the Count to abfent himself, and make a Woyage into Italy, to avoid the Storm he was threatned with. Yet his Voyage lasted not long, and at his Return the Cardinal did all he could now to win him; he procured him suitable Employs in the Armies, and made him at length be declared General of that which the King sent on the Frontiers of Picardy. Yet this haughty Prince received all with Indisferency, saying only, That a Captain was given to the Army, and not an Army to a Captain.

The Grandees of the Court, who observed afar off what past in this Intrigue, instead of mollifying the Count's Humour, did all they could to tharpen it. The Duke of Orleance, the King's Brother, who was always this Minister's Enemy, link'd himself with Soffone, exhorting him not to yield to the Cardinals Pursuits; and it is faid, he drew a Promise from him under his Hand, that he would never accept of the Marriage proposed, and they afterwards swore Fidelity to one another; and that

1

ugh

da

Ots'

en

ion

ind

nt.

ght

me

of

ed

his

put

ing

ich

W 25

ng,

WO

DYS

cd

n-

cd

ain

ar

ng

cn

ho

elf

he

0-

e-

if-

ac

Y

Bill !

ham

they would join together for the Destruction of the common Enemy; and for this effect they took measures with Prince Thomas, of the House of Savoy, who is at present General of the Spanish Army in Flanders: They also brought the Duke de Valette, and several Lords of the Kingdom, into their Party. Almost all the Conspirators were for killing the Cardinal, and the time of the Stroak should be, when he visited the Quarters of the Army which besieged Corbie; but the Count alone would not consent to dip his Hands in the Blood of a Priest.

But the Duke de Valette, who faw the Danger wherein he was, when the Conspiracy came to be discovered, resolved to shelter himself by the blackest Treachery that could be imagined; he discovered to the Cardinal all the Accomplices, of which the Count de Soiffons having Notice, he speedily withdrew to Sedan. I shall not make thee (Invincible Leader) a Description of this Place, which regards on one fide Luxemburgh, and on the other France; it not lying in my way to make Draughts of Fortifications like an Engineer, but to give thee a full Account of what the Infidels do, and discover their Designs, whereby thou may'ft gather what may make for the Advantage of our Great Monarch, whose Power cannot be shaken, but by the entire overthrow of the Univerfe.

Sedan is a Dominion which formerly belonged to the Dukes of Cleves, who were Sovereigns of it, and at the same time Dukes de Bouillon. When the Count was in this place he thought himself safe; the Mareschal de Bouillon, who was the Master of it, by the Testament of the last of this Family, declared himself of his Party, either to make War together against the Cardinal by open force, or drive him out of this Kingdom, or to get rid of 0 2

th

P

11:

f

A

11

F

0

1

1

j

ì

him by Death. Here it was they made their fecret Treaties with those who commanded for the Spaniards in the Low-Countries; and a Prince of the House of Lorrain entred into their Cabal. He bears the Cardinal as much ill will, and appears as resolute as the rest for his Destruction: he is called the Duke of Guife.

There wanted only to this Party the Duke of Orleans, the King's only Brother, and therefore the Duke of Guife dispatched a Messenger to him, who fold in one day both his Mafter, and all the reft that were of the Conspiracy. He discovered all the Secrets of the Cabal; and the better to carry on his Deceir, he caused himself to be apprehended and thrown into Prison, having given his Dispatches to the King's Brother, which he had before shewed the Cardinal. This Traytor was not contented with revealing these Gentlemens Secrets, who had sent him, but also made it appear, That the Prince, the King's Brother, was guilty as an Accomplice of the others Rebellion. Thus thefe great Men, grown desperate at the Discovery of their Projects, which were indeed contrary to their Sovereign's Interests and the Kingdoms, were forced to throw themfelves into the Arms of the Spaniards, and to joyn with them.

They have raifed Troops amongst their Vassals and Friends, and openly declared themselves; and fought with great Valour, as I have already mentioned in the beginning of my Letter. The King's Army has been very ill handled, and it appears that the Advantage was whosly on the Confederates side; but it has cost the Count of Soissons his Life, who was General, and Chief of the Party, and it is at present disputed, to whom is due the Honour of the Victory.

I prostrate my self continually at thy Feet to kis, with all Humility, the Dust of them; aftu-ring thee, thou hast in me a most faithful Slave, that will never change.

Paris 15th of the 8th Moon, of the Year 1641.

I.

fe-

the

the

ure

uke

Or-

ho

eft the his

nd

CO

ed

th

nt

he

he

Pn.

ch

fts

n-yn

Is

nd

n-

TS

es e,

it

11 0 ı.

g

11 ability intologically

LETTER VI.

To Solyman bis Consin at Constantinople.

Dontins Pilate was an honester Man than thou. 1 He, although a Pagan, excused himself of the falle Sentences he should pronounce on the Chriflian's Messias, by washing his Hands before the Jews, who fought his Death: And, thou that art a Mabometan as I am, and washest thy whole Body in the Baths at Constantinople, in the Presence of our Friends, accuseft and condemnest me rashly without any Scruple. Thou nieft me like a Rogue; to maliciously are thou fee against me, who am of the fame Religion which thou professest. How canst thou justifie the Hatred thou bearest me, in endeavouring to make the Kaimakam believe, I have been corrupted by the cardinal, who is the King of France's Chief Minister? Adding that he ought no more to heed my Letters, and Relations sent to the Sublime Port (where lie proftrate all the Powers of the World,) as not written by an Arabian, but by a Sacrilegious Heretick; That I deceive the Mufti, so venerable for the Authority which he has in such an Holy Religion, of which he is the worthy Head; and that I amuse him by my Letters, the better to conceal my Change, feeing I adore in my Heart, and publickly profess an entire Submission to the Decrees of the Roman Prelate.

The Quality of thy Coufin, which I have whether I will or no, is fo far from with-holding thee, that 'tis made use of to carry on thy pernicious Defigns. Ounworthy Kiniman! Infamous Hypocrite! Thou wilt discredit me, and break off the course of my Employment, because I serve effectually the greatest Prince of the Universe. Thou approvest not only my Conduct when I began my Endeavours, under the Orders of the Minifters of the Divan; but thou applaudeft me, gave me Praises : And now, when all the Ministers are facisfied with me, and approved of my Behaviour, and gave me their Commendations; thou are the only Man who chinks it fitting to traverie me to obscure my Reputation, and blacken my Actions. Is this the Fruit of thy Studies with Hippo at A. thens, to whom thou owest thy Knowledge of Greek Authors, which thou so greatly braggest of? Answer me, unjust Cousin, What is thy defign of having me called away by thy base Defamations? When did I offend thee, and wherein I pray? But thy Artifices, how great and malicious foever they be, will not prevail over the fincerity of my Heart; and, as I shall always exactly perform my Duty, so I fear not the Loss of my Prince's Favour; he will approve of what I do, and thou wile die with Envy and Despite.

I needed not have been mistaken: I might have seen the Falseness of thine Heart by thy Countemance. Thou are an Heraclitus, always Melancholy, and out of Humour, that cannot rejoice, should Heaven savour our Invincible Monarch's Projects. Thou are a salte Zeno, who under the affected Appearances of a Stoick, concealest a Cynical Heart, whose Critical Humour is always being on the Actions of others. Nature has covered thy Face with sadness, mixt with a deadly Paleness, because thou are always busied about some doleful matter.

he-

ice,

OUS

po-

the ffe

hou

gan

ini-

ave

arc

our.

the 10

ons.

A

of

of?

of

ns ?

Bnt

sey

rt;

10 vill

vy

IVE

re-

10-ald

Os.

P

Pt.

he ife

er.

In like manner it appears, That Pythagorarhas infiructed thee to speak little, as knowing thou art. not fit to lay or do any thing but what is hurtful, I know not what is become of Houf, having no Account of him. I am afraid thou haft corrupted this my Kiniman, that I might have no Ally, or faithful Friend. Thou hast not failed to instruct him well, having given him so good an Example; and he has, without doubt, been fo ungrateful, as to imitate thee. He is returned from Mecha, and makes me no Answer, giving me no Account whether he has made the Offering for me on the Mountain, whether he has facrificed the Sheep, whether he has distributed the Alms I enjoined him, and whether he will send me, as I entreated him, a small Piece of the old Hangings of the facred But I will not concern my felf as much at Mofque. what others do, my Intention being to complain only of thee, because others Offences are not comparable to thine, thou having left no Stone unturn'd to ruine me.

continue then in thine ill Nature: I write only to acquaint thee, that I am not ignorant of whatever thou has done against me. There's no body but old Baba thine Uncle, who can work a Change in thee: go to him; be not ashamed to see a Man who is employed in the meanest Works, to have more Judgment than thee: Shew him the Infirmities of thy Soul; or, to speak better, confess to him all the III Things thou hast done, if thou hast any Intention of becoming an honest Man. Although he be but a Carpenter, he knows better than thee, to form the mind; he can teach thee how to polish and square thy Soul, as he polishes a piece of Oak, though never so hard and knotty.

He is perfectly instructed in the Law ; he is brought up in the Principles of Religion; he will guide thee, if thou will suffer him, in the way

which

which leads to Perfection; he will not permit thee tolye; he will put thee on making Restitutions to those whose Good Name thou hast unjustly raken; and he will comfort thee, if thou beeft really forrowfal for the ill thou haft done, and if thou shewest any Regret at thy former Purpoles, of destroying a Kinfman that loved thee, and stiel wishes thee all kinds of Happiness; if thou repentest of thy unjust Persecutions, and if of a bad Coufin, which thou haft been, thou wilt become a fincere and hearty Friend.

Paris, 25th. of the 10th. Moon, of the Tear 1641.

VII. LETTER To Dgnet Oglou.

I Say not that those are Fools that are in Love, but I must needs think, that those who believe lightly, are not overladen with Discretion. 'Tis hard for a Man always to keep himfelf from falling into a Passion; but 'cis not so hard for a Manto keep himself from believing things with too great Facility, and from being caught with Fallhoods, which are the most constant Arrendants of Women.

Thou haft spoke the Truth to me, in fending me the Balm and Alces I wrote for; and I shall not answer thee with Lies, in speaking of Daria, who is the Subject of the Letter which I received from thee. Let me thank thee, without faying any thing of the Present thou madest me, which is very magnificent and acceptable; and fuffer me to complain to thee freely of the Hurt which another has done me. I need not confule my Register, to remember doing member whatever I wrote to thee about this Greek, my Heart which is yet full of it, reproaches merevery Moment for having faid too much to thee on that Subject.

0

r-n

g

Never any thing appeared to me so defirable, as that Herb which Homer call'd Nepente, to cure me of the cruel Diftemper, with which I am tormented. This Prince of Poets makes a Queen of our Agypt, to present this admirable Simple to Helena, which has the Virtue of appealing immediately all Dolours, and makes us forget the Vexations and Offences offered us. But thou wilt not understand me, unless I tell thee clearly, That Daria has forgotten all the Promises she made me, as soon as ever she was from me; not remembring in any forc my Love. 'Tis true, the wrote twice to me fince her Departure, but in so cold a Style, that it is plainly feen, her Heart is as cold as Ice to me. As foon as ever the law her felf in the Arms of her Husband, the made him a facrifice of my Passion; and, the better to make her Court to him, and perfuade him of her Fidelity, the delivered to him my Letters. The Husband laughed in reading them, and faid to her, in a Jear to me: A Man then, fo desperately in love, has only sighed and wrote? He has done funething more (replyed this diffembling Woman) having promised to send me a Box of white Balm of Mecha, and Aloes-Wood, to perfume me, which yet I do not expect to receive fo foon, and perhaps never: For, if Mahmut be not become a Fool, he will as foon forget me, as I shall certainly forget him. And what bast thou promised this Barbarian? replyed immediately the Husband. I promifed, replyed Daria, to fend with my Pillure, that of the most chafte of all Women; which yet I do not presend to do, without your Confent; nay, and Commands

What I now inform thee, comes from a Place which makes me not at all doubt the certainty of it. But having learnt by what I related, the Virtur of this Woman, now hear what the Husband's was; who having seen my Picture, and commended the Painter that drew it, embraced tenderly his Wise, whom he respected as a most singular Example of Conjugal Fidelity. Thou wilt wonder at Daria's Weakness, in shewing him my Picture; she did do it, and her Considence has turned to Account, she having received a Thousand chaste Embraces for a Recompense. Thou sees there the Happiness of the Christian Women, who have Husbands who rake so favourably the Offences done them during their Absence.

In the mean time, Davia's Picture does not come; the returns no more Answers to my Letters, which has discouraged me to write to her for some time. My Passion begins not to be so violent; and, this great Fire which consumed me, will soon turn into Ashes. I have been mightily mistaken; for it is only amongst Persons of an equal Condition, where true and lasting Friendships are to be found. Let us love, my dear Dgnet; let the Bonds of our Friendship be such, as will never break nor be dissolved. Davia is really a great Example of Fidelity to her Husband; but, she is also an Example of Inconstancy and Treachery to a Lover, who had sacrificed all to her.

I am refolved henceforward, to love no Woman; and I am certain, my dear Friend, that my Refolutions shall hold. Rejoice with me at my Cure, and believe, that if a fine and charming Woman disordered my Brains, the good humour and Patience of her Husband, has brought me again to my Senses. My Adventure should make thee careful, to avoid the like Inconveniences; but, thou canst not run that Risque, being happy with the other Mussumen of Constantingle, who have Laws which terain and hinder them from falling into the like Irregularities.

I hope also thou wilt give over being my Rival if thou hast ever had any Kindness for this Ungrateful Greek. If Men must love once in their Lives, let them have a care of falling into those Excesses which deprive them of their Reason, and make them repent of their Love all the Days of their Lives. My Repentance is great; and though my Passion be not wholly extinct, yet I seel a Joy which makes me know, that I shall by degrees tose my Passion for her.

Thou mayest be well tired with this long Discourse; but I shall end it, in sending thee a Description which one of the greatest Wits in Spain has made of Women.

r-

18

d

iis

X-

at

ne

C-

n-

Pds

11-

h

c.

îs

0

1-

e

15

P

la

Š.

d

r.

n;

1-

,

r

y e it

1

He fays, They be the Sources of Life and Death ; that they are to be considered as Fire, because they use all that come near them as that Element does, yet they give Men a certain necessary Heat: They are fine things; bring Joy to Families, and whole Towns; but are dangerous to keep, enflaming all that comes near them, and reducing them commonly into Ashes. usually give a great Lustre, but this Lustre is never without such a Smoot, as darkens the Understanding. and makes them often fled Tears; who only behold them. He that has no Commerce with Women, frends his Life in Melanchety, and get then are feldem feen without Danger. The way to manage them, is not to do excessive things for them, no more than subody to neglect them. A Man oft obtains them enfile and commonly lofes them more eafily. Fire and a Woman are exactly the fame; and he that faid; Women are Fires which Lurn all things, has faid likemife, That Fire is like Women, which consumeth all thingson ? with

But our Religious Arabians have spoken yet more:
Elegantly, when they wrose, That God made approticular Varadise for them; because, say they, found they enter into that of Asen, they would from thange

it into Hell,

Eve plaid her part so well, when she was suduced by the Serpencia the Terrestrial Paradise, that she deceived her Spouse also, that he might lye under the like Condemnation. But however, this Sex having, among so many Defects, something that is amiable; let us love them, at least, because of their Usefulness for continuing the Species, but not for their Beauty; whose Enchantments corrupt the Mind, and hinder all the excellent Operations of it: For Men perhaps would be Angels, were there no Women; I mean had ones; for good Women, as well as good Men, can do no Hurt. Adien.

Paris, 20th of the 10th Moon, of the Tear 1641.

LETTER VIII.

To Carcoa at Vienna.

The Courier which is now arriv'd, has brought me Letters and Money from thee. I shall receive the Money upon the Bill of Exchange, when it is due, under the Name of Titus. I am extremely obliged to thee, for the Care thou hast taken, in procuring it me, being in a Countrey where good Words are of no Credit. I have received also the Box, wherein is the Balm and Aloes sent me by my Friend Oglon, all in good Condition, and come in good time, I want only to know, how it is with Isouf; for he writes no more to me. I am informed he is returned from his Pilgrimage, and yet has not sent to thee what I desired him to bring from Mecha.

I will not complain of any body; if I do, it shall be of my self. Take care of the Letters I fend thee,

d

e

X

r

r

c

thee, and let me know, whether we may hope well from the Grand Signior, and what is reported at the Court where thou art, and if there be any likelihood of making War afresh against the Infidels.

My Health is indifferent. I live here without Suspicion; and though Cardinal Richlien be an Argus, he is blind as to what concerns me; for he knows nothing of my Business, or feigns so at least; neither do I do or say any thing which may make me suspected for an Enemy.

or his Law, and follow my Business with great Fidelity. If thou wilt have me do more, advertise thy Friend of it, whom thou knowest; shew me the Example, and live happilys

Paris, 22d of the 10th Moon, of the Tear 1641.

LETTER IX.

To Berber Mustapha, Aga at Constantinople.

which the Infidels folemnize by Bonfires, and which I mark by an extraordinary Sadness. I complain not, in that Time making it self the Master of my Heart, will soon begin to weaken it. I understand the Follies of those Vows, which are made to Heaven, for the obtaining of a long Life. Those that desire it, are wont to make contrary ones, when they become overwhelmed with the Instructies which attend for the most part old Age. The Occasion of my Complaints, is of another Nature; I am troubled at the being so far from my Friends and Country, and at my being banish'd into an Enemy's Country, where I must live like a Man that is in continual Fear, among People who seem to matter nothing.

Thou art now above 50 Years of Age, and I not above 32; and yet I know thou reflectest not much hereupon, thinking thou hast still a long time to live. Thou art of a strong Constitution, art a lover of Pleasures, searching them every where, without any thoughts of Death, who will spare thee no more than others, whose Health is decayed; for he comes taking great strides towards in all. Thou art very fortunate, I must needs say, in conferving in a Body so near Old Age, a Young Man's Spirit; which is far from my Disposition: For when thou art in pursuit of Divertisements, I am continually chinking of Death; because I believe I have lived too long.

Should the King, or Cardinal, near whom I live, know this Night, that Mahmut, who writes to thee, is one of the Grand Signior's Spies, I should lose my Life, perhaps, before the next Light: Yet the fear of such an Adventure gives me no Disquiet; having entirely sacrificed my self to the Master I serve, who commands all Men on the Earth. Should these Barbarians put me to Death, I shall only finish, a little sooner, that Course which I must certainly one day put an end to; and if I live, I shall have neither Recompence to expect, nor Pain to apprehend.

Here is much talk about the Duke of Larrain; yet there has been more done against him, than said. The French affirm, that in stripping this Prince of his Countries, he has been very mercifully deals with; for Justice required more. There are, on the contrary, other People, who do not believe و.

Is

ir

0

h

0

-

e

7

n

-

e

,

y

I

d

2,

n

lieve it is possible to do a greater piece of Injustice. In fine, every Man speaks after his manner.

'Tis faid moreover, that this Sovereign being come again into the King's Favour, who had given him a Thousand Testimonies of good Will, after what had passed in 1634, when this Court had great reasons to complain of his Conduct; he drew down again afresh the Indignation of France upon him, by a Fault which cannot be excused. I think this Duke had concluded Two Treaties that Year, promifing a Submiffion and Eternal Obedience. He had the Honour to Dine with the King; and having rendred him Homage for the Dutchy of Bar, he again threw himself into the Arms of the Austrians; although he had fworn on the Gofpels, (a Book as much respected amongst the Christians, as the Alcoran is among the True Faithful.) That he would never forfake the Interests of France, what Wars foever the might find; that he would be perpetually fix'd to the Interests of that Crown, and never hold any Correspondence with the House of Austria. In confideration of which, Lewis should re-establish this Prince in his Estates, which he was to surrender entirely, bating some Places, and the Capital, called Nanci, which he would retain during the War, as a Pledge for the Performance of what he had sworn to; and, which yet was to be given up, after the Conclusion of the Peace. 'I's added, That this Sovereign having occasion to complainof the Spanish Ministers, and the Grandees of this Nation, who carry on the War in Flanders; he had written to the Cardinal Infant, Governour of the Law-Countries, a Letter to this purpose, and very near in these Words,

The Kine of France baving required me to joyn my felf with my Troops to his Army near Sectan; I would not obey this puissant King, much less your Highness; feeing the Towns Subject to the Spaniards, treat me a Th

if I were on Enemy.

The Ladies have had a great part in this Accommodation of the Duke of Lorrain; which has had like all the Works of Women, a direful Event. This Prince being become amorous of a French Lady, was for repudiating his lawful Prince(s, to whom he owes all his Estate; beginning to separate from her, that he might give himself entirely to the Countess of Cantecroix, whom he used as his real Wife.

Good People are forry for this Prince's Disgrace, as believing his Condition to be past Remedy. The devout party say, That having been unjustly deprived of his Estates, God will work Miracles in his Favour; considering, no less than Three Hundred Saints, as they say, have been of his Family, which must needs reconcile him to the Favour of Heaven; amongst which, is the samous Godfrey of Bullen, who won Jerusalem, and all Palestine from the Saracens; whom we must own to have been a great Man, whether we consider his Courage or Zeal for his Religion, which ought to make his Memory samous to all Ages.

I can tell thee nothing more certain on this Subject, having endeavoured to be informed of what I write to thee to fatisfie thy Curiofity: and whatever I now recite, has past in France with little Noise, or rather with great Silence, as to me; for indeed, I must with shame confess, that I have scarce heard in Paris this Event, so famous throughout all Europe.

Man has nothing but what comes from Heaven; and commonly the strongest, when he has Right on his fide, subdues the weak, and enriches himself with his fooils.

By the Law of Nature, every one has Right of judging his own Necessaries, and the Greatness of the Danger wherein he finds himself; and, if it be contrary to Reason, I should be Judge of my own Danger, Danger, 'ris reasonable another should be so. But the same Reason which establishes another Judge of what concerns me, has made me his Judge; and consequently, gives me Authority to judge of the Sentence which he shall give against me; and to decide, whether it be just, when tis savourable to me, or unjust, if it be contrary to my Interests.

Nature has given all to Men, and thou and I, and all Men have an equal Right to all things, and hence we have Power to do whatever we will, to poffess and enjoy what we think is fitting; and yet such an extensive Right, is just as if we had Right to nothing: For, at the same time, I have Right to a thing which pleases me, another stronger than my self, by virtue of the same Right, takes it from me, and enjoys it in spight of me. Hence it is that one Man invades another with the same Right with which he defends himself; whence do, and will spring up always, the occasions of Jealousies and Discords which are among Men; which make them at continual Defiance with one another, and liceps them in a continual Watchfulness over their Neighbours.

Tis this Liberty founded in Nature, which makes it lawful in time of War, to refift and invade, not only by open Force, but with all the fecret Arts and Stratagems that can be devised; and, when a Man would avoid the Danger he is in, in fighting, and has his Enemy in his hands, he has right to use all means to avoid him, and secure himself from him.

Thou wile approve of these Resections, which shew thee the Natural Right thou hast of commanding me, as being thy Inferiour; and, I hope, by what I have written, to have satisfied thy Curiosity; and by my Submittion and Obedience, to have given thee a Proof of my prosound Respects to thee.

Paris, 24th of the last Moon, of the Tear 1641.

LETTER X.

To Breredin, Superiour of the Dervifes of Cogni in Natolia.

Let T me, most holy and patient Dervise, falure thee with my Head bowed down to the ground, with the greatest Humility I am able. I now write to thee with my Feet naked, without either Hose or Shoes, as a Mark of my Respect and Veneration which I have for thy Old Age, and the Admiration

I have at thy incorruptible Innocency.

The Kindness thou the west me by the long Letter I have received, has given me fuch Joy as I cannot express; as makes me forget my past Pains, and hinders me from thinking of those which are happened to me; for I can now willingly leave this World, having had such Testimonies of thy Affection. Thy great Age does not oftonish me, feeing thy Father, who is yet alive, is 107 Years old, and thou not above 82; which makes me hope to fee a great while yet, both one and the other, draw down, by their Prayers, and Merit of their good Actions, the Bleffings of Heaven on the glorious Empire of the Ottoman Court, to whom all the Empires and Monarchies of the World ought to fubmit. The Thirty Brethren who presented themselves to Selim, to be enrolled in the Troops-which were to serve against the Persians, made the Father, who had them all by one Woman, to pass for the happiest of all the Muffulmans, in having the good fortune to beget such a Number of the most Noble Species in Nature. But thou and thy Father must needs be more happy than this fertile Parent. Thy Father has fought, and come out Victorious from the Perverfity of the Age, full of Scars and Sufferings, through through the Force of his Courage, the Innocency of his Manners, and his great Sobriery: And, as to thy Part, what haft not thou done to make thy felf the worthy Son of fo glorious a Father? Thou haft not only done, what thy Father did before thee; thou haft acquired the same Virtues, and haft so far outdone them, that one may fay, thou haft furpaffed Virtue it felf. Thy Strength is admirable in the midft of Abstinencies, and other Austerities which thou undergoeft; in which, 'tis certain thou canft nor be imitated. But Heaven, to whom only thou liveft, will recompence in this World thy pure Faith, which the Enemy of Mankind can never weaken.

£

ľ

Ŋ

١,

)-

y

0

e

d

ft

ie

3

is

2

r-

h

The Christians lay, When God gave them the Commandments, he promised only long Life to such who perfectly honoured those, who, under God, brought them into the Light. If this be true, as 'tis very likely; 'cis not to be doubted, but that a long Life, is the Recompence which God gives those who have well: And the Nazarenes who are Criticks, affirm. That Sin alone is the cause that Men do not live so long as they did before the Deluge, for then they remained fuch a while in Life, as would tempe one to think, they were to have been Immortal. They Tay that after the Deluge, God changed the Nature of Men; and instead of that great Number of Years, which made up the Course of so long a Life, they cannot live at farthest above 120 Years, and that there are few which arrive at 80; and whatever is beyond this, is Mifery and Torment, or a kind of Senseleineis, which makes Men like Beafts.

I know few People but what are agreed, One may cure or mitigate the Inconveniences which happen to us; but, few are of Opinion, That Life can be lengthned; yet, if this be possible, we may then believe a Story which is believed here.

if my with a Crance and there is and which happened the Year past in Paris.

(

An Ancient Man went to a Dervis of this great Town, and thus accosted him: I am come, Reverend Father, to know of you, whether I may in good Conscience determine to live no longer, being quite aweary of living. I have already arrived to the 120th. year of my Age, by means of a Liquor which Chymi-Ary bas taught me, whereby I did scarce perceive from any thing I felt, that I was going down; yet bowever this long Life appears at present to me irksome and intolerable. My Blood is fo putrified in my Veins, that I have remained without any of those Passions whereunto Mankind is generally Subjest. My Tafte serves me no longer to discover the Delicacy of Meats. My Ears, although they be not deaf, yet will not let me diftinguish true Harmony from what is only a Confusion of Sounds. Mine Eyes are open to fee, but are not cleared with any Object. My Faculty of Smelling, is struck with Scents, yet they make no Impression on it. I touch, but I feel not what I touch; and I touch all things indifferently. Mine Heart is no longer fenfible, nor affected with Tenderness, and Passion for my Friends. Bile in me bas no longer its usual Heat. Joy and Sorrow, Anger, De-fire of Having, Hope and Hatred, are extinguished in me; whereby I am become insensible in conserving, if I may fo fay, all my Senses. I am resolved therefore to let my felf die, provided you can affure me I may do it without Sin; for should I remain two days without taking this precious Elixir, I am certain I (ball forn expire, and so be delivered from the Vexation which overwhelms me. 'Tis faid, that the Dervis answered this Philosopher; That he might not defire Death, but on the contrary, preserve his Life; and supposing be made use of no Secret of Magick to prolong his Days, be (bould believe that the marvellous Potion, of which be had found the Secret by his Study and Travel, was a Present from Heaven: That 'tis true he would be rid of a troublesome Life, but he could not procure the End of it wishout a Crime; and that he was obliged to preferve it, to suffer with greater submission the Pains he complained of, which could not be comparable to the Pleasures he had received, by enjoying the Gift which God had bestowed on him.

The Great God preferve thy Days beyond those of this Philosopher; and accompany them with whatever may give thee Satisfaction: But I beseech him above all things, that he never let flip out of thy Memory the Promise thou hast made me, of having always a particular Respect to thy Servant Mahmut, who reverences thy Holine's.

Paris, 15th. of the 1ft. Moon. of the Tear 1642.

ß

ti

LETTER XI.

To the Redoubtable Vizir Azem.

I Make thee an Answer, invincible Warriour, by whose Counsels the formidable Empire of the Ottomans is governed, under the Orders of the most mighty of the Princes of the Earth, and, whose Arm is terrible to all the Potentares of the World. I have read thy Letter, with which thou honourest the most submissive of thy Slaves, with all the Humility which is due to thy fublime Grandeur, whereunto thy Merit has raifed thee. And, having caft my felf at thy Feet in Spirit, feeing I cannot really kils them, I obey the Orders thou lendest me, which are to me inviolable Laws.

Banniere, the Swedist General, is dead; when Picolomini, one of the Generals, of the Emperor's Army, lay just by him. In half an hours time, he faved himfelf, the Army, all the Baggage and Cannon, and retired with incredible Swiftness over Mountains and Forests, where the Beafts alone cio dina could could make Passages, having continually the Emperor's Army at his Back. He was a Man of great Valour, had been highly serviceable to the Grown of Swedeland, and acquired the Reputation of an excellent Commander. The Emperor had offered him some time before great Recompences, and the Dignity of Prince of the Empire, if he would change his Masser, and forsake the Confederates Party. He had also offered, thinking this might more move him, to make him General of his Army against the Grand Signior: but he resuled all these Offers, his

Fidelity being unmovable,

This great Captain was born in Swedeland, and when a Child, he fell down from an high Window, without receiving any Hure; which made the King imagine, Heaven defign'd him for fomething extraordinary. He travelled much in his Youth, and he was feen never tired in running to all Places, where there was any War; fometimes in Poland; and other whiles in Muscovia: And being become General of his King's Army, he foon acquired the Reputation of one of the greatest Captains of the Northern Parts. He was perfectly skilled in the Art of Encamping, and no body could ever better draw up an Army for Battel. His way of Retreat from before an Army ftronger than his, must needs be admired by all the World. He ever chose good posts; and when once he was poffes'd of them, he knew well how to keep them; fo that he was never defeated. whatever Forces his Enemy might bring against him. He has deftroyed Fourfcore Thousand Men, in different Rencounters, and Swedeland glories in having above Six hundred Standards. He was fo like King Guftavus, that they have been often taken for one another. He was never coverous; but was observed to be a good Husband. Among fo many Occasions wherein he fignaliz'd himself, what he did when the Swedish Army was worsted at Norlinge, is most remarkable markable; he preserved the Rest, though wholly forsaken by the Allies; and so ordered the Matter, that he taised fresh Troops almost in an instant, and gave his Party Time and Courage to rise up: And, this is all I could learn of this Great Captain, whose Reputation has given thee Curiofity.

Although Don Duarte de Braganza, the new Ring of Portugal's Brother served with great Reputation in the Emperor's Army; yet 'tis said, the Spaniards had been very urgent with this Monarch, to make him be apprehended, as soon as ever they heard the King his Brother was raised to the Throne. But 'tis said, the Emperor was scandaliz'd with such a Proposition, alledging this would be against the Rules of Hospitality: But the Empress's Confessor found such Reasons in his Divinity, as brought over the Emperor to yield, he should be delivered into the Spanish Minister's Hands, who conducted him with a very strong Party to the Castle of Milan; whence he is not like to stir out, till his Brother shall restore the Crown of Portugal to Philip IV. of Spain.

I shall write what remains behind, to the Kaimakan, who has the Honour of being thy Lieutenant; that I may not tire thee, who art to be reverenced as the Instrument of the Wills of the Master of Lights, and all whose Hours are destin'd to the Government of the World.

d

1-

e

c

r

of

n

rh

0-10

re

d

be ell

d.

m.

Cng

ng no

ed

he he May it please him, who of Nothing has created All Things, that thou may it lay, one day, at the Feet of the Grand Signier, the Crowns of all the Monarchs who command in the Infidels Countries, and become thereby the Arbiter of the Universe.

Paris, 18th. of the 1st. Moon, of the Zear 1642.

01

ni th

D

21

af it

E ai th

hi

Si

TO

p

2

6

a

6

H

Ų

LETTER XII.

To the Kaimakam at Constantinople.

This King here has mortified his Parliament, by the Advice of Cardinal Richlieu. The Parliaments are Bodies of Learned Men, who decide all Affairs in the Kingdom, as well Civil, as Criminal; and the Parliament of Paris has a larger Jurisdiction than all others, and as confiderable Prerogatives. What I have to say on this Subject, has happened from the beginning of the last Year; and I now relate it, because I forgat to do it when the thing happened: And I will inform thee, before I enter on the Matter, what obliged heretofore the Kings of France to set up this great Seat of Justice.

The ancient Kings of France gave it Authority of approving and verifying the Edicts and Declarations which they should make, which was a Bar which these wise Princes would fix between the People and the Sovereign Authority. Whence it appeared, that Monarchy was mix'd with Aristocracy; without which, the Wife have thought, that States could not long subfift. And the Princes of this Age have submitted to a Tribunal re-established by themselves the Resolutions they take; to the end they may discharge themselves toward God, to whom they are accountable, as well as other Men; and, to obtain Confidence from their Subjects, in taking from amongst them Arbiters to regulate them. Yet they have ever referved the Liberty of making use of their absolute Power, as is seen in their Letters Patents, where they forget not to infert thefe Words, [For such is Our Will and Pleasure.]

Thefe

These Monarchs also thought hereby to have found out a way to defend themselves from the Importunities of the Grandees, who often demanded such things which could not be granted without Prejudice to the whole Kingdom.

I.

Y

4-

Il

1;

on es.

bs

cng

er

gs

of

a-

ar

he 72-

at

of

ed

nd

m

ng

m.

ng

fe

fe

The Authority of the now reigning King being, out of danger of being fhaken or deffroyed, this Monarch having his Exchequer well flored, has valiant and experienced Captains, flout Soldiers. and numerous Armies, and good Fleets of Ships at Sea; whereby he would make known to this pullate Tribunal, That if it had been fer up to affift the Kings by its Counfels when required, yer it must not pretend, that its Decrees should become Laws to their Sovereigns. He went to the Yarliamene with all the Marks of Grandeur with which he is usually accended on these Days of Ceremony, and with such a great Company of Lords, as made. the Power of this Monarch eafily differred. The gave these Gentlemen to understand, be, have them ratifle, without more ado, the Orders he would lend them, which they ferm Equis, requiring them to be immediately enregistred. He afterwards gave them an express Charge not to concern chemielves henceforwards in Affairs of State and to humble them the more, he declaced ro them. That he would be henceforward the Duporer of Graces and Offices, and befrow Recompences to fuch as deferved them. He added hereunto an Order of giving an Account every Year to his Chancellor of their Deportments, and to come and receive every Year His Maicity's Approbation to continue them in their Offices. a Milk of his Indignation and Authority, he put by the Prefident, and fome Counsellors from their. Places ?!

This bold and politick Action was done (as I may fay) in the midst of Dancings and Divertifements the more to denote the Monarch's Authority; and in the time of such Magnissent Feasings, as became the Pomp of the greatest Emperors in the Palace of the Cardinal for the Marriage of his Niece, Madamosselle de Breze, with the Prince of Conde's Eldest Son, called the Dake D' Anguien; a Prince from whom the World expects great things, and whom all France believes will prove one of the Famousest Princes in Christen-

The Catalonians are obstinate in their Revole; their Deputies have been already seen in this Court, to entreat a good Supply from this King; and, it is not to be doubted, but they will earnestly sue for his Protection: And, France has already sent Troops near those Parts, and its Fleet appears on the Cousts, to encourage this Nation, and mortifie the Spaniards. There are a great many Troops raised here; and this Monarch will have in the Spring, Eight Armies, commanded by Generals of great Valour and Experience, besides these Two Fleets; so that Germany, Lorrain, the Low-Countries, Catan Ionia, and Italy, are like to be exposed to the Miscries of an impoverishing War. Only Germany seems to me able to desend it self.

The vaft Gentus of the French Minister associations all the Princes of Europe; he breaks all their Meafures, and makes a secret War against them in their own Coarts. Nothing can escape his vigilant Care; he keeps his own Secrets so strictly, that his nearest Friends cannot discover them. His Power and Authority are so great, that the Princes of the Blood are nothing in comparison of him; and his Fame makes him as much respected Abroad as at Home.

His Friends affirm, He is ignorant of nothing which is projected in Europe. England is the Place which he has last attack'd, its Civil Wars owing their Original to his Defigns.

I pray Heavens favour thy Just Pretentions, and every day Increase thy Heroick Vertues.

Paris, 15th of the 1st Moon, of the Year 1642.

tho-

aft-

Em-

the uke ects will len-

ole ;

ng;

cnt

OD

ific

41-

ne.

cat

ts ;

144

le-

ms

es

and it

ń

4

g

g

LETTER XIII.

To the most Excellent and most Venerable Musti, Sovereign Prelate of the Holy Religion of the Faithful Musiulmen.

TE of whom I wrote so many particulars, some I I Moons ago, to obey, as I ought, the express Command thou laidft upon me; not only is still living, but is more absolute than ever, in what concerns his Ministry. Yet is it falle that this Cardinal finding nothing more (as thou writest to me, 'cis talked of in Constantinople) to satisfie his Ambition, (which puts him still upon desiring fomething farther; being become the absolute Mafter of what depends on the Kingdom of Lewis XIII.) had defigns of making himfelf absolute Mafter of what concerns Religion. Bur, he was too knowing a Man, to defign the being the Superiour General of all the French Dervises; a Thing which neither the King of France, nor the Pope would permit. I rather think, this Minister's Defign has been, to subject all the Christian Princes to his Mafter's Interefts.

The Ottoman Empire would have some reason to be afraid, were all the Roman Prelates wise enough to chuse this Man for their Pope. We should see, in a short time, all Asia agitated by his Intrigues, against the Followers of the Great Mahomer; and

P 2

thos

deceive

renes.

those that follow Ali, would not enjoy a much greater security. Thou knowest that the greatest Marks which the Popes can give of their Piety during their Pontificat, is to stir up Wars and make Leagues against us to overthrow our Empire. Think then what this great Man would do, were he the Head of the Christians, with those Abilities, and great Intelligences which he every where keeps; seeing, that being only a Subject, and Minister of one Prince, he so governs himself, that there's no Nation, how far soever distant, but holds its Eyes open on his Conduct: And a Pope being always chosen from amongst the Cardinals, and the Pope now reigning being very old, it may happen that whis dangerous Man shall be chosen.

Thou then, whose pure Life makes us believe thou art a Saint, pray the great God to hinder such an Event, which will without question disturb the Empire of him whom he has chosen to humble all other Potentates, and shew on Earth the Greatness of his Power; and, rather than such a Misfortune should be fall us, pray him that has created all things, that this Man's Eyes be opened to know and embrace the true Faith: For, it were better, (if I may say so without displeasing thee) that this Gardinal should be a bad Masti at Constant inople, than a good Pope at Rome, at the Head of all the Naza-

Tis said, that a Foreign King consulted this Oracle, (for he is held in as great Veneration as if he was one,) what Conduct he should hold to live securely: And it is said, the Cardinal made this Answer: That Kings should live in Fear, and then stbey would live in Safety; it being certain they would receive no Porson from the Hands of those who do not present them their Drink, no more than they can receive Wounds from those, whom they keep at a great Distance from them. Those who will not flatter them, will not deceive them; and where they fall think themselves in greatest Safety, that will always be the Place of greateft Danger.

THE PERSON AND THE PARTY OF THE

I am perswaded, Grave and Wise Prelate, thou wilt approve of the Answer of this Minister. Julius Cafar lived in the midft of Combats, but dved in the midft of the Senate.

I.

ch

A.

uke

nk

he

nd

5;

of

oa

es

ys pe

at

re h

ne le

t-

6 d

w

r,

is

n

1-

1-

C

is

n

r

e

e

t

9

Next after God, it is before thee, Great Minister. of Heaven, that I humble my felf, entreating thee to receive graciously the profound Respects of thy Slave Mahmut,

Paris, 25th of the 2d. Moon, of the Tear, 1642.

LETTER XIV.

To his Mother Ocoumiche, at Constantinople.

I may be faid, I have escaped from a mortal I Sickness, and remain in Life, only to hear the Complaints of my Friends, who recite to me their Misfortunes; and of my Kindred who entertain me with the loffes they have fustain'd. Thou addest, my Dear Mother, a new Torment to the Pains I already fuffer, by shedding so many fruitless Tears. O! how cruel is my Country, that gives fo many Occafions of Affliction to those to whom the has given their Birth! Thou hast lost the greatest part of thine Estate in the Fire of Constantinople, and Death has deprived thee of thy second Husband. but a Child when my Father dyed, fo that I could not judge then of thy Grief; neither was I fenfible of my own Loss. Now that I am a Man, I enter into thy Sentiments, I share in thy Grief, and shall do all I can to comfort thee.

Thou hast lost thy First and Second Husband, and thou hast reason to afflict thy self. If the first was an honest Man, 'tis certain the other loved thee extreamly: And the Charms of thy Gountenance have not a little served thee to acquire the Affection of these two Husbands, which thou knewest how to keep by thy Complacencies and blind Obedience to their Wills; and by such a prudent Carriage, as, one may say, thou wouldst force them to love thee, hadst thou not done it by the Charms of thy Beauty.

But, what shall we do in this thy Extream Affliction, and in the troublesome Condition I am for the Grief thou endurest, which mingles my Ink with my Tears? Yet we must endeavour to be comforted with a firm Resolution, not to afflict our selves but at the loss of such things which will never be in our Power to recover. Thou, at the loss of the Reputation which thou hast acquired of a Vertuous Woman; and I, at that of an Honest Man.

When my Father dyed, 'twas not all the Philofophy nor Eloquence of the Greeks which could comfort thee, thy Affiction was ftronger than all their Reasons; and, when those officious Comforters had forfaken thee, thou foughtest Ease to thy Trouble in a new Spoule. Him now thou haft loft, but now thou art still in a Condition of hindring this Lofs from being irreparable. Thy Virtue has never been questioned, and thou art not as yet so old, but thou mayst think of another Husband. Seek a Third, which may make thee forget thy Sorrow for the Second. And if thou findeft him not immediately, or if thou hadft some trouble in feeking a like Comfort to thy Affliction; receive in this Letter the Tears of another Mother, which will shew thee there is a Woman of a far higher Condition, that is more afflicted than thou art.

Paris is still full of Cries and Sighs which come from a Princess of the First Rank. She has now loft a great Prince, her Son, who is flain in a Battel which he had won by a strong Army, of which he was General. Read in my Letter, the lively and tender Expressions of the Grief of this Illustrious Mother, which draw Compassion from his Enemies, who are forced, by the Rules of Civility to make her Visits. Thus does she speak every Day and Hour, to Persons who come to visit her; and when there's no body, the thus fpeaks to would not be be respred at the Lore

her fell and

nd

as ce

ce

on

to

to ne

e,

13

h-

10 ık

e.

11

ill

S

n

o-ld

n

t-

t,

g

15 0

d.

y

n

n

n

h

r

This unfortunate Woman is por a Moment without fighing; and one would chink, by her Language, the intended to recall the Soul which has quitted the Body of her Son, the unhappy Count of Soiffons: Poor Count, a Son so tenderly loved, and so greatly deferved it, where is thy Body now to be found, dyed in Blood, and in that of thy Enemies? What Victory? Where are those glorious Marks, that (bould give me so great Joy, and which give me such cause of Despair? Why did I bring thee forth into the World, unfortunate Son, if I must so soon life thee? Miserable Mother, Unhappy Son! How art thou a Conqueror, when I fee no other Trophy of thy Vistory, than thy Death ? I hear from all Parts, that the Count is Victorious, and yet I bear every where that his Enemies Rejoyce. I fee, dear Son, all thy Domesticks that followed thee return without Wounds, and jet I do not fee their Mafter. None of them can tell me where be is, and in what Place their General lies, who fought with so great Valour, and Success to his Party. But, they are all agreed, the Battel was won, that my Son is a Conqueror, and that be has loft his Life. Unfortunate Fight, which has mude equally bemailed, the Death of the Victorious General by his Mother, and the Defeat by the Vanquifbed! Would to God thou hadft been vanquished, thou mighteft have lived, I should not have been in this Condition of following thee. Twould have been no Shame to have been defeated, it would have been only a Misfortune, which would have been common to thee with Pompey and Hannibal, to whom Antiquity bad nothing to impute, but their ill Fortune. A fincere Reconciliation, a Pardon, or a Peace, might make all that is past forgotten. A voluntary Exile might have appensed the King's Anger, and perhaps disarm'd the Cardinal; my Son might have liv'd, France would not have been troubled, a Mother would not have been at this day comfortless, and the Count's Enemies would not have rejoyced at his Loss. But to my Grief. nothing of this has happen'd. Alas! the Stay of an Illustrious Family is dead : Unhappy Mother, how are all thy Hopes vanished? But, good God, how was this my dear Son taken out of the World? I know but too well, that his Enemies laid continually Snaves for him. Methinks I Jee my Son's Murtherers give him the deadly frobe in the Heat of the Fight, and in the instant be was going to enjoy his Victory. Ab! my dear Son. Ah! unfortunate Mother ! why did not I breath out my last on the dead Body of this Son, so worth the Esteem of all the World, and whom I so dearly loved? Wby did'ft not thou, too powerful Minister, give me the Mortal Blow rather than let me fee fo fad a Tragedy : Do you kill me that bear me; or thou, my Son, give me thy Hand, to descend into the Grave where thou art to be buried.

But my Reason fails me; I must for my Son's Honour, stifle these Motions of Weakness: 'Tis true, he lives no longer; but he died in the Bed of Honour, with his Sword in his Hand; he died full of Glory; he died Victorious; and even in dring, vanguished his Enemies.

Les us cease from shedding Tears: But what do I say? he died assassinated; a Victim sacrificed to the Vengeance of his Enemies, by the blackest Treason, its clear.

And yet I would live: No, I must die; let us imitate the Greatness and Courage of those illustrious Women,

no

id

ė-

at ot n

es

f,

in

is

00

1.

10

i,

it

e

e

10

5

d

1

who threw themselves on the Pile whereon their Husbands were burnt: My Son is more dear to me silet us then die, and weep no more; These Tears are fruitless; but let us live, seeing Heaven ordains it, and let us live to die every day: I shall have ever present before mine Eyes, the Death of my Son; I shall see every day his bloody Body; I shall continually remember his respects, his Tenderness for me; and I shall never forget the tender and violent Possion which I had never forget the tender and violent Possion which I had for this Son, for whom alone I lived: but at least, cruel Cardinal, restore me his dead Body: thou hast thy Revenge, he is no longer alive; give this sad Consolation to a desolate Mother; perhaps this Sight will work the Essect thou desirest, cruel Wretch as thou art; it will unite my Soul to that of my Son.

Dear Mother, if thou canst not comfort thy self by so great an Example of Missortune to this Princess, it will be hard for thy Son to say any thing which can diminish thy Grief. Imitate this Illustrious Woman, who having suffered whatever Sortow and Despair can do to a Mother who loves vehemently, and with Reason suffers her self to be perswaded, not to give an entire Victory to her Enemies, who triumph still over her Son, by the Grief which they see his Death has caused. She has been ruled by the Advice of her Friends, and received great Comfort from a Letter sent her by the Ring, written with his own Hands:

Cousin, The Grief which you shew at your late Loss obliges me to testifie the Share which I have in it, and the Displeasure I conceive at the fault of him which his caused it. And though I ought not to be sorry by reason of the Conjuncture wherein it has happed, yet I must beartily condole with you, and contribute what I am able to your Consolation.

I can fay nothing more to thee, my most honoured Mother, unless it be, that thou shalt always have in me a moft Obedient Son; and if thou takeft a Third Pusband, thou wile be perhaps less unfortunate; but pleafe thy felf.

The great God, who has Created all Things, and provides for their Necessicies by his Infinite Goodpefs, comfort and fill thee with his Bleffings.

Paris, 25th. of the 2d Moon, of the Tear 1642. Cardinal

LETTER XV.

To the Grand Signior's Treasurer.

He Priest which plaid the Tarpaulin, whom the French call the Archbishop of Bordeaux, of whom Thelieve I have given thee some Account the 10th. Mon of the year, 1637. has loft the Credit which he had with the King, and is at present disgraced. The Opmion of his Valour at Court is much leffened, by his not hindring, with the Fleet he commanded, the Spaniards from putting Succours into Tarragone, a famous Sea-Port near Barcellona. They loft the laft Year, Twelve Gallies in Fight against the French Naval Forces; but having fitted a mightier Fleer, they have put into this Place the Succours they intended. The Archbishop could not, or would not hinder them, which will be the Cause that this Place will not come fo foon under the Power of the French.

"Tis faid, that this Prelate was banish'd France, and was retited into a City fituated on the Rhofne, ngmed Avignon, and belongs to the Roman Prelate.

It being a thing very usual to run down the Unfortunate, all the World blames this Prelate, having not always mer with equal Success on the Sea in

I

ru-

nd d-

m

b.

ch

d.

nnto

n 1-

C-

ac

of

d

-

.

g

n

c

the Employs he fought, and that it did not at all agree with his Function of Archbiftop; which he might have performed with Applause, in imitating his Predecessor who was his Brother, the Cardinal de Sourdis; and who had left him a Diocess well regulated, fich, surnished with great store of Churches well served, Pastors of great Piety and Learning, whom this Man had procured and settled in his Diocess with great Care, which made his Death extremely lamented.

The Catalonians are at length become this King's Subjects; they maintain their Revolt with the French Forces, and strengthen themselves after the Example of the Portugueses. They fight with such Courage, that they come off continually Conquerors; but I shall make no Relation of their Fights, nor of the Blood which is spilt on either Side, which are Matters I do not care to treat of.

God give thee a continual Tranquility of Mind,
make thee in love with Peace, and preferve in thee that vigilant Spirit, fo necessary for the keeping the Treasure entrusted to thee.

Paris, 25th of the 2d Moon, of the Tear 1642.

But Tillian

LETTER XVI.

To the Kaimakam.

HE Cardinal Favourite of France, has such long Hands, that he makes Seizures in those Places which are not subject to his Jurisdiction; and when he has made them, he keeps them without any thoughts of restoring them. There's no Probability at present, That this bold Politician will lay Hands on what belongs to the Grand Signior: However, I have some stasson to write this.

There has been carried, some Days since, an illustrious Prisoner into the Castle of the Wood of Vincennes; and thou shalt hear this new way of apprehending a Great Man in another's House, and in the Court of a Foreign Sovereign, who is Absolute in his own Estates. This Prisoner was apprehended in the midst of the finest Ladies in the Court of Turin, at a magnificent Ball which the Dutchess Regent of this Estate gave in her Palace. It was this Princess whom I mentioned to thee, who was Widow to Vistor Amadeus, Duke of Savoy; and Sister to the King which now so happily reigns over the French.

The Dutchess, who had a particular Confideration for this Prisoner, could not behold this Exploit of the Cardinal's without extreme Vexation. His Name is, if I be not mistaken, Count Philip d' Aglie, a Person of great Quality; and, whose excellent Parts and Courage do yet render him more illustrious than his Birth

'Tis not yet known, why the Cardinal undertook fuch a bold Stoke; though 'tis faid, the Council of France has had great Reasons to secure the Person of this Favourite. The chief Motive, they say, was, That he was carrying on some Designs against the Interests of this Crown with the Cardinal of Savoy; whom, 'tis thought, he would have married to the Widow of Amadana his Brother.

Richlieu arrempted not to carry off Gount Philip, till having made leveral Tryals to remove him from the Gourt of Turin, under the presence of some Embaffic, to which he would never confert; so that his Obstinacy cost him his Liberty. And the dad we

The Duche's greatly complains, and reproaches the King her Brother, with the Violation of the Right of Nations and Sovereignry; but only her own Court are fensible to these Complaints, they being not heard in that of France; and her Emberdal baffador had been feen there, in a suppliant Posture, humbly suing for the Count's Liberty; or that he might be sent on an Embassic to Rome; or at least-wise, That in leaving the Castle of Vincennes, he might be imprison'd somewhere in Paris.

The Cardinal answered the Supplications of the Ambassador of Savoy, That the King, his Master, did not apprehend Philip, and being him into France, but out of regard to the Interests of his Sister of Savoy; and that she might be assured, that for her fake he should be well nied.

of

of

d te

d

7,

W

0

e

.

t

Thou may'ft fee by this Answer a great Haughtiness, and frivolous Reasonings, which sufficiently denote, that this great Minister does not love to be contradicted, or opposed in the Resolutions he cakes: And if an Account of what's done in the World, must be given to any one Man alone, he would take it very ill, if it were to any body but himself.

Ishall not fail to send thee the Books thou requirit, and inform thee the best I can of the false or true D. Sebastiam, King of Portugal, whom his Subjects do believe to be still alive, when I have made sufficient Enquiries into the Truth of the Matter. I kis, with a profound Humility, the Hem of thy rich Vest, on which I fasten the Lips of a Respectful and Obedient Slave.

in he had be a located to the thir manner of a track of the third than the same of a track of the same of the same

d feet of Philip PV. King of Spain, he has made a st Count Duice att varec 3

Paris, 21st, of the 3d. Moon, of the Tear 1642.

LETTER XVII.

To the Reis Effendi, Secretary of the Empire.

There was found last Night, a Man dead in the Streets of Paris, who seems not to be above 30 Years old; he is a Spaniard, and had about him a Letter, or Memoir, which it seems he had written to some Confident at Madrid, in these Terms.

fome Confident at Madrid, in these Terms. " Cardinal Richlies told me, he did not know the " Hand nor Signature of Count Olivarez's Secretary; " and that when he should fill up his figned Blank, " which I preferred him, and let fall the pretended " Letter of the Secretary into the King of Spain's " Hands, he faw nor what Advantage could refult " hence to the Hing of France, his Mafter. I am ve-" ry willing, added he, that the King of Spain " should suspect the Count, or Secretary, of Infide. " lity, and of having some Commerce with me; " but, it would not be advantageous to us, he should " be plainly convinced of it, feeing the greatest hab-" pinels France could have, is, that Count Olivarez " his Ministry should be perperual : For being the er most unhappy of all the Favourites that have " ever been in the Place he possesses, all good French-" men are obliged to pray to God to give him a long " Life, and to continue him ever in the King his Maker's Favour, to perpetuate, by his Counsels, the Disgraces of Spain.

He pursued his point of Raillery in this manner:

"Of a Duke of Braganza, Olivarez has made a King
of Portugal; Of a King of France, a Count of Barcellona; Of a Sovereign Duke of Lorrain, a Vaffal;
Of a Prince Cardinal, a Knight Errant; Of a Lord of Monacho, a Duke and Peer of France: and, in fine, of Philip IV., King of Spain, he has made a Count Duke Colivarez.

This is all I could get from fo great and illustri-

The just God, who has sent us his Prophet, ever direct thy Actions, that thou mayest enjoy an happy Eternity, and give thee Opportunities of doing good.

Paris, 24th of the 4th Moon, of the Year 1642.

e

.

g

5,

n

LETTER XVIII.

To William Vospel, a Christian of Austria.

GOD be praised, thy Patriarch Elias, and his Companion; foralmuch, as I see thou are a Saint and content in the Religion of the Bare footed, Friars which thou haft embraced. Thou ftirreft me up to do Good, and encourageft me to fuffer, and become serious enough to renounce the Pleasures of the World, feeing thou traceft me a Way fo necessisry to walk in, in order to arrive at Heaven. I did not believe, indeed, I confess it, thou wert endued with that Constancy, and was afraid thou would'ft change, but, seeing thou hast the Courage of keeping thy Resolution, and enduring all the Incommedioulness which is to be met with in that kind of Life which thou haft embraced: I am forry for my Sufpicions, and profess I have all due Esteem for thee. I love thee as much as one honest Man ought to love another, who, having found out the True Good, has ran impetuoufly after it; and who has past immediately from a foft and volupruous Life, to the Severities of an auftere Religion, in fearch of an affored Port, which is more usually found in Sufferings and Macerations, than in Delights and Pleasures. There is one thing amongst others, which extreamly pleases me, in the Order thou hast entred; All things are in Common amongst you; one Key opens an Hundred Doors; you have no Meum of Tuum; all clad in the same Fashion, and all go bare-footed; you eat at the same Table, and no body has better or worse Fare than another. In five, your Prayers are the fame, and fo are your Vows of Poverty.

But, prithee tell me, what would a Thief have found in thy Cell, whom I faw yesterday hang'd with a Key about his Neck? He had the Dexterity of opening with his Key all sorts of Locks, and has done a Thousand Roguish Exploits, which have at length brought him to the Gallows. He told the People, he dyed a most happy Man, as having practised with great Success an Art inferiour to none; That the only Crime he thought he had been guilty of for this 30 Years, was his committing but small Theses; That had he found the Doors always open, he had never entred into any House; and he exhorted Magistrates to chastise only those, who suffered themselves to be robbed.

Spanish Authors have written, There's no Law which allots Penalties to those that rob with Prudence and Ingenuity; thus they call those who sheal wherewithal to appeale the Envious who would accuse them, the Witnesses which might serve to convict them, and the Magistrates by whom they are to be judged: So that the Thief that shall have stolen for himself, and for all others I now mention'd, shall be ever sent away absolved. Which makes me think, that These is of that Nature of Women; for both one, and the other seem at this day to be necessary Evils, just as sleys seem only good now adays to preserve what may be stole, and not to hinder it from being so.

How many things has the Injuffice of some People authorized for the Safeguard of a Town? 'I's not enough to have a strong Garrison of Soldiers; n

in

at fe

le

e d

y

15 ıt

2-

,

H

1,

-

Three Elements are not sufficient to defend it against a greater Power, that would oppress it. The Earth is raised, to make thereof Trenches; the deepest Ditches are dried up, whatever quantity of Water may be in them; and, Fire is enclosed in Cannons; the Essection which are terrible. If thou surveyest that, thou wilt find in several Towns, Palaces which have more Gates than Thebes had heretofore: And, if thou countest the Keys which serve to open them, thou wilt find the Iron they are made of, to cost more than the Doors themselves.

Men are contented to use these Keys, according to the common Use they seem to be designed for; their Ambition makes them serve for Marks of Honour in several Princes Courts, where they be Recompences for Services, for Vertue and Valour. The Golden Key in Spain, which the great Lords wear, denotes, That they know how to open the Gate of Favour. And its the same in Germany, and especially in the Emperor's Court.

Happy was Arcient Rome, whose Citizens were so wise, that being advised to turn the Front of their Houses on that side where they could not be observed by their Neighbours, they answered the Architect, We rather desire our Houses may be overlooked into, because we do nothing wherein we fear a Surprice. Whereas Modern Rome, on the contrary, may be termed Unhappy, wherein there are not enough Gates, and Porters of them, to conceal what is done in the most retired places of their Palaces.

It is in this City, where Luxury grew to that height under the first Emperors; that all Mens Studies were, to find out new Pleasures.

But I must end this Discourse of Keys, of Doors, and Door-Keepers; I must not expect to reform the World, nor would I weary thy Patience. Pardon me my passing from the Cell, to the Story of the Thief whom I saw executed; and from the Thief.

Thief, to a Discourse of Keys, and other things with which I have entertained thee. I was so full of it, that I could not forbear the Discourse, no more than I can now to speak of the Subtiley of the Spaniards, who have vaunted of the Worth of their Escurial, by the great Number of the Keys which belong to it; like that foolish Emperor, who valued the Greatness of Rome, by the great weight of Spiders Webs which were there. The Spaniards affirm, there are so many Doors to this stately Edisice, that the Keys which serve to open them, weigh a-above Ten Thousand Weight.

But 'cis time to end this tirefome Letter. Let me then counfel thee, to warch over thy Confeience, as the Parifians do over their Shops, to prevent Violences. Here are so many great and small Thieves, that should they be punished, as they were chastised in Syria, where the same Punishment is imposed on him that is robbed, as he that robs; this great Town would be soon unpeopled, or become a Psison to an infinite Number of People, who would be found faulty.

May it please the Great God, who should be adored by all Greatures, to incline the Great Prelate (after thou art delivered from the Burthen of the Flesh,) to place thee among the number of those, for whom the Church has a pious Veneration; and, respect thy Ashes in such a manner, as I hope, thy Holy and Exemplary Life will deserve.

redly and Exemplary Life will deter

Paris, 24th of the 4th Moon, of the Year 1642.

and the state of

LETTER XIX.

To the Venerable Mufri.

Hou wilt not think me troublefome, if thou remembrest the Order thou hast given me; and fought rather to hazard the tiring thee by frequent Letters, than be accused of neglect for not obeying thee. Obedience most needs be agreecable, where the Command is made with Wildom. When I write to the Grand Vizir, 'tis in trembling , and if I write to the Kaimakam, I am not without Hope; and I fend no Letter to the other Baffa's without Inquietude, and great Trouble. As to what concerns my Friends, I divert my felf in writing to them. But, when it is to thee that I write, I may fay, 'tis, that I may hope, live, and obtainin the other World, that happy frace spoken of by our Holy Prophet; that Life which is to be the Recompence of all those who shall perform good Actions, whilst they dwell among Men.

n

it

e

e e .,

Cardinal Richlien would willingly be absolute in Matters of Religion as thou art; he would also be thought a Saint, but he knows not how to be one: And, indeed, he would be every thing. However he does abundance of things which thou dost not, and pretends to be above thee, because he does not live as thou dost. This Man, whose Head is full of the Affairs of the World, concerns himself in whatever passes in Europe; one only Employ cannot satisfie him; he is not contented with being the Favourite of a great King, under whose Authority he governs all things: Some time ago, 'twas reported he would make himself a Patriarch. He aspires extream high, undertakes the most difficult Matters, and takes a fingular Pleasure in making use of excraordinary Means for the Execution of his Projects, that Posterity, and Historians may write, That being come into the World with a small Fortune, he died Rich; and being born in the Condition of a private Man, he lived in the State of a great Prince: Observe (Venerable Prince of that Religion, which can alone be approved of by him who drew the World out of Nothing) two remarkable Stroaks of this French Tiberius, which

I have learn'd but lately.

This Cardinal fept to Madrid incognito, a General of certain Dervises; a Man of a fit Genius to second his own, of a piercing and subtle Wit, and very understanding in Secular Affairs, after having given him express Order, that as foon as ever he should be in Spain, he should do such and such a thing, and, that at his return into France, he should remit into his Hands, alone, the Memoirs of what he had transacted. This Monk succeeded very well in the Employ he undertook; but, in his Return, the Cardinal fent an express Command to him, to deliver, before he entred into France, all his Papers, into the Hands of a Gentleman who brought him his Letter. This Dervis obey'd; but he was difgraced, and the Cardinal maintained, 'Twas a Crime to obey in this Occasion; for, having once received an Order to entrust no body with these Papers, but himfelf, he could not be excused for delivering them to others; and, for this Reason, he forbad him to fer foot within the Kingdom. This poor Religious died some time after, desperate at-his Usage; and perhaps, this is the first time a Man has been punished, for too punctual Obedience.

'Tis not many Moons, fince there came Post a Person of Quality from Italy, who brought considerable News to the Cardinal. 'Tis impossible for me, to express the Caresses this Favourite made him.

And,

.

C

15

re

1-

6-ar

m.

nd,

And, to denote his Joy, he immediately presented him with a rich Diamond, and made him hope for ftill greater Recompences; yet, this same Person that had brought this fo good News, was carried to the Baffile as foon as he came out of the Cardinal's Closer, where he remained for some Moons without seeing any body; so that he imagined himself all that while in a Dream; but, at length, his Prison Doors were fet open, and the Cardinal would see him, and made him be given as many Hundred Crowns as he had past over Days in his Solitude. He accompanied this Present he made him, with all the Civilities imaginable, and faid these Words to him: Thou art not to blame, and yet I could not but punish thee for my Fault, when I made thee enter into my Closet affoon as thou camest from Italy, to bring me fo advantageous News. The great Defire I had to know the Particulars of the Business, made metorget to take off from my Table a Writing of great Importance, which thou mightest have read entire; which contained the Revolt of Catalonia, and the Demands of this Province, and the Intrigues of France, which caufed this Insurrection : And the Knowledge of so important a Mystery, might make my Prince lose the Acquisition of fo Rich a Province; fo that I could not imagine a more fafe and speedy Remedy, than to fout thee up in a place, where it was impossible for thee to make any use of the Notices thou didft get, by my Imprudence. But, things being at present in such a Condition, wherein 'tis impossible France should receive any prejudice; Irestore thee thy Liberty, and entreat thee to forget the Severity which Reasons of State have put me upon. Receive from my Hands, the Prefent which the King my Mafter makes thee; and be pleased to reckon me, amongst the Number of thy particular Friends.

I prostrate my self again at thy Feet, Holy Prelate, increasing thy Benediction, and that thou wilt look

34

ah

look on me as one of thy most obedient Children's having such a respect to thy Holiness, as is due to the greatest Minister of Heaven, that ever interpreted the Holy Alexan in the Empire of the Faithful.

I also intreat thy Prayers, that God having regard to the Supplications which thou shalt offer him, would give me the grace to live honestly, and serve the Sultan faithfully, and that I may die in the Religion of my Fathers.

Paris, 24th of the 4th Moon, of the Year 1642.

LETTER. XX.

To the Kaimakam.

THE Books of the Arabian Geber, are not to be found in that Language which thou defireft them in; I have fought for them, I believe, in above two hundred Booksellers Shops, and there's not one of them knows, they were ever translated into the Tongue in which thou wouldst have them.

Tis now some time since these Books have been common in France; and there are several Persons who apply themselves to Dr. Geber's Science; but there's no Translation of them into any of the Common Languages of Europe. When I enquired for this Book, the Booksciliers asked me several different Questions; and especially, Whether I songht for Receipts to prolong Life. Some there were, who asked me grinning, Whether my Design was to fix some Volatile Deity; and others answered the Question I made them on the Book of the learned Geber, only by a Silence, accompanied with some some Smiles; and at the same time parting into my Hands a Book, and saying to me, Here's what you look for; This is what you want, Monsieur Abbot: And this Book treated of Impossible Things; Of the Quadrature of the Circle in Geometry; of the Philosophers Stone in Chymistry; of the Perfolion of the Orator in Rhetorick; of a Republick, such a one as Plato would have in his Politicks; and, of the Perpetual Movion in the Mathematicks.

I did not feem to be much moved at these Menchants Dealings with me; but I found a very honest Capacin, who put me in hopes of recovering the Geber thou seekest; for he assured me be saw it in Chaldee, or in the Egyptian Language, in a Learned Man's Library, without giving meany Encouragement to think it may be purchased, because he that poliefles it, is not needy of Money.

0

be

eft

ve

ne

he

een

ons

but

the red dif-

ere

fign

we-

the

with

ome

Thou wile not, perhaps, be displeased, to know what this Religious told me concerning Chymyflry; and he appeared to me, not only to have Learning, but Experience. He affured me there were in Paris alone, several Thousands of Men that applied themselves to this Exercise; and, that there are above Four Thousand Authors who treat of this Science: That King Geber was the most knowing and clearest in his Expressions; and yet there are none but such as are real Philosophers and wholly bene to shel Study of Nature, that can eafily underfland him, Whereunto he added, there were feveral People who laboured with great Patience, but few with those Qualifications which are necessary to find Specels: He affirm'd, that speculative Know-ledge is fruitles; that one must have a long Praclice, and continual Exercise : that most People labour to no purpole, because they do not take Nasure for their guide, no more than the Operations the makes in Minerals; because, according to Geber. the Principles of the Art, should be those of Na.

INTE

ture it self; and that it is only in Metals we can find Metals; and that it is, in fine, by Metals one can fucceed in the making of perfect Metals.

This good Derois maintained, that the true way to proceed to the Perfection of this great Work, confifts in the Union of the Mineral Spirits purified by Art, with the perfect Metallick Bodies, having first volatilized them, and then fixed them, in conferving all the Radical Humidity, and in augmenting the Natural Heat, by a different Concoction of the Composition; which comes by this marvellous Ferment, which makes all this Mass boyl, and puts it into a Fermentation: So that this marvellous Commost subtle Parts of the melted Metal, by the external Fire, and radically diffolving it, it ripens it, and purges it from whatever is not of the Ellence of Gold, and of Mercury, till the whole be driven out to an entire Perfection: Which made the Mafter of Mafters, the Learned Geber fay, That this perfect Elixir being the pure Subflance of Metals, it feeks in the melted Metals, that which is of the fame Nature with it felf, and perfects it.

Now, as it is impossible for the Artist to produce any thing that is new according to his baney, but only to join or separate what Nature has produced; Raymand Lully would have be anderstand, that the Body in this Art is the Metallick Being, in which lies the Mineral Spirit, because the Metals are nothing else but this Spirit, of which consists the Philasophers Stone; and this Spirit is properly the Vertue of Minerals, in which is contained the Spring of Metals. But the famous Geber has plitting shewed that this Stone is wholly created and formed by Nature; to which the Artist neither adds or diminishes any thing, but only makes it change its place by his Preparation, which in every other respect is

nfelefs.

ti

70

h

na

W

fo

th

pl

This Fryar affirms, This Mineral Body, entirely Spirituous as it is, has yet four forts of Superfluities, of which it must be purged by the Hand of the Artist, viz. a great Humidity, the Earth which is found therein; the ordinary Sulphur which burns, and the Salt which is corrosive; and it must be purified by Calcination, Dissolution, Sublimation, and Fixation, that there may alone remain the Radical Humidity six'd and permanent; which being afterwards united in an indissoluble manner to the perfect Body, composes this incomparable Body, which is so much sought, and so seldom found, and which is an hot Elixir, powerful to ripen and purific all Imperfect Metals, and convert them into Gold or Silver.

There is afterwards given an Aftivity to the Gold, in refining it by new degrees of Fire, added to that which it already had.

¢

ich out is

icc B

his

Thus far went our Conversation, when an old Woman came unhappily upon us, and bereaved me of the Satisfaction of learning of this Religious, some important Secret which he seemed inclinable to entrust me with. This indiscreet and impertinent Woman, using the Liberty ordinary with the People of this Countrey, cruelly interrupted our Conversation; and I remained struck, as it were, with a Flash of Lightning, when this Knowing Fryar told me, That the Arrival of this Woman forced him to take his leave of me; and he prepared to be gone, like a Man that was expected for some weighcy Affair; when casting his Eyes on my Countenance, he perceived the Perplexity and Confusion which this Separation caused in me; and to comfort me, he said thus in my Ear : I know very well, Friend, thou hast an inquisitive Soul, and designeft Great Things; meet me at my Cell, and in the mean time, I'll tell thee, for thy Confolation, in plain Terms, That it has always been, and ever shall

fe

F

C

d

V

cl

u

0

n

f

t

h

1

I

C

1,

J

,I

1

be my Opinion, that to labour profitably, one must follow Raymond Lully's Rules. Thu great Philosopher affirms, and I am of his Mind, I hat to make Gold, one must have Gold and Mercury, and Mercury and Silver so make Silver: But, I understand by Mercury, that Mineral Spirit so refined and purified, that it aurisies the very Seed of Gold, and argentises that of Silver. These are the very Words he spake to me.

But, in leaving me, I entreared him to tell me, Whether it was easie to artain to the Accomplishment of this Great Work, and what was necessary for that Great End.

He answer'd me, 'Twas very hard, which made almost all People despair of compassing it; there being very few People, on whom Heaven bestowed the necessary Qualifications to acquire this precious Art; that these Qualifications consisted in being a true Philosopher, and in being perfectly skilled in Nature, in having a Patience Proof against all Disappointments; and, that a Man should be in the Flower of his Age, ftrong and vigorous, to endure Labour, well furnished with Wealth, and indefati-Whereunto he added, That if any of these gable. Qualities were wanting, one might be certain, that the other would be so also; That a Man who is unacquainted with Nature, works like a blind Man, And, that should one fail of Success, the First, Second, Third, Fourth, nay, Fifth, or Sixth time in. the Operation, he is a Fool that then grows weary, and does not again begin to fet at work, with the same Earnestness; and Hopes of Success; and that should a Man want a vigorous Health, Labour would weaken, and make him faint; and that, in fine, if one be without sufficient Estate, 'tis impossible the Work should succeed; which demands an entire Man, and fuch a one as minds nothing elle.

How

af

nuft

rake

eral

very

are

me,

ary

ide

ere

ed

a

in if-

he re ti-

fe

ac is

n,

ek,

9

2-

r,

5

g

S

This Dervik moreover told me, as a thing certain, That several Persons had attained to the Perfection of this Undertaking; which emplys fo great a Number of Vertuofo's, in all Parts of the World: For, were it not fo, there would not be that Quantity of Gold, there is; for, all that of the Indies was not sufficient to latisfie so many People, who mind nothing else but gaining of it; and that, in fine, such great Treasures which are heap'd up, and the Gold that runs in Traffick, never came out of the Mines which are in the Mountains, but that a great part has been made by Artiffs. He moreover assured me, That the Overseers of the Mint in France affirmed, as a thing beyond all Queflion, That there was more Gold brought to them, than ever came from Foreign Parts; which made him conclude, that the Art is true, and that no Man need doubt that there is such a Thing as the Philosopher's Stone.

This Conversation, although interrupted, made me cease being incredulous; and if I were an Heretick in this Matter yesterday, I begin now to have Faith and believe, only 'tisa Work extream disticult; and I do no longer wonder, there are so many People who deceive others, without any Design of doing it; and am not surprized, they should apply themselves to all forts of Persons, not excepting Princes; For they believe still, they shall meet with Success; and not being able to surnish the Charges they must be ae, they use all forts of Tricks to move those whom Covetousness renders, in this Occasion, very easie to be perswaded; and all in general meet in their Operations, with great Hunger,

Cold, Labour and Smoak.

It feems, as if that which hindred those who have been fortunate enough to attain the Perfection of this Work, from communicating their Knowledge in this Matter, was the dread of their Prince's

Q 2

Power

Power; as having oft experienced, that they are jealous at the Riches of a private Person. Soveraigns cannot endure, that a mean Wretch, born amonest the dregs of the People, should have in his Power wherewithal to make himfelf happy and several others; which obliges them to deprive these Philosophers of the means of working, and makes them fabour in secret, and conceal themselves with more care, when they have finished their Work. Great Men cannot easily suffer private People to become Mafters, by virtue of this Art, and to do all those Wonders which by this marvellous Metal may be wrought in their Closers. without going to Peru, and ramfacking there the Bowels of the Earth: They know very well, that this long'd for Gold, produces every thing; gives Reputation; makes them follow one, who fled from a Man before; corrupts those who appear the most incorruptible, opens the strongest Doors, overthrows whole Armics, caufes a Man to change his mind in a moment, makes him that was a poor Man, presently talk Sentences. Nay, many Christians affirm this Metal to be fo efficacious, that it Araws the Souls out of a doleful Abode, call'd Pareasory; so that it feems, as if it appealed God's Wrath, and brings Men to Heaven.

These fore-mentioned Reasons, obliged the cruel Diocletian, to put to Death as many Chymists as could the found in Egypt; and, at the same time to cause their Books to be burnt, lest the People who were naturally ingenious, being become too powerful by the Art of making Gold, should undertake a War against the Roman Empire. But we find, in the antient Writings of the Arabians, that Moses having learn'd of God himself the Art of perfectly knowing Nature, and that of the Conversion of Metals, and making Gold, to write in Letters form'd of this Matal, the Law he prescribed the Israeliver: He taught taught it to Carun, a poor Man, but his intimate Friend, and near Kinsman; who being become very rich by means of this Science, had heav'd up immedie Treasures, and built himself Forty houses, which were filled with Gold, but were all swallowed up, and buried in the Earth, by the vertue of Moses's Rod, with the Master of them, whom so great Riches had rendred proud, and made him think of withdrawing himself from obeying this Great Servane of God. having falsly accused him before the People of divers Crimes, and especially of having abused

a Virgin.

re ern

in ve

n-

d

i-

r-

S, ie

It

es

d

c

5,0

r

t

The last thing which was discovered in the Venetian Territories was a great Urn, found in an hollow Cave. In this Urn, which was confiderably large, there was another less, and in it Two Pots, one full of Gold reduced into Liquor, and the other of Silver, of the fame Fashion, and a Lamp which feem'd to have burne for many Ages. 'Twas known by the Characters on this Urn, that they were confecrated to the God Pluto; and there were on them Latin Verses, which shewed, That Maximus Olibeus had been the Author of them. Those then who Tay this Are is falfe, that the beginning of it is a Lye, the middle of the Work meer Fatigue, and the End Beggery, have not faid true themselves. and yet one cannot accuse them, as having not, in fome fore, spoke the Truth.

I befeech the Sovereign Creator of all things, from whom alone we hold what we know, as being the Great and Wife Architect of Nature, that he would beftow on thee the Science of the learned Geber; that thou may'ft be as rich as Solomon: but above all, that he would grant thee the Spirit of Aglans, who was ever feen to live content.

Paris, 20th. of the 5th. Moon,

LETTER XXI.

To Mehemet, an Eunuch Page to the Sultaness.

"He Adventure which thou relatedft happened in the Seruglio, shews, that Women are expofed to great Accidents. Their Condition is unhappy when they are handsome, but more when they are homely and deformed. The Fathers, Brethren, and Husbands guard the former, as Cerberus guarded the Gates of Hell; and the others guard themselves, and look on all things with Eyes of Envy and Difcontent, which makes them empoy fon every thing. But that which happens amongst us, is very different from what's in France, where Women enjoy almost a Liberty equal to that of Men. Not but that we (ce notable Adventures happen there; wirness the Queen, who is Mother to a great King now Reigning, and yet lives in Exile, and as a Fugative, amongst Strangers, through the Credit of Cardinal Richlien, for whom the has not all the Deference he expected. And an ancient Lady, (I may call her fo, now the does not hear me,) told me fuch things fome Days paft, on this occasion, which I can scarce believe my felf, did I not know them to be true from elfe-where.

I am farther told, that this Cardinal, not having fucceeded in the Delign he had of marrying his Niece with a Prince of the Blood, intended (if he could) to marry her to the King's Brother : But there's no great likelihood, but so able a Minister must fee into the mischievous Confequences into which this Promotion would bring him; for, it would undoubtedly draw on him the Hatred of all the Great People in the Kingdom. And, I would

ed

0-

y

re

n,

5, C. y.

nor be mentioned at Constantinople, for the Author of all the News talk'd of at Paris.

But 'tis certain, this Priest sent the Chancellor, a Venerable Person, and by his Office a Man of great Authority, to seize on this Princes's Papers, in hopes he might meet with some Letter which might savour that Design. The Chancellor executed the Order he had received, but sound nothing of what the Cardinal pretended; so that this Persecution served only to manifest this Prince's Virtue, who lives in such a manner, as may not only serve as an Example to all Queens, but all the Women in the World.

Some time after, this same Chancellor being come to compliment the Queen on the Birth of the Dauphin, she told him in a composed manner, but very pleasantly, That this Visit was very different from that she had received from him about a Year past.

If Persons that are seated in the Highest Degrees, be not secure from the bold Arrempts of those who are infinitely below them, and who are born to serve them; the beautiful Circassan should comfort her self in the missortune she had of being accused. If her Innocency be well proved, she will be the more pleasing to Ibrahim, and the false Accusation laid against her, will be a new Charm to him: whereas should she be found Guilty, we must grant she deserves the most dreadful Punishments; for having violated, if I may so express my self, the Sacred Nights of the Seraglio.

However, the young Persian was found disguised in Woman's Apparel in some of the neighbouring Stables: And though he, in the mid'st of the Torments he suffered, died without confessing any Thing; yet it cannot be said, he died Innocent,

after fuch an Attempt,

I hope thou wilt inform me what has happened fince thy last Letter, and in what manner the Advenue venture of this beautiful Slave shall be ended. I shall be much troubled for her, if she be Innocent; and cannot be wholly free from Compassion for her, if the prove Guilty.

Leave not off writing to me; and if it be possible, be not weary of loving me. I speak in the Presence of our boly Prophet, I love thee with the same Affection as ever, and I dare not utter an Untruth before him.

Paris, 20th. of the 5th. Moon, of the Year 1642.

LETTER XXII.

To the Kaimakam.

TIS about 60 Years, fince D. Sebastian, King of Portugal, died in Africk, by the Hands of the Moors; and yet his Subjects will believe him still living.

He parted from Lisbon in the Year 1578. in the Defign of re-establishing on his Throne Muley Mebener, Cheriff of Africk, whom his Unkle Muley Abdelemelech would be reave of his Kingdom; but in effect, to endeavour at the making himself Master of Barbary ..

His Army confifted of a Thousand Sail, well furnished with Provisions, few Soldiers, but a great many Nobility. This Prince was not above 25 Years of Age, when he formed this Enterprize; he was a strong bodied Man, of a moderate Stature, but well fet; his Hair was yellow, his Eyes great, and full of Fire; his Courage was not inferiour to his Strength; and he had no violent Inclination to Pleasures, which generally take Mens Minds off from from gallant Actions; he was temperate in all things; yet very forward in Undertakings, and always firm and unmoveable in greatest Dangers. He was a great Husband of his Revenues, employing them in his Subjects Defence, or to the Increase of his own Power. He was agreeable to all those that waited on him; and in the freest Conversations. he took care not to disoblige any one by sharp Raillery or diffaftful Sayings; and fo merciful was he. that he avoided all Occasions of condemning his Subjects to Death. He passionately loved War; but tis thought the Expedition into Africk, wherein he perished, came from Spanish Counsels.

D. Sebastian was kill'd in fighting with an Invincible Courage. The Moors fay, That his Enemies were so charmed with his Courage, that his Death drew Tears from their Eyes.

He was for faken by his own; mortally wounded near the right Eye-brow; and pierced with Darts in several Parts of his Body. He had no Wound in his Head, because he was armed; but he had a great one in his Arm, which feemed to come from a Musker-Bullet. 'Tis faid, he was buried in the Field, near a Moor, without any Ceremony, Prayers, or Company of his Relations, or Subjects. And this was the end of this Great King, who made all Africk at first to tremble.

Although the Moors rejoyced at the Death of fo puissant an Enemy; yethis Friends bewailed his Misfortune: The Kingdom of Portugal celebrated his Funeral in a Magnificent Manner; and, the King of Spain proffered several Thousand Crowns for his Body, to bury him in a manner answerable to the Dignity of his Birth and Merit; and that Four Kings have fince supplied his Throne; yet was there found a Mair bold enough to maintain in the Face of all Italy, that he was really D. Sebaftian King of Portugal. He presented himself at Venice in an Afsem bly fembly of the wifest Magistrates in Europe; he recited to them the Accidents of his Life; the Hiftory of his Predecessors; the Mistortunes he met with in Africk, whence he retired into Calabria. He did more: for he ftripp'd himfelf before this Illustrious Affembly; he shewed them Seventeen Marks on his Body, which were acknowledged with Aftonishment by the Portugueles themselves, to be at least very like those which they knew their Sovereign had on his Body; and he also shewed that he had one Hand greater than the other, and a Lip disproportionable in the same manner, which were the well known Marks in the Person of D. Sebastian. He talks of Ambassadors, which he sent to the Republick; he cites the Answers he had received; and all he favs is found conformable to the Truth: He answers withour Hesitation, to all that is obje-&ed; which makes several of the Senate believe him to be really the King, and others take him for a Witch.

But, in fine, this Prince right or wrong, is led away to Prison at the Solicitation of the Spanish Ambaffador; where having long lain, he is fet at Liberty under an obligation to leave the Venetian

Countries in three days time.

Some Portugueses, moved with Compassion, difguised him in a Dervis's Habit, and conducted him secretly to Florence, to transport him afterwards to Rome; but the great Duke of Tuscany caused him to be apprehended, and fent him to the Vice-Roy of Naples. He presented himself before him with his usual Confidence, and surprized all that faw him. and heard him fpeak ; and feeing the Vice-Roy uncovered, he faid unto him with great Affurance, and Gravity, Be covered, Count de Lemnos; which obliged this Minister to ask him, By what Authority be took on him this Boldness ? To which he answered, That bis Authority was born with him; and that he feigned not to know him; and yet he ought to remember that King Philip, bis Unkle, had fent him twice to him, and that the Sward which he then wore by his Side, was that which he then gave him.

The Sentence which the Vice-Roy gave of him, was, That he was an Impostor, who deserved to be fent to the Galleys, and should not long be from them; and wherein, 'tis faid, he died fome time after.

Yer the Portugueses have been perswaded, he was their real King; and do ftill continue of that Opinion, there being nothing which is able to make them change it. Some Persons in the World will have him to be a Magician; others, an Impostor; and the most Ignorant will have him to be a Devil, or really the King himfelf.

This is not the first Example of the Boldness of an Impostor; Rome saw hererofore a Man that had the Audaciousness to publish he was the real Pompey, who was kill'd in Egypt, by the Gruelty of the young Ptolomy. The Queen Artemifa found one Artemius, who had so great a Resemblance with Antiochus her Husband, whom the had caused to be murthered, that he was not known, when he put himself into the Bed of the dead King, pretending to be this Prince fick; he recommended Artemifa to his Subjects, and did feveral things in favour of this Princels. Under the Reign of Tiberius, was there not occasion to be surprized at the bold Anfwer which a Slave made to this Emperor, who questioning him, How he made himself Agrippa ? answered without Hesitation, In the same manner thou hast made thy felf Cafar.

The D. Sebastian I mentioned, has not been the only one in the World; there have been Two others; one of which departing out of the Isle of Terceres, who had great Resemblance with this Prince, went into Portugal, where he said he had miracu .

miraculously escaped from the Battel he lost in Africk; that he saved himself in Woods, and returned into his Kingdom, to give Peace to his People, and deliver them from the Tyranny of Strangers; but having been convicted of an Imposture, he was put to death.

Tis said, that another being come disguised in the Habit of a Pilgrim, to Madrid it self, and having had a long and secret Conference with King Phisip II. (by whom it is suspected he was known for this unhappy Prince,) was, by this King's Order, said to be possened in a Banquet given him by Antonio Peres.

I shall write several things to the Invincible Vizir, of which I deferred to give him Notice, because I would be certain of them, they being of Importance; and it would have been great Lightness in me, to have written them on the first Reports spread amongst the People.

Receive always with the same Goodness, the Marks I give thee of my. Obedience; send me thy Orders and Counsels, which I pray him that has created all things, may be good and profitable to the Empire of those precious Ones, which he has enlightned with his Truth; to the end they may arrive at the Eternal Glory and Pleasures promised as from his part, by his Holy Prophet; and I also pray him to preserve thy Life and Authority.

Paris, 24th of the 6th Moon, of the Year 1642.

LETTER XXIII.

To the venerable Musti, Prince of the Religion of the Turks.

IS not known whether it be the Recompence of a good or bad Action, which Cardinal Richlieu has fent with fo great Secrecy. Those that give an ill Interpretation of the best Things. fay, it is not to be supposed, there could be fent in a dark Night, a Mule laden with Gold, to an unknown Person; but this must denote something very extraordinary; and those who pretend to know more than others, are fometimes more ignorant than those who pretend to know nothing. For, who can penetrate into what fo crafty a Minister does, in the most retired Places of his Closet? His Actions are so mysterious, that when he looks towards the Eaft, his Defigns lye a direct contrary way. He deceives those who watch him most narrowly. I cannot inform thee then of any thing certain: The Matter is varioufly related; But thus I think it was: The Cardinal caused, some Days past, to be loaded on a Mule a great Sum of Money; he ordered him to whom he entrufted the Conduct of him, to go into a Wood, at such an Hour; relling him, he should find a Man of such a Scature, such a coloured Hair, and in such a Habir, who was to fay certain Words to him; whereupon he was to deliver the Mule with his Lading into his Custody. It is faid, this Person found the Party described, who would not receive the Present, it being not the full Sum agreed upon; That this being related to the Cardinal, he fent the same Person with the Supplement of what was wanting to the Sum promiled.

mised the Night following, where the unknown Perfon received the full Payment. If this Story be true, as it is affirm'd here to be, this is an odd kind of way of making Presents, or paying Debts.

But thou must be assured, this is not the first time the Cardinal has paid his Creditors in this fort.

I have been told for certain, that there being arriv'd at Paris a Stranger, ill clad, of small Stature, and without any Attendance; he made him be paid down immediately upon his Arrival, Six Hundred Thousand Crowns, without any body's knowing what became of so happy a Creditor, nor from what Merit proceeded so high a Recompence; tho some People affirm, that so great a Sum is fallen into the Costers of the Suedish General.

Receive charitably the Marks I give thee of my Obedience and Desire which I have of giving thee Satisfaction: and, entreat our Great Propher, that I may be worthy in the other World, to kis thy Feet, and be acknowledged to be of the Number of those for whom he has written his Holy Alcoran.

Paris, 25th of the 6th Moon, of the Tear 1642.

LETTER XXIV.

To Berber Mustapha, Aga at Constantinople.

I Cannot tell whether thou hast Knowledge of the Use of Desiances, which are made amongst the Christians, when they be distatisfied or offended with one another; which they term Acts of Honour, or the Marks of a gallant Spirit.

OTIC

This Custom of Duels, is become so common in Italy, and especially in the Kingdom of Naples, that the greatest Affairs, as well as the smallest, are therein decided by the Sword; and the Gentry affirm this to be the best way of terminating their Disputes and Quarrels; which belonging only to them, cannot be referred, nor so well determined by the grave and cool proceedings of Courts of Fuffice.

This invention of deciding these Differences by Arms, either with the Sword or Piftol alone, in a close or open Field, naked in their Shirts, fo that one has no Treachery to fear, is a Way of drawing Satisfaction for the Injuries received, found out by Men of great Courage, who more efteem their Honour than their Lives. The offended Person sends a Challenge to him from whom he has received the Injury; this note of Defiance, is expres'd in choice and elegant Words, which invice and prefs the Offender to fight, in such a Place, on Horseback or on Foot, cloathed or in their Shirts, fingle or attended by an equal Number of Friends, which they call Seconds, with Sword and Dagger, or Sword alone, or Piftol. If the Challenge be received, he is civilly treated who brings it, and, it may be, has rich Presents given him. But before they fight, the Enemies embrace, as if they were reconciled; and then in an Inftant, following the Inclinations of their Harred and Revenge, they wound one another, they spill each others Blood, and oftenrimes theis Souls go out furious, through the Wounds they have made,

Those that have the Honour of dying in these Combats, do oft refuse their Lives, which a generous Enemy would give them, believing they cannot live without Shame, should they receive them from an Enemy.

But, the Roman Church, as a note of the Horror the conceives at these Combats, shuts Heaven's Doors against the Souls of those who leave this Life without doing Penance, denying Burial to those who die in the Field of Battle; or, yield them only that, which is granted in some Parts of the East Indies to certain Women, who prositute themselves, whose Corps are thrown as a Prey to the Birds of the Field; and other Animals, who live on Carrion.

It is not only in Italy People kill one another in fingle Combats; 'tis the same in France, amongst the Nobility, who manage these Combats in a different Sort. The best Friends tear one another on the smallest Occasion, and they prepare for a Duel in such a manner, as will appear to thee without doubt ridiculous.

These Enemies Sup together the Night before the Combat, and often lie together in the same Bed. The Friends, which serve as Seconds, do the same; and when they are come to the Place where they be to fight, a Friend is sorted by the Maxims of Honour, to cut his own Throat with the Man's he perhaps most loves. Nothing happens more frequently in Paris, than these kind of Combats; and they produce several Adventures, of which I would give thee an Account, had I not a particular Story to tell the on this Subject. It is of a Challenge of a Spanish Prince, sent to a King, whose Crown could not exempt him from a Letter of Desiance.

Thou hast, without doubt, heard of what has hapned in Lisbon, where D. John de Braganza has been elected and proclaimed King of Portugal, as the true Heir of the Royal Race. Thou knowest also, he drove the Spaniards out of his Kingdom. The Duke of Medina Sidonia, a Grandee of Spain, and this new King's Brother in-law could not hinder himself from being suspected, of having underhand affisted this Prince to ascend the Throne; whether it be true, or an Artifice of his Enemies, God only knows: But however, it's certain, that the Count Duke d'Olivarez, the King of Spain's chief Minister, sent an Order to him, to appear at Court, to justifie himself from this Suspicion; he thought to clear himself perfectly from the Jeasousies of the Catholick King, by sending a Challenge to D. John of Braganza, to oblige him to sight with him; which Letter of Desiance was conceived in these Terms:

D.Gaspar Alonzo Peres Gusman the Good, Duke of the Town of Medina Sidonia, Mar puifs, Count, and Lord of the Town of St. Lucar of Barameda, Captain-General of the Ocean, and Gentleman of his Catholick Majesty's Chamber. I say, that John of Braganza, who was never but a Duke, calls himself King of Porrugal; that his Treason, known to all the World, is derestable, and in Abomination, for baving thrown a Stain on the Faithful House of Gulman, which has never failed in any Duty to her Sovereign; and for this reason I defie and challenge to a single Combat, Body to Body, with Seconds or without Seconds, this Don John, beretofore Duke of Braganza, leaving all this to bis Choice, as also the Arms or Weapons, and Place of Combat. Written near Valentia d'Alcantara. where I fall expel Fourscore Days News of him; and the last Twenty Days, I shall transport my self into the Place be shall appoint, accompanied, or alone, with such Arms as be shall prescribe.

Not only the Tyrant of Portugal shall be advertised of my Challenge, but all Europe, and the whole World. I pretend to make known in this Combat, the infamous Action of D. John, and in Case he does not accept of this Desiance, and fails in the Duty of one who is born a Gentleman, I desire this King, who is only a Phantasm, may perish in some sort or other: I promise to give my Town of St. Lucar, the Principal Seat of the Duke of Medina, to him that (hall kill him.

grue

In the mean time, I entreat my Lord, the King of Spain, to give me no Command in his Armies; but to grant, I may only serve him as a Voluntier, with a Thousand Horse, which I will maintain at my own Charge, till that serving him in this manner, I may help to recover the Kingdom of Portugal, and may bring along with me, and cast at His Majesty's Feet, the Duke of Braganza, if he will not fight with me in the Manner I proposed.

If thou shewest this Letter of Defiance to the Janizaries, that Militia which is terrible to all Nations, whom nothing can relift, when they execute the Grand Signior's Orders, they will tell thee what such a Challenge requires from Men of Courage, and explain to thee the Laws which People of Valour prescribe to themselves: For my part, who am ignorant of the Art of War, and the Maxims of fuch as make Profession of Arms, I shall not make any. Judgment hereupon; only take the Liberty to ask of thee, if the King of Portugal accepted the Combat and killed the Duke of Medina, which of the Two would have been declared Infamous? Whether there be any Certainty in the Decisions made by Arms; I am willing to think, Justice is on the Side of the Conqueror: But if, on the contrary, the Event of the Duel be uncertain, I take it to be a foolish thing for the Duke to expose himself, and thus Affront the King his Brother-in-Law. In fhort, the Duke's Prudence is not to be admired in this Occasion, and Braganga has had the Advantage on his Side, feeing he has shewed by his Conduct, that he is effectually King of Portugal.

I cannot but call these Christians Fools, who suffer such Customs among them, and yet adore a Messian, who is a God of Peace; and who call us Barbarians, when they are the only People that reach

teach us, and all other Nations, the Arts of fingle Combats, which is the most pernicious Custom that can be introduced amongst Men, who cut one anothers Throats oftentimes on slight Occasions, and become Prodigals of that Treasure with which the Immortal has intrusted them. Neither can I any more approve of Rings and Princes of the same Beliefs, making War with one another, as we see every Day amongst those who profess the Christian Religion; which yer, as far as I can find, scarcely permits any Wars, but such as are Desensive.

Pardon this tedious Letter, excuse my Conjectures in it, and honour me with thy Commands, which will be respected by me as so many Obligations.

Paris, 25th of the 6th Moon, of the Tear 1642.

she others by the

LETTER XXV.

Touthe Invincible Vizir Azem at Con-

The hear of nothing now a-days but Wars and Conspiracies, Seditions, Treasons, Infideliries, and Revolutions of State, and it is in the Kingdoms of Vice, wherein these Plagues of Heaven make these Disorders, I mean, in the Christians Countries. Insidelity reigns among the People of Catalonia, England, and Portugal; the Revolutions which have hapned in Barcellona have no Example; the Desiance of the Challenge of a Subject to a King, as is that of the Duke of Sidonia to the Ring of Portugal, as his Brother in-law, and his Enemy, does equally surprize all the World. We have reason to think, that God is angry with the Christians, when we consider Flanders, Germany, traly, and the Frontiers of Spain pestered with Wars, which they make one against another. The Animofity of most of the Great People of France against the Cardinal Favourite, induces them to lay Plots against his Life; whence we may fee, that Great Places are good for nothing, but to expose Men to Great Dangers. The last Conspiracy discovered against the Life of D. John IV. of Portugal, raised to the Throne by the Nobility, and betrayed hy the fame Nobility; not by the whole Body of them, but by a small Number of those who had taken an Oath of Fidelity to him as well as the reft, does plainly shew us, That there is nothing in this World whereon a Man may rely with any Certainty, and that here are many People who undertake just Actions, by the motions of an unjust and turbulent Spirit, which cannot suffer things to remain long in a quiet State, and aspire continually after Change, and to whom every Thing is good that is new. I thall relate to thee in few Words, this last Event. Thou hast been informed of the others, by the Letters I have written to thee, (Invincible General of the Ottoman Armies, and Steward of the Emperor's Laws, who is the Sovereign of Sovereigns) and by those which the Kaimakam and the Baffa's have received from me, who are obliged to give thee an Account of what ever comes to their Knowledge.

Several of the Great Ones in Portugal, and amongst them, some of the new King's Kindred, hatched a Conspiracy against him, and resolved to put the Kingdom again into the Spaniard's Hands, and entirely ruin the Family of Braganza. The principal Author of this Conspiracy, was D. Sebastian de Mattes, Archbishop of Bragne, the Count Duke d'Olivarez's Creature, to whom he owed his Fortune. The chief who conspired with this Seditious Priest, where the Marquis de Ville Reale; and the Count d'Armamar, these Two Men of great Birth and Credit, soon drew several others into their Party, some by the Hope of Recompences, and others through Weariness of obeying their new Sovereign, or weary with the new Form of State, which they thought might change to their Advantage. They long held a secret Intelligence with the Catbolick King's Council, who promised them all possible Assistance for the Execution of their Design, and after that infinite Recompences.

This Conspiracy was to produce a dreadful Tragedy, wherein all the Blood of the Royal House and Family of Braganza, was to be spilt. The King was to be the first Victim, with his Children and the Queen his Wife. D. Duart also was to be put to Death, who was kept close Prisoner in the Castle of Milain. A Domeffick, affectioned to his Mafter, and who was attentive to what past, delivered the King and Family of Braganza out of this Danger. He was ordinarily employed in secret Intrigues, and made frequent Courles into Spain to discover the Defigns of the Court of Madrid. He met by chance in an Inn, a Man who feemed of a mean Condition born in the Kingdom of Bohemia, with whom having entered into a ftric Friendship, as it happens usually amongst Travellers, he came to discover he was often dispatched by the Catholick King's Principal Minister, on Affairs of great Weight; and that he expected in a short Time to raise his Fortune to a confiderable Pitch, being entrusted with Packets of Letters containing Things of the highest Importance to the State. The crafty Portuguese foon discerning he might get out Secrets of great Concernment from this imprudent Man, for the good of his Mafter, resolved to kill him in a defart Place, where they were to pass; which he did, having first made him drunk with ftrong Wine. As foon as he had done

done his Work, he stript him, and found Letters, and Instructions to the Conspirators, which he speedily carried to D. John, who thereby discovered the whole Conspiracy.

Others fay, that D. Alphonfo of Portugal, Count de Vermiffa (having been folicited by the Archbilhop of Brague, who thought he could eafily bring him. into the Confpiracy, being discontented at the King, for taking away from him a great Office) went to his Sovereign, and freely discovered to him the Confpiracy which had been made, to deprive him both of his Crown and Life: And, 'ris added, That this count appeared frace one of the horrest of the Accomplices, till the very inflant wherein they were to execute their Project; at which time they were apprehended, and punished as they deserved.

Others fay, the Duke of Medina Sidonia, the King's Brother-in-law, who appeared to the Accomplices to be of the Plot, gave notice of it to the King his Brother. In fine, the Conspirators were executed in feveral Places after different Manners, where the People affembled, detefting their Crime, thewing great farisfaction in their Deaths, and bleft Heaven for preferving their Sovereign.

They were apprehended one Day, wherein the King declared he would appear in Publick; and all the Nobility being met, he caused the Guilty to be call'd one after another, who were all made Prisoners without any Disturbance. In the mean time. as many Troops as were near Lisban were in Arms; and the People alfo took Arms to defend their Prince, if need required. The Inquisitor General was treated as Guiley, for knowing of the Con-fpiracy, and not discovering it. The Great Treaswer Lawrence Fides, who kept the Keys of the first Court of the Palace, was to enter in the Night with an hundred men well Armed, and begin the Tragedy. The Naval Army which rode at Anchor in the Fors in with thought inche from as he mad of Beleem, was to be burnt; and there were them in each Veffel, who were to fet them on fire. The Four Corners of the City were also to be fired; to the end, that the People, the Soldiers, and Gnards of the Palace being busied in putting it out, nothing might hinder the Execution of their Design; and the good Arch-Bishop was in the mean time to appear in Publick, bearing about in his Hand what they call the Holy Sacrament; crying with a loud Voice, Let the Law of Jesus stourish, and that of Moses die, and come to an end.

The Marquis de Ville Reale, and the Duke de Camine his Son, near of Kin to the King, have loft their Heads on a Scaffold, with the Count d' Armamar, and D. Augustin Manuel; and the People beheld their Death without any Compassion, only shewed some Regret at the Loss of the young Duke of Camine, who passing before the Body of his Father all bloody, threw himself on the Ground to kiss his Feet; asking him a Thousand Times Pardon. tho' he was the Author of this Misfortune. There were Others, who suffered a more Ignominious Death; who were not only Hang'd, but Quartered, and those Parts of their Bodies set up in several Places for an Example, and to put the People in Mind, that fuch Attempts seldom escape unpunished.

As to the Arch Bishop of Brague, and other Ecclefiasticks his Accomplices, they are kept with great Care in Prisons, in Expectation of Commissioners from Rome, without which Prelate's Consent, they can do nothing farther to them. The King were Mourning Four Hours for the Marquis de Ville Reale, and the Duke de Camine his Son; according to the Custom of the Christians, who are wont to Apparel themselves in Black for the Death of their Kindred, to denote the Sorrow they conceive at their Loss; and this Ceremony is term'd Mourning,

which

Vol. I

which sometimes lasts a whole Year. I will write to thee the Particulars of what may happen in the War which is now carrying on between the Spaniards and Portugueses, who perceive already on the Frontiers Castilian Troops; and I shall not be wanting in any thing which may mark my Zeal and Exactness.

An happy Slave will Mahmut think himself, if he can acceptably serve the Invincible Vizir, by whom the Great Emperor of the Faithful discovers his Will to all the People of the Universe, whom God has created to obey him.

Inched forte flege rature Los of the young Deteof Carries, who is sing before the hody of the legon rall. Moder, there whind if on the Carand to his had been a fing him a Those and Times Parcon.

were O'llest, who hillered a none lesonini is Foodly who whe perophyllase'd, but Chartered, the lande turn of their Bodes for up in leveral Plant for so becauping and to put the Loyde in the life to receive A cele son on full

The End of the First Volume.

de la L'es C. . con le con de la contra del contra de la contra del la contra

Collect of electricians, who becomes it is so to be described to black to the Double of the particles Similated to describe the Sky over the real ways at the collection and the Corresponding throat was now

I LET'S, at his and Pallet of Comments

